DEAR ANN LANDERS: Since you are one of the nation's leading anti-cigarette hooks I direct this question to you.

Recently the major tobacco companies decided they had been kicked around long enough. In self-defence they embarked on a campaign to fight the anti-cigarette people with scientific facts. The most impressive of these facts is as follows: research and medical investigators have been unable to produce one single case of lung cancer in rats even though the rats were exposed to excessive amounts of cigarette smoke for an extended period of time.

ANN LANDERS

Surely you have read of these experiments and have drawn some conclusions. What are they, Ann Landers? — NEED THE WEED.

DEAR NEED: Yes, I have read of the experiments and my conclusion is as follows: it is apparently safe for rats to smoke. I would not give the same advice to people, however. Scientific research on humans has produced irrefutable evidence that cigarette smoking is a substantial hazard to health and the dangers increase with both the number of cigarettes smoked each day and the youthfulness when smoking started. Cigarette smoking is unquestionable a factor in the increase due to heart disease, emphysema and lung cancer over the past 35 years.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: If you think I need a bead doctor say so and I'll find one. The way things are going, I'll be needing one sooner or later.

My husband and I raised six children. They were two years apart and I didn't have a cleaning woman or a laundress or the electrical appliances that the girls have today. Our children grew up to be well behaves and respectful of people and property. It's a different story with my grandchildren. When they come to my house they wreck everything in sight. They scratch the furniture, break by knick-knacks, tear the flowers out of the pots and carry food all over the house. My daughter-in-law says, "Kids will be kids." My husband says, "Leave them alone or they won't like you." My son says, "Don't be so crabby. They are no worse than anybody else's kids."

My grandchildren are six, four and two years of age. Is it true that all kids are like this today? If you say so, I'll believe it. — MIXED UP.

DEAR MIXED: No, it is not true. I happen to have three grandchildren the same ages of yours and they do not eat all over my house nor do they tear up my plants and destroy my furniture. Their mother wouldn't allow it.

Parents do their kids no favor when they let them run wild. Children need to have limits set. It gives them a feeling of security. I feel sorry for youngsters who can do as they please. They feel, deep down, that nobody loves them enough to insist that they behave themselves. Discipline is a special kind of love. Kids know it and want it.

DICTIONARY COURTSHIP — Mrs. Edgar Benson, wife of the federal finance minister, was courted with the aid of an English-Dutch dictionary. Mrs. Benson, a native of Nijmegen, Holland, met her husband when several Canadian servicemen were invited into her family's home near the end of the Second World War. She says she lived in Canada for some years before her English became fluent. (CP Photo)

Courtship Conducted With Help of Dictionary

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Benson conducted their courtship with the help of a dictionary.

Mr. Benson, now the federal finance minister, was then one of several Canadian servicemen invited by his future wife's family to enjoy the hospitality of their home. His wife was then Marie-Louise Van Laer, a native of Nijmegen, Holland. She knew some English, learned in school, but says she did not become fluent until after she had married her soldier and lived in Canada for some time.

Nijmegen and its people had been through a bad time. As the Germans retreated in the face of the Allied advance, Mrs. Benson says they burned buildings in many parts of the city.

"We were evacuated from our house to the outskirts. I remember how we piled what baggage we could on bicycles and pushed them through the city.

"My mother was very brave and walked steadily along in a straight line but I was terrified. The shells were flying overhead and armored vehicles and other transports were racing through the streets."

Mrs. Benson is called Myloa, a nickname given her by her late mother.

"Marie-Louise was so long that by the time my mother finished saying it I was gone, so she shortened it to Myloa."

The Bensons and two of their children live in a ranch-style house on the outskirts of Kingston. Mrs. Benson's Dutch background is reflected in the rug tapestries that cover tables and serve as wall hangings and in her love of flowers and plants that brighten her home indoors and out.

The two oldest Benson children, Robert, 23, and Paul, 19, were married in 1968. Robert now has a daughter, Shelley. Still at home are Peter, 16, and Nancy, 9.

Mrs. Benson has been active in auxiliary work in Kingston, with the choir guild of St. George's Anglican Cathedral, and with a Jesuit high school that the older sons attended.

She says her husband is home from Ottawa most weekends and she tries to go with him if he plans a trip that will keep him away for a long time.

She has worked actively in his campaigns since he first entered politics in 1962, and says it was a great effort at first.

"Ben and I were both shy when we first started, but we soon had to get over that. The shyness wears off after a while."

She says she believes more women should be more active in public life.

"I am in favor of more women as members of Parliament and in many other positions of leadership. Why not? Their brains are as good as those of men and sometimes even better."

UCW Plans Study Program for '70

At the December general meeting of all units of the UCW at Bridge St. United Church held on Tuesday afternoon Mrs. Harry Harrison of Plainfield displayed and discussed the literature for study in 1970.

There is much free literature available which is not used, she stated. A telephone call to her, as literature secretary of this presbyterial, may help with resources for worship or stewardship or the "adult pack" of information. The theme is "Reconciliation for a Broken World". She told many amusing and relevant anecdotes gleaned from this literature. The title of the special unit study book is 'Choice and Change.'

Mrs. Harrison concluded with a seasonal reading.

Mrs. Harrison was introduced by Mrs. Wanda Sine and thanked by Mrs. James Reymolds.

Mrs. J. Thompson of Spring brook, in charge of audio-visual aids, told of the resources and tools available in that filed.

Miss Grace Kenny, program chairman for the past two years, expressed appreciation to both speakers and thanked all who had helped during her term of office.

Mrs. Riedel sang an old French carol and Mrs. Ken Ilford led in more carol singing.

The devotional service was taken by Mrs. E. H. Martyn and several assistants.

The president, Mrs. J. S. Loynes conducted the business meeting. This included the treasurer's report of the recent luncheon and bazaar, the proposed slate of new officers and announcements concerning events in January.

A social cup of tea was served at the close.

Sweet and Sour Lamb

By MARY MOORE

You can use your electric frypan to advantage in preparing this new sweet and sour lamb dish. At our place it turned out to be a smash hit for a Sunday guest dinner for five people.

SWEET and SOUR LAMB
(Serves 5)

2½ lb. leg fresh frozen lamb (cut up—see below)
⅓ cup flour
1 tsp. salt
1 tbsp. butter
1 cup drained pineapple cubes (one 10-oz. can)
2 to 4 tbsps. vinegar (I used cider)
2 tbsps. brown sugar
½ cup water
1 large tomato (canned or fresh) cut up (optional)
½ green pepper cut up (optional)

Sharpen your best knife and cut the meat from the bone of the leg of lamb. (Mine cost $1.52.) Cut it into 1½" cubes discarding all excess fat and cartilage. I had nearly three cups really packed. Spread out on cutting board and sprinkle with meat tenderizer. Let it stand for 1 hr. then turn it over and sprinkle other sides letting it stand again for 1 hr.

Dredge on all sides in the flour mixed with salt. Any flour that does not cling can be discarded.

Heat butter in frypan, add lamb cubes and sear until deep gold — about 15 min., stirring frequently. Add the pineapple cubes, vinegar, brown sugar and water and stir well until boiling. (NOTE: The flour in which the meat was dredged sufficiently thickens this.) Cover and simmer 1 hr. During last 5 min. add tomato and green pepper if used. Serve in centre of preheated platter surrounded with fluffy boiled rice cooked by adding 2½ cups boiling water to 1 cup raw long grain rice and 1 tsp. salt in heavy pot. Bring to boil covered. Turn off heat. Let stand 10 min. Turn on heat as low as possible and cook 20 min. longer. Result: beautifully distinct tender grains of rice.

I hope and think you will like and clip this new sweet and sour lamb dish.

Coloured shirts wider ties- Business mergers!

Today, coloured shirts and wider ties don't make fashion leaders. They are the accepted mode of dress for business men. Plain and striped shirts, by Arrow and Forsyth in deep tones of blue, burgundy, olive, brown and muted gold, give new life to last year's suit. Wider ties, from Dover's, are essential for men who want to stay with the times; and that probably includes most of the men on your gift list. Give them a shirt and tie they can wear with confidence, from Dover's. And you're welcome to charge it.

Former Ballet Dancer Now Turns to Acting

FEELS SHE'S LUCKY — Diane Nyland, a dancer and actress, now finds herself choreographing a production of How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying, at the London, Ont., Little Theatre. At 17 she was dancing with the National Ballet Company. She spent four seasons with the Charlottetown Festival and last year played the deaf mute Belinda in the Festival's acclaimed Johnny Belinda. (CP Photo)

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Every girl waits for the phone to ring, but Diane Nyland wanted it to ring so much that she was willing to go hungry. As an aspiring actress, she knew that while she was working in a store, the phone at home could be ringing with offers.

Choreographer for the London Little Theatre's production of How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying, Diane feels she has been lucky in business which is not noted for employment security.

"I was always in a situation, or in a production where someone had seen a show I was in, and offers came from that," she says.

But a few years ago, in an eight-month period, Diane worked only 11 days. She watches her money carefully because of the insecurity and the double expenses—she has to pay her own hotel bills while on the road as well as the rent on her Toronto apartment which she hardly uses. Last year she lived in Toronto a total of 11 weeks, and three weeks was the longest period.

"You have to live in Toronto in order to get work—but rarely can you work there," she says.

The 25-year-old actress-dancer started studying ballet when she was five, and, at 17, joined the National Ballet. She left the company because of a back injury and a desire for variety.

She toured with Spring Thaw in 1967 and 1968, and spent a season at the Vancouver Playhouse where she tackled her first acting roles.

"I was absolutely awful," she says. "I didn't know what I was doing."

Diane appeared in American summer-stock productions of Fiorello, The Unsinkable Molly Brown and Carousel and in the Rainbow Stage production of Finian's Rainbow which moved on to the Royal Alex in Toronto.

Starting in 1964, she spent four seasons with the Charlottetown Festival playing Josie Pye in the musical Anne of Green Gables. This year she appeared in the acclaimed Johnny Belinda. She describes her role as the deaf-mute Belinda as her most rewarding part to date and artistic experience.

"It taught me so much," she says. "Once your idle pity stops, you learn just how beautifully they (deaf-mutes) cope in a world even I have difficulty coping with."

Playing a deaf-mute for 2½ hours was constraining. She realized she was talking constantly to her friends after her enforced silence. Whenever music was playing, she had to repress all her dancer's instincts and walk against it.

As choreographer for How to Succeed, her toughest job was working on a number performed by dancers playing the inexperienced secretaries of a television show. The dancing must be polished but still look like a number performed by amateurs.

Diane now is waiting to see if a pilot film she taped in Toronto will be approved by the CBC. If the show is approved—and it may not be until April—it could mean a three-year contract. The show is based on an old radio program, Easy Aces, written by Goodman Ace and recently adapted for TV.

Guild Elects Officers at Christmas Meeting

A brightly lit tree and a glowing open fire welcomed the members of Albert College Guild to the informality of the Christmas meeting.

In the brief business session the chairman of the nominating committee, Mrs. C. W. Smith, presented the slate of officers for the coming year. Mrs. Earl Fleming is the president elect; corresponding secretary, Miss Daisy Young was provided with the names of members who, because of illness, could not be present. They will be remembered with Christmas greeting cards.

The program was convened by Mrs. C. E. Scott. She introduced Mrs. T. Townsend who read the story of the birth of Jesus. The speaker reminded the members that while the birth was an historic event the Savior can be born again today in the hearts of men. Mrs. E. Hickey expressed the appreciation of the members to Mrs. Townsend.

To conclude the program, Mrs. Taylor Franklin at the piano led the singing of carols.

Mrs. F. Davidson and Mrs. H. B. Feiterly presided at the tea table with its attractive Christmas centrepiece. A Christmas party followed.

Consultant Gives Vital Info

By NANCY BARRIAGE
Women's Reporter

Miss Stephanie Blackstone, a consultant for the Food and Drug Directorate, Department of National Health and Welfare of Ontario, is visiting in Belleville. The specific purpose of her visit is to speak to high school students about the role of the Food and Drug Directorate and Quackery.

Miss Blackstone attended the University of Toronto majoring in household science, worked for an insurance company for a year and then decided to come to Belleville where she taught Home Economics at BCI for a year. After teaching for five years she decided that she would like a change so she applied for her present job and was accepted. Miss Blackstone is one of five regional consultants in all of Canada.

The purpose of the Food and Drug Consumer Division or Educational Services as it is now called, is to inform and explain to Canadians the food and drug laws enacted to protect, benefit and help them at home and in the market place, and, to assist educators in consumer and health education topics related to health hazards and fraud in food, drugs and cosmetics." Action is centred in the offices of the five regional consultants in Halifax, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver. Belleville has one of the nine district offices.

Miss Blackstone stated that it is her job primarily to make the public aware of FDD protective measures by working with teachers, community workers, public health nurses and resource groups. Any question that a consumer might have should be directed to the district office in the Federal Building.

The headquarters office in Ottawa establishes guidelines and prepares educational material such as booklets, visual aids and displays. The booklets are free and concern such topics as "Drugs Handle with Care" and "Why Get Ill From Foods".

Miss Blackstone also explained the history behind Canada's Food and Drugs legislation which is conceded by experts "to be among the best in the world". In January, 1875 Canada's first law to prevent adulteration of food, drink and drugs came into effect.

In 1875 more than 41 per cent of foods sampled were adulterated. However, the figure today is well under ten per cent — possibly two to five per cent. The Food and Drug Directorate sets standards for certain foods such as cheese, butter, meat preparations and many more. The standards indicate what ingredients must be used and in what proportions. Standards are set for certain drugs also.

Miss Blackstone noted that food inspectors must have at last a B.Sc. in food and they have to know all the formulas for all the raw materials. Drug inspectors are usually pharmacists. In Canada today there are approximately 200 drug inspectors and only two of them are women.

It is very important that the consumer read labels which are all inspected, she said. Patent medicines which do not disclose the ingredients are all reviewed before going on the market as well. Imported products have to meet the F.D.D. regulations before they can be sold to the public. Inspectors go to customs every day to take samples.

Above all Miss Blackstone pointed out that if the consumer hopes to be adequately protected he must be willing to help by reporting any violations which he discovers.

Combined Groups Hold Supper

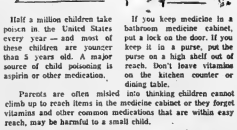
DESERONTO — Mrs. Dorothy McCullough and her sister, Miss Gladys Pearsall, were again hostesses for the December meeting of the combined Ladies' Aid and Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church of the Redeemer. The formal meeting was brief, and then it was transformed into a Christmas party.

Officers for 1970 were elected: past - president, Miss Pearsall, president is Mrs. Kay Hood, and vice - president, Mrs. Blake Moore. Secretary is Mrs. Charles Griffiths, and, for the 13th year in succession, Mrs. Albert Walker is the treasurer. Chairman of the Friendship and Service committee is Mrs. Donald MacMillan.



Mrs. Griffiths read the old, old story of the Nativity, and then everyone enjoyed singing some of the beloved Christmas carols.

Afterwards came the party, with an exchange of gifts. Then came the crowning event of the evening, the turkey dinner, served buffet style, provided by the two sisters.

In moving a sincere vote of thanks to the hostesses, Mrs. Walker echoed the wishes of all other guests.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Half a million children take poison in the United States every year — and most of these children are younger than 5 years old. A major source of child poisoning is aspirin or other medication.

Parents are often misled into thinking children cannot climb up to reach items in the medicine cabinet or they forget vitamins and other common medications that are within easy reach, may be harmful to a small child.

If you keep medicine in a bathroom medicine cabinet, put a lock on the door. If you keep it in a purse, put the purse on a high shelf out of reach. Don't leave vitamins on the kitchen counter or dining table.

BC Motorists in 1970 Will Have New-style Car Insurance

VICTORIA (CP) — British Columbia motorists will drive into 1970 with a new kind of automobile insurance and the complicated changeover will be eased initially by increased coverage without higher costs.

But when policies taken out in 1969 expire, motorists will be paying an average of $13 to $21.50 more.

The changeover is the result of legislation, passed earlier this year by the B.C. legislature, that comes into force Jan. 1.

The main effect of the legislative amendments is to graft accident insurance provisions on to auto insurance policies.

In a recent interview, E. T. Cantell, B.C.'s superintendent of insurance, said that although the accident benefits will be among the most liberal in North America, they do not go far toward far-reaching recommendations made by a provincial royal commission on auto insurance.

The report of the commission, under Mr. Justice R. A. B. Wootton of the B. C. Supreme Court, came out in October 1968 after 2½ years of study.

The commission recommended, among other things, the end of property and personal insurance based on fault, or in legal jargon, the tort concept as it applies to auto insurance coverage.

"The provisions we are incorporating certainly embrace the 'no fault' concept," said Mr. Cantell, "but the tort concept remains."

He said that while bodily injury costs are payable immediately regardless of fault, under the new provisions the insurance company still has the right to go after the party or parties deemed through court action to be liable for whatever the insurance company pays out.

The legislation incorporates commission recommendations for compulsory coverage, with penalties for infraction.

Any driver not covered to the extent of at least $50,000 for third party property or injury liability after Jan. 1 will be liable to a minimum fine of $250, or a three-month jail term.

The 1970 policies issued in this province must also include accident benefits based on a scale which would, for example, result in an immediate cash payment of $7,000 and weekly payments of $70 for 104 weeks on the death of the head of a household containing a spouse, regardless of sex, and two dependents.

The head of a household is defined as the parent earning the greater income in the year preceding death.

The new insurance scheme is tied in with new Motor Vehicle Act regulations, already in effect in some centres but to be extended throughout the province Jan. 1.

Under regulations of the new act, minor moving infractions, such as running a red light, will be recorded under a point system on each driver's record. When a driver has been assessed 15 points, his licence will be suspended.

To regain his licence following the suspension period, the motorist will have to pay a $25 fine, with the funds collected to go into a provincial kitty to study the behavioral problems of drivers and highway safety programs.

Trains, Buses Will Have Woes Handling Rush Of Christmas Travellers If Planes Grounded

By CRAIG ASPINALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Rail and bus companies would find it difficult to handle the overflow of Christmas travellers should Canada's airlines be grounded Friday by a strike of air traffic controllers.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows that rail and bus facilities in most major cities already are reaching their limits in available reservations and equipment due to the normal seasonal rush.

The major airlines still are hoping the strike will be averted, and say that in the event of a strike services would continue using visual flight rules. However, keeping a schedule would depend on the weather.

No plans have been announced to bus passengers to United States border airports for United States flights, although tentative consideration has been given to such arrangements.

An Air Canada spokesman in Toronto said the company would try to make alternate arrangements with U.S. carriers if Canadian airports were closed, but added that "with the seasonal rush I don't think we would be too successful."

U.S. airlines flying into Canada would have the option of operating from U.S. border airports such as Seattle, Buffalo and Detroit. American Airlines, with 28 flights daily to and from Toronto, has announced plans to operate from Niagara Falls, N.Y., should a strike be called. United Airlines announced it would operate from Buffalo.

The Air Canada spokesman said overseas flights originating from the eastern U.S. are not likely to be affected. Traffic control normally provided by Gander, Nfld., could be provided by an overflight from New York and Britain or by stations in Iceland and the Azores.

A spokesman for CP Air in Vancouver said the company is studying the possibility of operating its Honolulu and South American flights from Seattle. Passengers would be bussed to Seattle from Vancouver where they would board CP Air planes.

Post office officials were not immediately available for comment, although a post office employee in Toronto noted that all mail for Western Canada originating from Europe and Eastern Canada moves by air.

Airline spokesmen in Vancouver say there would be little chance that aircraft could operate under visual flight rules on the weather-prone West Coast.

A Vancouver spokesman for Greyhound Bus Co. said: "We just couldn't provide special services to help out because everything we own will be on the road anyway for the Christmas rush."

CPR and CNR in Calgary said they already are heavily booked, and there would be little chance of them taking much of the overflow in the event of a strike.

A CNR spokesman in Montreal said most extra equipment already is reserved for use during the Christmas rush. CNR would expect to carry double the normal number of passengers on its main routes.

Meanwhile, train and bus companies and travel agencies across the country were receiving a rising number of calls from people trying to arrange alternate holiday transport in case of a strike.

In Toronto, the most worried people appeared to be those planning to go to Florida. Both CPR and Gray Coach Lines Ltd. have received hundreds of calls from people seeking reservations for south-bound transport.

Nixon Says Indian-run Aid Group Denied Funds

TORONTO (CP) — Liberal Leader Robert Nixon charged Monday that Amik, an Indian-run, non-profit organization assisting underprivileged Indian communities in Northern Ontario, is being forced to fire its staff because of a shortage of funds promised by the Ontario government.

Mr. Nixon attributed the "blunder" to John Yaremko, minister of social and family services, whose department administers a yearly $1,000,000 fund to aid Indian development projects.

Since 1967, when the fund was established, Ontario has spent only a token of it each year, but Mr. Yaremko said recently in an interview that he hopes to see the full $1,000,000 spent in 1969-70.

He told the legislature Monday the $6,000 grant requested from the fund by Amik is "in process." He said his department strongly approves of the non-profit Indian organization and is in frequent contact with its officers in Kenora.

Mr. Nixon said four Amik staff members, including two full-time organizers and field workers, were to be fired later Monday. If the grant is not received soon, Amik also plans to lay off its executive director, Rev. Robert Ferron.

Mr. Yaremko was criticized last spring when seven development officers of the Indian branch, including its director, Joseph Dufour, resigned complaining they could not get support for Indian development projects.

Since then, Mr. Yaremko has taken steps to cut away the red tape hampering the program — but his efforts came too late to prevent the crisis in the Amik association, which was founded in 1964 and provides permanent employment for 80 Indians and seasonal work to another 160.

Since the spring, Mr. Yaremko has begun meeting all feasible requests from Indian groups and so far, $263,000 of the $1,000,000 for 1969-70 has been spent on projects that range from housing grants to the Wabjitwin Corp. to provision of hydro-electric power for the Aroland community.

In September the minister also reconstituted the Indian community development branch, with Peter Szego, his former head of public relations, as director plus a staff of six community development officers—three of them Indians.

Mr. Szego says each grant must provide help for a soundly-based project, developed by the Indians themselves, that will benefit the community.

Many projects for which Indians have been unable to get grants in the past fell into this category, but he suggests, were rejected by the Ontario cabinet because they were not properly presented or explained.

Users of Drugs Copying Adults

OTTAWA (CP) — Legal and illegal drug taking and alcohol abuse are so widespread in adult society that the federal drug inquiry is said by informants to regard them as a chief reason for drug experimenting by the young.

The inquiry, headed by Gerald Le Dain, dean of Osgoode Hall law school, Toronto, is expected to say in a report to federal Health Minister John Munro that the problems of the young drug offender can only be successfully solved by curbing extensive use of drugs by adults.

Much stricter controls over prescribing drugs such as amphetamines, barbiturates and tranquilizers already are being discussed by federal officials in anticipation of a recommendation from the Le Dain inquiry.

PCs and NDP Block Selection of CYC Financial Controller

OTTAWA (CP) — State Secretary Gerard Pelletier's attempt to slap immediate financial control over the Company of Young Canadians ran into a Commons roadblock Monday.

Conservatives and NDP members rejected Mr. Pelletier's plea for quick approval of a government bill to appoint a financial controller for the CYC.

Under the bill, the company would not be allowed to spend any money or make any contract without the controller's approval.

Mr. Pelletier, opening the second reading debate on the bill, said the recent report on the CYC resulting from an investigation into its activities by the Commons broadcasting committee showed the need to impose an immediate control over the company.

He said the government would make more fundamental changes in the company known by the end of the week.

J. Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley) said the government should tell the Commons first what the next steps are.

Lincoln Alexander (PC—Hamilton South) added that a controllership must be authorized only until March 31, 1970, or the Conservatives would not go along with speedy passage of the bill.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) voiced his party's concern over the wide powers the controller would have. He moved an amendment that would limit the controller's term and powers.

The Commons returns to the debate today.

Because the government wants the bill approved at all Commons stages and by the Senate before Friday, it hopes the opposition will give unanimous consent needed to have the bill considered at the committee stage in the Commons itself.

Normally, the clause-by-clause committee stage is handled in a Commons standing committee.

Conservative House Leader Gerald W. Baldwin said his party would agree to this if the government agreed to place a time limit of March 31 next year on the controllership.

Stanley Knowles, the NDP house leader, said his party would agree to the House doing the committee work but added it would fight to have the powers of the controller curtailed.

Government House Leader Donald S. Macdonald indicated the government agreed to the March 31 deadline.

Million Britons Ask Death Penalty

LONDON (Reuters) — After an emotional first day of debate on whether hanging should be abolished permanently in Britain, the government Monday night successfully defended its tactics and timing on the issue.

Monday was the first of four days of debate on the controversial issue.

A petition signed by more than 1,000,000 persons favoring the death penalty for certain types of murder was carried into the House of Commons by attendants.

Intervention Urged

D. Fisher Says News Monopolies Pose Dangers

OTTAWA (CP) — Douglas Fisher, broadcaster, newspaper columnist and former member of Parliament, says the federal government should intervene to protect the Canadian public from dangers posed by concentrated ownership of news organizations and weaknesses in Canadian journalism.

In a submission prepared for presentation at 9 a.m. EST today to the special Senate committee on mass media, Mr. Fisher cites examples which he says show hazards and lapses in providing information to the public.

The federal government should help set up a national media council to accept and publicize grievances from citizens or groups against journals and broadcasting, he says.

It should also establish policy lines to set limits on concentration of ownership of newspapers and broadcasting.

Mr. Fisher, New Democratic Party MP for Port Arthur, Ont., between 1957 and 1965, includes among about a dozen recommendations a proposals that would:

—Set a guide for the proportion of profits that newspaper and broadcast owners should plow back into their news operations;

—Offer government subsidies for a limited time to new newspapers;

—Reduce postal charges for journals—in line with present government subsidization of broadcasting and transport;

—Establish a more open information policy in the government;

—Improve CBC news and public affairs, especially in provincial capitals where newspaper coverage tends to be weak.

Although Mr. Fisher prepared a 6,000-word submission and lists 38 other subjects he would be willing to talk about, he expresses doubts about the committee inquiry itself.

He says he is "critical and without much hope because the Senate is dealing here with a powerful, generally-rich establishment of owners and I—please forgive me—tend to identify you and your institution with this kind of establishment rather than with the ordinary people. . . .

Of newspapers, he says he believes that "Canada has a few excellent dailies, some good ones and some very bad ones."

"And the worst are in communities where they have little or no competition; indeed, where they often own or control other forms of the media."

Newspaper and broadcasting organizations, as businesses, often use reasons of business to excuse shortcomings in the role as an essential ingredient in a democracy, Mr. Fisher says.

Government should intervene, regulate, assist and subsidize newspapers and broadcasting enterprises whenever business motives diminish their role in democracy, he adds.

To fulfill the role, there should be diversity "and the profit motive must not override public responsibility."

Mr. Fisher says owners of groups of newspapers and broadcasting stations say such consolidation lead to economies.

"Are you asking and finding out whether such economies in the publishing field are finding their way back into the editorial side of the newspaper?"

Mr. Fisher suggests there is evidence in Canada of a conflict of interests among newspaper and broadcast owners who are also involved in other enterprises.

Inquiry Called At tack on Freedom

OTTAWA (CP) — Publisher Michael Wardell of the Fredericton Gleaner, one of the New Brunswick newspapers owned by industrialist K. C. Irving, says in a brief to the Senate committee on mass media that its inquiry is part of an attack on press freedom.

Mr. Wardell, who is appearing before the committee today, says in his brief that freedom of the press is freedom to own, edit, print, publish and sell a newspaper without interference or coercion from government.

"I regard as an attack on the freedom of the press this Senate inquiry coinciding with raids on the Daily Gleaner under the Combines Investigation Act accompanied by hostile and threatening speeches and the published letters of those concerned in promoting these investigations," the brief says.

"The experiences I have suffered in this connection constitute a degree of insult, harassment and attempted intimidation never before, I believe, applied to the free press of any country under democratic government."

Mr. Wardell did not elaborate on the issue. It was disclosed in the Commons earlier that federal investigators searched Gleaner premises for information on ownership and control.

Prison Official Denies Cells Have Gas Jets

OTTAWA (CP) — Penitentiaries Commissioner Allen J. MacLeod denied Monday that cells at a federal prison near Montreal are equipped with gas jets to quell excited prisoners.

However, he said that guards in some prisons carry cans of "tear gas, shall we say," as a defence against violent prisoners.

The contention that gas jets are installed in the ceilings of the special correctional unit at St. Vincent de Paul penitentiary was made by Robert J. Deslauriers, assistant research director for the Public Service Alliance of Canada, and backed up by a correctional officer.

They were part of a union team seeking better wages and working conditions for about 2,000 federal prison employees in dispute with treasury board, the federal bargaining agent, is before an arbitration tribunal headed by Mr. Justice Andre Montpetit of Montreal, a Quebec Superior Court judge.

His eyebrows rose somewhat as Mr. Deslauriers, reading a brief, said that guards at St. Vincent de Paul "are constantly bombarded by sudden deafening outbursts of yells and cries of men cel gling to cell bars screaming to high heaven about their desperate state, of others being gassed to semi-consciousness by the emission of gas through jets permanently installed in the wall or ceiling of the cells, of dealing with homosexuality."

Mr. Justice Montpetit interrupted to ask who had written this and Mr. Deslauriers said he had.

The vivid description was used to illustrate the need for shorter hours, a shorter working week and better pay for guards. The brief frequently mentioned the depressing and dangerous aspects of the work.

It said that since a rehabilitation program gave prisoners more freedom of movement in 1961, violent incidents in which guards have been injured, held hostage or killed have numbered in the hundreds.

Mr. Deslauriers said in an interview he visited the special correctional unit in 1967, before it was opened, and was shown the gas jets by a reluctant warden.

"He didn't want to show them to me," Mr. Deslauriers said. "I mentioned that's how you treat animals.

"Whether or not they use it, it's inhumane."

A guard, also helping present the union brief, said the jets have been used often since the prison opened. It is designed for hard-core prisoners who don't respond to incentives to rehabilitate in other institutions.

Mr. MacLeod said there is a special program "for troublemakers" at the special unit but the gas jets were news to him.

Negotiations between the guards and the government collapsed several weeks ago after the government put an offer of two per cent on the table. The guards said the government position also would remove some of the benefits they now enjoy.

At least 19 of the 26 points they raised for arbitration Monday were rejected by treasury board negotiators as non-negotiable. They were said to be beyond the terms of the Public Service Staff Relations Act for the most part.

The guards, who staff 31 federal institutions, have voted to hold an illegal strike if progress isn't made in arbitration.

They are asking an average 13.7-per-cent wage increase retroactive to Oct. 1, 1968, and an average 8.5 per cent retroactive to Oct. 1, 1969.

This would raise the maximum in the lowest grade to $7,812 from the current $6,133 and in the highest to $9,828 from $7,843.

Among the union demands rejected as non-negotiable by the treasury board bargainers:

—A $25-a-shift bonus for handling canine patrols so vicious the guards are often bitten.

—Access to personal files to counter mistakes or "slanderous" reports.

—$1,000 annual bonuses for work in maximum security prisons rather than the present $700.

—"Rehabilitation leave" at age 55 or after 25 years of service, 30 years at 50.

The brief said a man needs some time to get straightened out after 25 years of work in a federal prison.

Financing Bill Is Up In Senate

OTTAWA (CP) — A bill authorizing certain capital expenditures of Canadian National Railways and Air Canada in the 18 month period ending next June 30 comes before the Senate tonight for second reading.

In an Ottawa dispatch Thursday, Dec. 11, reporting Commons approval of the bill, The Canadian Press erroneously reported that it authorizes the two Crown companies to borrow $366,000,000 and that the CNR share was $201,000,000.

CNR borrowing under the measure is limited to $19,000,000 for construction of branch lines.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Both Her Parents Were Alcoholics

Double trouble. When both father and mother are alcoholics the child grows up reaping compound interest of despair and frustration. Here, in part, is a revealing letter which underlines one aspect of the alcohol problem:

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My mother and father are both alcoholics. Ever since I was small, there was beer, wine and whisky on the table. Now that I am a non-drinking adult with four children of my own, I realize the seriousness of the environment I grew up in.

Whenever I would visit, after I was married, they both would walk around in a stupor. My mother had a taxi-driver neighbor buy liquor and deliver it to the house. She would hide it from my father by putting it in an empty dog food box. On the other hand, my dad would hide his bottles under the front seat of the car.

They both drank together, morning, noon and night, but had to have their own private supply to tap. Didn't want the other to know how much drinking was really going on. On occasions when my father was admitted to a hospital "to detox" because his liver was sorry for him, would bring a bottle to the hospital.

I tried to help. Both denied they had a problem. I sought professional help. I called the A.A. I sought the advice of marriage counselors and a lawyer. I went to our family doctor. He admitted they were both alcoholics and nothing whatever could be done unless they admitted it and wanted help. In other words, the advice of these professional people was to stand by and let my parents destroy themselves!

My mother died about a year ago at 58 of cirrhosis of the liver. My dad completely fell apart. He drank more than before — if that was possible. He, too, now has cirrhosis of the liver, an enlarged heart and bad kidneys. He is mentally confused. His future is inevitable. He will drink himself to death like my mother did.

One day I will be called to identify a man found dead in the gutter, and it will be my father. Then you wonder I don't drink and pray my children won't! — Mrs. X.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am in my late teens and am 5-feet-7½-inches tall. I weigh 119 pounds. While I am tall my bone structure is not large. My mother insists I am too slender.

Some of my friends are too short and too fat. Their health is not better than mine. Please say something in your column to get my mother off my back, although she means well. Does one have to be fat to be healthy? — Miss P.

Comment: Usually it's the other way around: One has to be normal-weighted, or on the thinner side, to be healthy. But why guess? If your mother is concerned, you deserve an examination by a doctor.

If he finds everything OK, then you can go on being thin (until you fill out) and your mother will be less concerned. Meanwhile, be sure you do not skimp on food, and take a well-rounded diet.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I was 50 last month. I don't want to look like a teenager but oh how I would love to see those wrinkles and sags disappear. I can't afford a face-lift. I become depressed when I keep looking in the mirror. With all the brilliant scientists in the world, why can't someone come up with a miracle cream everyone can afford? Do you think "hormone creams" that are being advertised will help? — Mrs. M.

Comment: I doubt that hormone creams will help. Let's hope that scientists come up with something. Meanwhile, stop looking in the mirror so much. (Easier said than done!)

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: For quite some time I've had bleeding in my bowel movements. I don't feel any pain or discomfort. I had piles many years ago, but they have not bothered me since. Do you think I should see a doctor? What kind? — Miss L.

Comment: See a proctologist (rectal specialist). You will need a sigmoidoscopic, a barium enema and other X-rays and investigations. You may have polyps, other growths or ulcerations causing the bleeding.

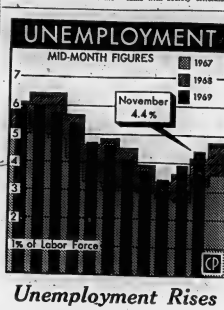
'Maybe City Should Do Own Dog-catching': Boyle

Belleville City Council yesterday renewed its contract with the Quinte Branch of the Ontario Humane Society for another year but it wants talks with society officials to iron out a few problems in connection with the dog-catching program.

The agreement is subject to a 90-day termination clause.



Alderman Douglas Boyle suggested that the agreement be reviewed to determine whether the city was getting value for the money paid to the society.

"Maybe we should do our own dog-catching," he suggested.

But Alderman Richard Ellis said this would be an expensive move for the city. He said it would cost the city $75,000 to set up its own dog pound.

Mayor J. Russell Scott said the service given by the Humane Society had not been entirely satisfactory, suggesting that enforcement of the city's bylaw was secondary to the $10 the society received for picking up a dog.

He said, however, there was no question that impounded animals were being properly looked after.

Unemployment Rises

Unemployment in Canada rose last month to 354,000 up 40,000 from October, and amounted to 4.4 per cent of the labor force in mid-November, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and manpower department, reported. It was the highest rate of unemployment since last winter. (CP Newsmap)

LONDON (CP-Reuters) — The richest and longest air race ever held starts Wednesday in a greeting 12,000-mile marathon from London to Sydney, Australia.

Eighty-one aircraft including a Canadian twin-jet Falcon from the Air Transport Command, 412 Squadron, based in Ottawa, will compete for £50,000 ($130,000) prize money.

The race also forms part of the celebrations commemorating the 200th anniversary of the discovery of Australia by captain James Cook.

Postal Workers Party

NAPANEE — Christmas parties are the order of the day, and recently it was the turn of the Post Office staff members and their wives, 20 in all. They had dinner at the Skyway Lounge in Deseronto.

There are nine permanent staff members in Napanee now, and one taken on for the Christmas season. The administrative staff, Postmaster Howard O'Connor and his assistant Keith Gourlie, have the help of seven clerks.

The postmaster states that the work is much easier now that the Post Office is in the new Federal Building. Work is speed up now, also, because they have space to utilize some of the time-saving equipment.

Rezoning Sought

Belleville and Suburban Planning Board will be asked to consider an application from Gouxabrue Ltd. for rezoning of their Bridge Street — Palmer Road property to allow construction of senior citizens' housing.

Council has already approved construction of an 80-unit senior citizens' apartment by Ontario Housing Corporation, and Gouxabrue proposes construction on the West Bridge Street site.

However, a change in zoning is required to permit construction.

Council referred the rezoning application to the planning board, board of parks management and the traffic and light committee.

Transformer Station Near Completion

TWEED — Hydro officials announced this week that the rebuilding of the Lodgeroom Transformer Station, just north of Tweed, is expected to be completed next week.

Electrical load growth in the Tweed district requires that larger transformers be installed to take care of the increased power demand.

In preparation for this, a temporary substation was installed and put into service during an early morning interruption on November 21, 1969.

Three new 2,000 KVA transformers are now in place, the new steel structure has been erected and the new circuits coming out of the newly constructed station have been installed.

It is proposed to make the final connections to the new transformers and remove the temporary substation during an interruption on December 18, from 2.30 a.m. to 5.00 a.m.

Dear Santa Claus

Hi! I hope you are not too busy on Christmas Eve for I would like a lot of books for Christmas. I do not care what the books are about.

Santa, are you for real? When I look in the encyclopedia under reindeer, I found out that reindeers can not fly and for heaven's sake, there is no such thing as a reindeer with a glowing red nose. How do you explain that? Another thing too! How do you get in the house when the chimneys are too small, windows locked, and a slippery roof. You can not break a window or otherwise you will be charged for breaking in.

Well, don't forget the books when you come flying (in a helicopter). O.K.

Your Sincerely
Steven Bradshaw

Dear Santa Claus

My Dad fell down 6 stories last October 1st. and is in hospital in Rochester N.Y. broke his hip, jaws, and wrist.

Dear Santa

Dear Santa Claus, I would like to visit the Christmas Wonderland because I would like to see you and your elves. I would like to see the Walt Disnea characters. I would like to win the contest because I would like to see Christmas Wonderland. My friend, Dianne McReavy is writing a letter to you about the Christmas Wonderland. The Christmas Wonderland sounds like a fun place, I hope you and your elves are feeling well all year around and I like to see you on Christmas eve. I hope your raindeer are well enough to take you to the other side of the world for the poor people. I hope the Christmas snowman does not come this Christmas. I would like to see your workshop for I can see all the toys your elves make.

So long for now. I will write to you soon again.

Sea Cadet Corps

No Lazy Landlubbers Need Apply Here, Mates

This Band Won't Peter Out

Five members of Belleville's Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps band tune up for a song. All, by coincidence, have the same first name. They are: Naval Cadet Peter Rogers, Ordinary Cadet Peter Vos, Leading Cadet Peter Rissl, Leading Cadet Peter Rollinson-Lorrimer, and Petty Officer Peter Fargey.

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

In a small building on South Front Street, there's a lot of good things happening for young men in Belleville.

On almost any night of the week can be found a number of youths participating in the various activities of the Royal Canadian Sea Cadet Corps, Quinte.

And it's all there for the young people of Belleville, cadet officials believe, who find or think there is nothing to do in this city but wander on Front Street.

"They're being trained to go out and be responsible citizens," said Lieutenant Kenneth Ross, one of the officers involved in the corps. "We treat this building exactly the way a ship is treated."

Lieut. Ross explained that he felt discipline blended into self-discipline and that in many cases the parents of the cadets found their children more well-behaved.

"They work together as a team to become an individual," he added. "We appreciate a person's individuality as long as it falls under the rules of society."

A number of Belleville young people who have joined the Sea Cadets have continued their military interest long past the point of their honorable discharge at the age of 19.

One youth joined the air force and two others joined the navy.

The sea cadets are coupled with the Navy League in Belleville with a difference in age separating the two groups. Members of the Navy League range from 11 to 13 years of age. Sea Cadets are from 13 to 19 years old.

Officers in both organizations are real naval officers and uniforms are supplied by the Department of National Defence. However, after that point the sea cadets become a community project receiving funds through the United Community Services.

The Navy League was begun in Belleville approximately 10 years ago and the present commanding officer is Lieut. Bob De Vries who has 21 young cadets in his command.

But what are the activities of the Royal Canadian Sea Cadets?

Adventure is probably the best term to describe the participation in an organization like the Quinte Corps.

Capt. Barry Bevin recalled to The Intelligencer some of the trips taken by the corps throughout the province and the country.

The boys spent three days at Presqu'ile after rowing for 20 miles to get there. There was a weekend at Big Island where it was a "complete fend for yourself." The youths had to do their own cooking, cleaning up and repairing as well as get there and get back.

The present 48 members of the Quinte corps take part in several courses given at sea cadet headquarters on almost every night of the week.

There are courses in drilling, seamanship, water safety, leadership, rope work, sailing and many other subjects. They also participate in shooting at the rifle range in the Belleville Armory.

"It doesn't work down here unless the cadets make it work," explained Capt. Bevin.

To enter the cadets, the youths are on six weeks tentative enrolment and then must pass an exam with at least 80 per cent.

But the sea cadets are taking on a new, involved role in community events. The color party and color guard of the Quinte corps can be seen at many suitable community affairs.

The local sea cadet 25-piece band is making a name for itself, participating in such events as the Santa Claus Parade.

And other projects are planned for the corps, projects like ice-boating to complement their own sailing course in summer. Travel is involved for corps members. For example two youths found themselves in British Columbia last summer and there are exchange cruises between the United States and Canada and exchanges between the United Kingdom and Canada are planned.

In the vein of community participation, the cadets will be carrying out their Christmas, more activity for an already active organization.

Hydro Flexes Plenty of Muscle To Handle Christmas Power Drain

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

Few people realize during the winter months and, primarily, during the Christmas season just what a massive system of machinery and manpower is involved in bringing them the electrical energy which powers the lights on Christmas trees or cooks the Christmas turkey or goose.

Few people are aware of the fact that generator unit operators in Ontario are the working force that enables a merry electrical Christmas for the general public.

The operator has to be on duty 24 hours a day, seven days a week, 365 days a year.

And just when the Yuletide season is at its apex in celebration, the Ontario Hydro Commission is working at maximum power with all resources.

"The Monday before Christmas used to be the peak; now it's after Christmas," explained H. T. Turley, operations engineer for the Eastern Region of the Ontario Hydro Commission here.

The scarcity of daylight, the dull weather, and the resulting increase in use of electrical appliances and electric Christmas decorations are the main reasons for the Yuletide peak in power usage.

After Christmas the quantity begins to drop — its lowest point is in July — and to begin rising again gradually.

July's slump in power consumption by the electrical customer is the result of vacations factory shutdowns and longer daylight hours. Of course, the increasing popularity of the air conditioner and other summer appliances is raising the low summer ebb.

At Christmas, all 82 generating units here are in operation. As demand decreases, so do the number of operation units. In spring and summer the units are overhauled in a direct proportion to the number not in use as power needs decrease.

"It's related to the demand of the customer," said John Woodcroft, operating superintendent. "The customers require their demand as the days get longer and we accommodate them on a daily and seasonal basis."

But winter provides problems for the Ontario Hydro in meeting the ever-increasing needs of their ever increasing customers.

"Ice freezes logs in dams," Mr. Woodcroft said. "Ice comes in and shuts down some generators."

Freezing rain is also one of the major power problems for the commission. Ice can form on conductors and break them down.

However, there have been many improvements in design and structure and the occasion of power failures is becoming less and less. There is also better relay protection. If one setup should break down another is willing to take over until repairs are made.

Areas pertaining to customer demand, the Ontario Hydro is gearing its expansion and power with the understanding that voltage is more critical.

There are many more appliances and computers as well as the critical necessity for power in factory processes.

And there will be more improvements in the reliability of power in the next five years.

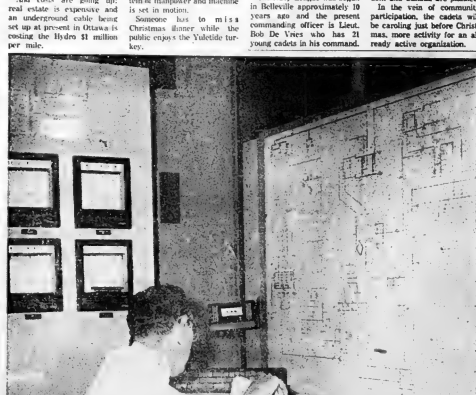
There is an eight to 10 per cent growth in power load every year in Ontario. Plants have to be bigger and bigger to carry this load.

The Ontario Hydro Commission generates and transmits 10,000,000 Kilowatts of power every year throughout the province and an eight per cent increase means 800,000 more Kilowatts next year.

As a result the commission plans on the average seven years ahead in meeting the public's need for power.

With that growth problems are already arising that will have to be taken care of in the future. Where to put transmission lines — that's one of the worries.

"We'll come to the point where underground cables will be used," Mr. Turley said.



And costs are going up; real estate is expensive and an underground cable being set up at present in Ottawa is costing the Hydro $1 million per mile.

An elaborate communications system from generator unit to generator unit is one of the sophisticated solutions to power problems. It's instant communication between units.

For example, if a hunter were to shoot out an insulator in the Arnprior area, most of the eastern region of the Hydro would be aware of it and four generators would be shut down before the hunter could put the rifle back on his shoulder.

When the light switch is turned on in winter and at Christmas an elaborate system of manpower and machine is set in motion.

Someone has to miss a Christmas dinner while the public enjoys the Yuletide turkey.

Communication and Co-ordination

Bud McMartin, an Ontario Hydro Commission employee, is part of the staff that co-ordinates and communicates with the whole of the Eastern Region of the Ontario Hydro here.

Woman Designs Police Headquarters

DESERONTO — Deseronto is perhaps the only community in Ontario whose police headquarters owe their design and construction to a woman. Councillor Mrs. Dorothy Mc Cullough has had that responsibility in Deseronto this year. As chairman of the property committee she transformed the lower storey of a run-down building which the town had acquired for non-payment of taxes, into roomy, modern new quarters for the three - man police force.

The renovation began last spring, and the interior was completed during late summer. However, the second coat of stucco was applied to the exterior only a few days ago and the work is now finished.

The police force now have three rooms in which to carry on their work. There are also two holding cells.

New quarters are electrically heated, and insulated. Everything is most attractive, showing the feminine touch. Walls are in walnut wallboard, the ceiling is of white tile, and the tile floor is in beige shades.

Police Chief David Saunders is delighted with the new quarters. "We have room here, and convenience and privacy," he stated. "When the town expands, there will be plenty of room here to take care of that expansion. We are very proud of our new offices, and I believe them to be among the best in this area," he added.

Trotting Has Come Long Way Since Horse-and-buggy Era

By DAVID MILLER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

What happened?

Time was when harness racing was something a red-necked farmer used to do on a hot Saturday afternoon. He'd hitch up old Nellie, point her down the road and look for a little action.

Occasionally, there'd be a county meeting when he'd get a chance to match his mare against the best in the area. It was sport this trotting and pacing, but the real action was with the runners, the GeeGees at the big thoroughbred tracks.

Not any more.

Harness racing has turned into a multi-million dollar industry in Canada, with more and more people turning out to see those funny little horses pulling the funny little carts.

With two weeks to go before the end of the 1969 season, the Canadian Trotting Association estimates total 1969 wagering will amount to $350,000,000.

This is well above the 1968 all-time high of $337,374,981 and a long way from the days when the farmers would trot their mares three miles for cigarette money.

The trotters and pacers attracted, more than 6,500,000 spectators during 1969 and they got their money's worth.

Major tracks—on the Prairies, The Jockey Club Ltd. circuit and Blue Bonnets in Montreal—offered glassed-in grandstands, five-course dinners, all-weather racing and the latest in betting equipment.

Windsor Raceway had the added filip of an all-weather, rubber track and the Maritimes, where harness racing was the thing to do 20 years ago, caught up with their own brand of turf clubs and liquor facilities.

The record handle was pumped through a record number of parl-mutuel machines despite cries of tight money, inflation and government calls for a "hold the line" on wages and prices.

"But besides the betting, the breed was gradually being improved. Canadians spent a record $803,500 at the Harrisburg, Pa., sales in November and the Canadian Standardbred Horse Society's annual selected yearling sales produced a record average of $3,196 a head.

The bargain of the year, however, continued to be a trotting mare called Fresh Yankee.

Bought for $500 as a yearling by a canny pair from Sydney, N.S.—Dick Logue and Duncan MacDonald—the filly grew to a mare and in 1969 established herself as one of the top trotters in the world.

Friday night, Dec. 12, at Hollywood Park in Inglewood, Calif., Fresh Yankee, now owned solely by MacDonald, trotted a mile and an eighth in 2:15 to win the $100,000 American Trotting Classic.

The victory gave the six-year-old total career earnings of $497,976, highest money winning Canadian-owned harness horse in history.

Armbro Flight, now retired, previously held the mark of $453,602 for Ted, Elgin and Charles Armstrong of Brampton, Ont.

Fresh Yankee's feat also pushed her near the Canadian record winnings for a horse. It is held by the thoroughbred Northern Dancer, winner of the 1964 Kentucky Derby, with $580,898 in the bank for industrialist E. P. Taylor.

Fresh Yankee's feats in 1969 are another Maritime success story. She is trained and driven by Joe O'Brien of Alberteb, P.E.I., and if she remains sound next year, the mare could top the retired Northern Dancer's record.

Then Cheve was Fireside Brandy, a yearling trotter owned by LeRoy Revington of Lucan, Ont., who set a world record of 2:21 1-5 for a half-mile track.

Super Wave, owned by Dr. George Boyce of London, Ont., banked more than $115,000 for the year, second highest Canadian three-year-old money winner in history.

Then there was Fireside Brandy, a yearling trotter owned by LeRoy Revington of Lucan, Ont., who set a world record of 2:21 1-5 for a half-mile track.

'Iron-man' Wilson New Kings' Coach

By CHUCK SVOBODA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Hal Laycoe predicted at the start of the current National Hockey League season that the tough schedule facing Los Angeles Kings at the beginning "should be to our advantage."

"Nine of the first 14 games are against Eastern Division teams," the coach said.

"We also have 18 back-to-back situations, most of them on the road. Our big, young players should take well to a schedule such as ours."

But Monday, Laycoe was no longer coach and he was blaming the tough early schedule for having contributed to the Kings' record of five wins, 18 losses and one tie in 24 games, worth last place in the West Division.

The Kings revised the record to read 5-18-2 Monday night when they earned a 4-4 tie with Minnesota North Stars in the only scheduled game.

Johnny Wilson was behind the players bench after accepting the coaching job from Laycoe, who was named director of player personnel for the Kings.

Wilson, 40, a native of Kincardine, Ont., was brought up from the Kings' Springfield farm club in the American Hockey League, where he had coached the minor league team to a second-place position in the Eastern Division this season.

"There is so much to be done," Wilson said, asking that a news conference not be held to announce his appointment.

"I just want to get together with the players and I don't want to be thinking about anything except hockey," said the former NHL left winger.

"The only promise I'll make to Los Angeles fans is that, from now on, the Kings will start hitting and checking like they never have before, and when they do, they'll start scoring and we'll win games."

Wilson played 520 consecutive games with Detroit Red Wings, Chicago Black Hawks, Toronto Maple Leafs and New York Rangers starting with the last 20 games of the 1951-52 season and continuing through the next seven seasons.

HAL LAYCOE
Firing 'Surprise'

He was coach at Princeton University in 1967 when he accepted a five-year contract to coach at Springfield. Jimmy Anderson, who played with the AHL club for 11 years, replaces him as coach in Springfield.

Joining Wilson on the coaching staff will be Doug Harvey, 20-year NHL veteran.

Larry Regan, Kings' general manager, said the former defenceman will work as Wilson's defensive coach.

Laycoe, a successful coach with Portland in the Western Hockey League before taking over this season from Red Kelly, said he has no idea he would be fired from the coaching position.

"When teams have bad records, changes have to be made," Laycoe said. "I just hope this doesn't reflect unfairly on my ability as a coach. I still think I can do that job in the NHL."

He said he would accept the scouting job with the Kings, but took the contract expires in two years he would like to find another coaching position.

Two rookies Wilson coached in the AHL came through for him Monday to lead the Kings' attack.

Centre Butch Goring set up two goals by Mike Corrigan and scored the tying goal in the last minute of the game.

The North Stars, second in the West Division, took an early lead on a goal by Bill Goldsworthy, but Corrigan put the Kings ahead with his two goals in the first three minutes of the second period.

Goldsworthy came back less than two minutes later with his second goal of the night and 16th of the season to tie it for Minnesota and make himself the league's top goal-scorer.

Winger Bjal Fleti put the Kings ahead again before the second period ended but Minnesota took the advantage in the third period with two goals by Ray Cullen.

Only 4,997 fans turned out at Los Angeles for Wilson's coaching debut in which the Kings outshot Minnesota 38-30.

Cesare Maniago's flip-flop goaltending antics made the difference for the North Stars. Gerry Desjardins handled the Kings' netminding.

In the only game tonight, Detroit visits St. Louis Blues.

In other developments Monday, Montreal Canadiens announced that left winger John Ferguson will be sidelined for an indefinite period with a fractured right thumb.

Ferguson returned to action Saturday after sitting out a six-game suspension and suffered the injury in a fight with defenceman Gilles Marotte of Chicago.

Chicago Monday traded centre Howie Menard to Oakland Seals for Gene Ubriaco.

"We wanted Ubriaco because he can play both left wing and centre," said Tommy Ivan, Black Hawks' general manager.

Ubriaco, 31, a native of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., has spent most of 11 seasons in minor league hockey.

Storm in Soviets' Teapot

WINNIPEG (CP) — Call it a storm in a samovar, but the Russians are a bit riled again.

The Russian national hockey team and accompanying officials landed at Winnipeg International Airport Monday night and promptly played the "hard-to-get" role when photographers attempted to record the arrival.

The crux of the complaint is that apparently no one was on hand to greet them when they landed in Montreal earlier in the day.

They sang carrying a "samovar"—a large utensil or brewing tea and other liquids familiar to the Russian taste —which was, they said, to be presented to Canadian officials for Canada's second place finish in the recent tournament in the Soviet Union.

The presentation didn't take place in Winnipeg either, despite a welcoming committee of officials which included Gordon Juckes, executive director of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

The Russians open an eight-game Canadian tour in Winnipeg Wednesday and Thursday with games against Canada's national team.

No Clay Match Here

TORONTO (CP) — Negotiations to have Cassius Clay fight heavyweight champion Joe Frazier here "have been pretty well dropped," Harold Ballard, executive vice-president of Maple Leaf Gardens, said Monday.

"If it is not held in the United States, we're very interested in having it here," he said. "However, there are a few administrations at the moment.

"Clay is not allowed to leave the U.S., although I understand they were anticipating making some kind of an exception to this in this situation.

"We'd love to have the fight for the Gardens."

Florida, the originally proposed site of the match, has turned cool toward the fight. Clay, who prefers the adoptive name of Muhammad Ali, was stripped of the heavyweight title after refusing induction into the U.S. armed forces.

Jackson Wins Honor 'by Nose'

TORONTO (CP) — Russ Jackson, already the most honored athlete in Canada this year, has been named winner of the Lou Marsh Trophy for 1969, for the top Canadian sports competitor of the year.

Jackson quarterbacked Ottawa Rough Riders to a second consecutive Grey Cup championship and became only the second football player to win the award since it was inaugurated in 1936 in memory of the late sports editor of The Star, Joe Krol of Toronto Argonauts won it in 1946.

There were 22 nominations for the trophy, including one for Fresh Yankee, Canadian-owned trotting mare which broke Armbro Flight's national money-winning record last week.

Jackson has also won the title of outstanding football player in the Canadian Football League, outstanding Canadian in the CFL, outstanding player in the Grey Cup game and a host of other awards.

Eskies On Offensive

EDMONTON (CP) — Ray Jauch, who Monday became head coach of Edmonton Eskimos, said an improved offence is his target for the 1970 Western Football Conference season.

Jauch, 31-year-old native of Mendota, Ill., and the youngest head coach in the Canadian Football League, succeeds Neill Armstrong, who resigned Nov. 15 after six years with the Eskimos.

Armstrong has joined Minnesota Vikings of the National League as an assistant defensive coach.

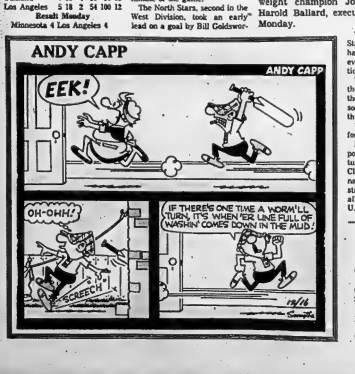
Darrel Royal, now head coach at University of Texas, was the youngest coach ever in the CFL. He was head coach of the Eskimos in 1953 at the age of 28.

Jauch, a former Winnipeg Blue Bombers star who coached Edmonton's defensive backs and linebackers in 1969, said at a news conference:

"I'll be endeavoring to find consistent football players, especially in the kicking and punting positions.

"I don't care if our punter kicks 30 or 40 yards but I want someone who can do it every time."

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (CP) — Neill Armstrong, who developed Edmonton Eskimos into the best defensive team in the Canadian Football League, will be working to strengthen the already-awesome defence of Minnesota Vikings of the National League.



"For the next few weeks, I'll be more an observer than anything else," he said in an interview. "But I've been assigned defensive responsibility."

Armstrong had been head coach at Edmonton for six years until he resigned following the 1969 season, which saw the Eskimos edged out of the Western conference playoffs by British Columbia Lions.

Ever take a scalding shower and then jump into a tubful of ice cubes?

That about covers how Canadian archers in general, and Belleville's Carol Armstrong in particular reacted to a letter from the desk of John Munro, first-stringer for the Ottawa "Health and Welfare."

The missive, addressed to Federation of Canadian Archers' president Ray Crawford was just to inform the latter that, "by the way, speaking money-wise, you're cut off."

Mr. Munro was, of course, more tactful.

"As you know, the Fitness and Amateur Sport Program has been in operation for seven years. I have been concerned that the program be kept in tune with changing needs and conditions and consequently have requested that several reviews be taken.

"This undertaking has caused some delay in the processing of applications for grants relating to the current year's projects. You will be pleased to learn, however, that authorization has been obtained to provide financial assistance to your Association amounting to $2,623."

"While it would be premature at this time to forecast the final outcome of the study currently underway, there are sufficient indications to suggest that there will result a significant re-orientation of the grants structure under which we have been operating. Also, because of the Fitness and Amateur Sport Program it will be necessary to establish priorities in the allocation of the available funds.

(Ed. Note - Now for the zinger.)

"At this point, however, I must advise you that, in all likelihood, it will no longer be possible to provide federal financial assistance for the activities of your Association and that should be taken into consideration in planning your program for future years."

This cheerful news was delivered barely three months after the Canadian women's archery team, including Belleville's Carol Armstrong, finished second among 40 competing in August's world championships in Valley Forge, Pennsylvania.

British Columbia's Dorothy Lidstone brought home the individual women's world title, and Lindsay, Ontario's Don Jackson ranked ninth among male bowmen.

In short, Canadian archers thought their performance might earn them respite from the old federal formula of paying half of the competition expenses of the country's top bowmen.

Now, instead of half, they get nothing, which doesn't lay very many arrows, what with inflation and all.

This treatment, or lack of same, is not novel to archery. Competitors in other lesser-light sports like weightlifting and diving are finding themselves financially slighted by the federal government even when they are among the best in the country in their field.

But Carol Armstrong provides us with a close-to-home example of how expensive it is becoming for an athlete to do his country proud.

Carol and husband Floyd estimate it has cost their family of four nearly $4,000 for her to win two Canadian titles and be a member of two national teams in world competition.

Previously, the federal government offered grants covering half of the expenses of the top four men and women archers in the nationals, and of the members of the Canadian team.

Actually, it was not a 50 per cent grant, in the true sense of the word. The federal government merely matched the amount the individual archer and/or his Association had raised to defray expenses.

For the Canadian Federation of Archers, this has meant everything from selling booster buttons to Christmas cards to raise funds for their top shooters.

In contrast, Carol Armstrong recalls some sleuthing she did during August's world championships in Valley Forge.

"The only people I really asked were the Japanese team members. They got all their expenses paid, new uniforms, and new equipment from the government.

"We have to supply our own uniforms, equipment, and pay half our travel expenses. Some of the members of our team who hadn't been on a team before even had to borrow team jackets from those who had."

For the first time in modern Olympic history, archery has been approved on the agenda of the 1972 Munich Games.

But perhaps nobody will want to go.

Another Big Kingston Game for Mo-Hawks

When you play a quarter of your games in an eight-team league against one club, you've got to take that team a little more seriously than the others.

And when you're Belleville and that other team is Kingston, you have just enough volatile ingredients in your senior hockey mixture for an ice explosion.

Tonight Belleville Mo-Hawks take a 10-7-2 record into Kingston for their fourth of 10 meetings scheduled with the Aces this season.

The Mo-Hawks are on the long end of a 3-0 record with the Aces, including a big 3-1 November win in Kingston that marked the first time either Senior A rival had won on the other's ice since three winters ago.

STEVE REXE
Cutting Down

That's as good a pair of motives as any to ensure a fired-up Aces' team tonight.

Belleville currently shares fourth place with Barrie Flyers, two points back of Oakville, and the Mo-Hawks enjoy a pair of games in hand over both.

The Aces, now 9-10, are alone in sixth spot at the eight-team OHA Senior A grouping.

As always when heading into Kingston for a game on the biggest hockey surface in Canada, Mo-Hawk coach Davey Jones says the key is skating with the Aces' forwards.

"If our forwards can stick with them, we can come home with a win," said Jones, adding that the only Mo-Hawk lineup change will be the absence of third - liner Ray Summers, in the middle of Loyalist College examinations.

LORNE O'DONNELL
Top Scorer

The Mo-Hawks have not had any practice in two weeks, mainly because they haven't had time. Tonight's 8 o'clock game in Kingston will be their fourth in seven days.

Going into tonight's game, the Mo-Hawks rank sixth in goal-scoring among league teams with 64, but steady goal-tending by Steve Rexe puts the locals in second spot defensively, with 61 goals against.

Meanwhile, linemates Lorne O'Donnell, Al Ferguson, and George Godson continue to wage a battle for individual club scoring honors. O'Donnell is 11-10-21, Ferguson 15-4-19, and Godson 7-11-18. The three have accounted for 33 of the 64 Mo-Hawk goals to date.

Next home action for the Mo-Hawks comes Friday night when defending Allan Cup champion Galt is in Belleville for a 9 p.m. Memorial Arena game. The Hornets will be out to avenge the 4-3 overtime setback they suffered on their own ice to the Mo-Hawks two Saturdays ago.

Ferguson Lost To Habs Again

MONTREAL (CP) — Left winger John Ferguson of Montreal Canadiens may be lost to the National Hockey League club for an indefinite period.

X-rays Monday show Ferguson suffered a slight bone crack in his right thumb during a minor altercation Saturday night with Gilles Marotte, Chicago Black Hawks defenceman.

A club spokesman said doctors are still trying to determine if a special cast would allow Ferguson to play with the injury.

Ferguson played his first game Saturday night after sitting out a six-game suspension for his part in a stick-swinging incident in St. Louis.

How About 'Yankees'

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hockey officials may change the name of the National Hockey League-bound Vancouver Canucks.

"Canucks is an outdated slang expression that I don't particularly like," Lyman Walter said Monday. "I'd prefer a name which identifies the team as coming from Vancouver and British Columbia."

Walters, vice-president of the Medicor group of Minneapolis, Minn., new owners of the Canucks, offered no suggestions for a new name—and said the old one could stay.

"If we get a strong indication from hockey fans that they want to retain the name Canucks, the name will stay.

"Otherwise we'll come up with a new one, but not through any 'name-the-team contest'."

Novel Visit

NEW YORK (AP) — Arthur Ashe Jr., top U.S. Davis Cup tennis player, said Monday he has applied for a visa which would permit him to play in the South African open tennis championships.

"I went to the South African consulate this morning," the 1968 U.S. Open champion said.

"We had a nice talk but I was not given any indication on whether my request would be granted."

Should Ashe play, he would become the first black athlete to compete against White opponents in South Africa.

Mustangs Gaining Ground

The Mustangs moved closer to the Downtown Merchants, leaders in Belleville's Gas House Hockey League last night.

The Mustangs defeated Mulroney's 4-1 while the Merchants played to a 4-4 tie with Marysville.

Tom Woodley, Jack Garvin, G. Jones and Jack Hughes scored for the Mustangs with Wayne Waite accounting for Mulroney's lone goal.

There was only one penalty in the game with the Mustangs getting the gate for elbowing.

In the other game Ted Seager, Wayne McTaggert, Bob Lloyd and Carl Boomhower scored for the Merchants. Bruce Pascoe had two goals for Marysville and team-mates David Hurst and Larry Pascoe adding singles.

There were 24 minutes in penalties in this game with the Merchants getting 16 of them.

Register Now!

The Deseronto Minor Hockey Association's ball will start rolling this week with Reverend Oscar Simpson heading the campaign.

This evening is registration night open to any pupil with a signed form from his parents giving him permission to play hockey.

"Unfortunately, this year there will be no insurance to cover the players. Parents must understand this and be willing to assume the responsibility in case of injury," said Mr. Simpson.

"Girls as well as boys are being asked to register," added Mr. Simpson. "We hope to get enough girls so that games can be arranged."

The next meeting of the volunteers of the Deseronto Minor Hockey league comes Monday, Dec. 29, at which time registration will slow just how many officials are needed per team.

Blame Pair of Goalies For Quinte Traffic Jam

If you were upset that the Quinte Hockey League standings look like downtown Belleville during rush hour, Larry Dipstro and Ken Genereaux would be as good as anybody to blame. The Belvedere Hotel and Central Taxi goalkeepers recorded 2-0 shutouts apiece last night's action to force a three-way tie for first place in the four - team league.

Central Taxi got their win over league-leading Aluminum Stars courtesy a pair of second-half goals from linemates Al Walker and Tom Pierce. Ron Morgan and defenceman Tom McDonald assisted on Walker's winner, with Maurice Switzer and McDonald in on "Pierce's insurance tally.

Solidly outstanding work by Stars' goalie Bob Cook kept the score as low as it was.

For Central's Genereaux, the shutout was the second of his three-year Quinte League career. The other came by a identical 2-0 score against the same Aluminum Stars team in last season's playoffs.

Genereaux has now allowed 12 goals in seven games, lowest among league goalies.

Belvedere earned their share of top spot by blanking last-place Stinson's Construction 2-0.

Goals by Bob Elsbier and Doug Hallam in the last 13 minutes of the game preserved Larry Dipstero's three shift of 11 penalties called by referees "Weiner" Brown and Bill Hurst. Aluminum Stars, Belvedere Hotel, and Central Taxi now have eight points each after their first seven games with Stinson's trailing with four.

Stormy Session

Humane Society Wins One Seat on Administrative Board

TORONTO (CP) — After a stormy session Monday night, the Ontario government adopted a new amendment to its controversial animals research bill that will give the Ontario Humane Society a seat on the board that administers the legislation.

The amendment, moved in the legislature by James Snow (PC —Halton East), requires the government to give a seat to a "member in good standing of the Humane Society or its affiliates." The board, with not less than three members, will license all animal suppliers and register all research facilities in Ontario.

Acceptance of the amendment by Agriculture Minister William Stewart was the first time he has agreed to incorporate the society into any aspect of the bill's administration.

The Snow motion was just one of many snags the government ran into during the night, and by the end of the session only 22 of the bill's 29 sections had been completed.

If passed, the bill will provide animals for research institutions under a rule that strays unclaimed after three days in a pound can be turned over for scientific study. The bill also calls for inspection of pounds and laboratories, plus one of anesthesia to protect animals from undue suffering.

The house adopted the Snow amendment, but rejected a Liberal attempt to have the selection made from a list provided by the humane society.

James Renwick (NDP—Toronto-Riverdale) then tried to add a section restricting any research done to peaceful uses.

He proposed that a review board, established at each research institution, should be able to demand proof that a research project was intended for peaceful purposes only, and should have the authority to reject projects that are intended for other than peaceful uses.

Both motions were defeated in a 47-to-28 vote after Mr. Stewart argued that it would be impossible to differentiate between peaceful and aggressive research purposes.

During the debate, Mac Makarchuk (NDP—Brantford) was called to order when he said government officials set Ontario on the path that led to Auschwitz, Buchenwald and . . ."

The house rang with angry shouts and cries of "shame" as government members demanded the remarks be withdrawn. In the exchange of shouts they were not withdrawn.

Mr. Stewart said a restrictive definition of "peaceful" research would prevent development of defences against offensive devices produced by other nations.

Legislative Report Tabled

Credit Unions May Get Right to Rival Banks

TORONTO (CP) — Credit unions could expand their services to compete with banks and other deposit-taking institutions, if the report of a select committee of the Ontario legislature, tabled Monday, is adopted.

In a section of its 112-page report on credit unions relating to membership bonds the committee says credit unions should be permitted to expand from their present narrow membership base into community institutions.

"This would enable credit unions to provide improved and more varied services and would enable them to expand freely and on an equal basis with other financial institutions," the report states.

In effect, this would mean Ontario's 1,050 credit unions could become public institutions. The committee recommends a series of safeguards to protect shareholders and depositors more adequately than does the present Credit Union Act.

Among recommended changes in the act, the committee says credit unions should be required to keep 10 per cent of their assets in cash, and make mandatory provision for bad loans.

Compared with legislation in other provinces, the Ontario act is "seriously deficient in several respects," the committee says.

The committee's main recommendations relate to credit union loan and reserve requirements.

The committee says the present practice of setting loan limits by bylaw rather than statute should be continued to permit "maximum flexibility."

It also recommends that the mortgage loan limit of credit unions be raised to 75 per cent of the appraised property value from the present 66.67 per cent, and that even this limit, and the maximum five-year mortgage term, be lifted if the credit union is an approved lender under the National Housing Act.

The committee also advises scrapping the present requirement that credit unions limit their mortgage lending to 25 per cent of the value of their shares and deposits.

All credit unions should be required to keep 10 per cent of their shares, deposits, and borrowings in cash or other liquid assets, the committee says.

The committee also says credit unions should be permitted to charge members more than the present one per cent per month interest on loans, to enable them to become more competitive with banks and other financial institutions which are able to borrow money at adjustable interest rates.

Other recommendations include:

—Only credit unions with "proven managerial capabilities" should be allowed to accept term deposits from members.

—Credit unions should be prohibited from making any loans or investments, except in their own shares or government-backed bonds, when liquidity is below 10 per cent.

—All credit unions with shares and deposits totalling more than $300,000 should appoint auditors immediately.

Reform Would Give Family Right to Sue Each Other

TORONTO (CP) — Wives and husbands should have the right to sue each other for injuries caused by negligence or assault, for libel or slander and for damage to property, the Ontario Law Reform Commission recommended Monday.

Also proposed was clarification of the law to ensure that a parent-child relationship does not bar civil actions by parents or children against each other.

The commission is entering the final stages of a review begun in 1963 of Ontario family law.

Dealing with another issue, the commission recommended abolition of a husband's right to collect damages from his wife's lover in so-called alienation of affection suits.

These and other recommendations were contained in a 241-page report on torts—private or civil wrong-doing—tabled in the legislature Monday by Attorney-General Arthur Wishart.

The commission found the law uncertain on the right of children to sue their parents and vice versa, and recommended the right be accepted and spelled out clearly.

In another recommendation the commission proposed that children be given the right to recover damages for prenatal injuries caused by the negligence of a third party.

It observed that the pregnant mother is entitled to damages for her suffering and the father for his financial loss, but the child—who may have permanent injuries—has no rights.

Turning to issues involving adultery and other marital offences, the commission recommended abolishing civil actions aimed at collecting damages from third parties.

"The placing of a price on sexual conduct between a person's spouse and a third party belongs to a past age," the commission said. "This is particularly so when one considers that the participating spouse has normally consented to and may even have encouraged the conduct."

injury, libel or slander or damage to property, the theory being that, because he is liable for civil actions against his wife, he would only be suing himself.

The wife, however, because of her property rights in marriage, can sue her spouse for damage or loss of property. She cannot sue for personal injury, libel or slander.

The commission cited an example of what can happen in a two-car family. If the wife borrowed her husband's car and drove it into a tree, he could not sue her. But if he drove her car into a tree she could take him to court.

On the other hand, a husband might visit his estranged wife to discuss a divorce, become agitated and punch her in the face, breaking her jaw and knocking out a few teeth.

She could not collect damages. She would be entitled to sue, however, if her husband vented his anger instead on her dog or her own furniture.

The commission found the law

Wishart Refutes Renwick

TORONTO (CP) — Fourteen persons connected with organized crime are facing charges before Ontario courts and another 25 are being tried in Canadian courts outside Ontario, Attorney-General Arthur Wishart said Monday.

He was replying in the legislature to James Renwick (NDP—Toronto-Riverdale) who last month challenged him to name any recent court cases which prove Ontario police are taking action to halt organized crime.

At the time, Mr. Renwick drew a distinction between organized crime, defined as an association of persons who conduct criminal activities as an organized group, and syndicated crime, meaning a criminal association, such as the Mafia, which is as highly organized it has a monopoly.

Mr. Wishart said Monday his advisers feel syndicated crime does not exist in Ontario in the monopoly aspect.

But he offered a more modern definition of organized crime as a "continuing and self-perpetuating criminal conspiracy," and said this sort of crime does exist in Ontario and some of those involved are being prosecuted.

Healing Substance...
Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the tissues of inflamed tissues.

Our hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking protection." Pain was promptly and gently relieved — actual reduction or retraction (shrinkage) took place.

Among these case histories were many of long hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases so severe that surgery was important of all, results were so thorough that this un-covenant was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection when a rectal opening is present.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

King Herod Slew Jewish Wife, The One Person He Ever Loved

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Dismissing his hairdresser, King Herod slipped on an elegant robe, quaffed deeply from a silver beaker of Greek Chian wine, and sent a slave running to fetch his wife, Marianne.

The hours ahead would haunt him to his grave, but he did not know that now.

He slumped down on an ivory couch and waited, momentarily obsessed with himself, exulting at how he had manoeuvred Augustus Caesar into retaining him as king of this unruly Jewish realm, eager for Marianne's embraces.

Then she stood there before him, beautiful, exquisite as always, but with pained defiance in her eyes.

"I have come as thou commandest," she said, "but only to tell thee openly, I find thy companionship no longer supportable."

His face clouded. Alternate waves of outrage, bewilderment, jealousy, impotence and fury went through him.

She was the one person in all his merciless, tyrannical, trustless jungle of his life that he loved. Although he did not yet realize it, he would destroy what he loved, just as he would seek to destroy the very incarnation of utmost love itself in Jesus.

Herod finished his wine and shook his head. It was happening again, the designs against him, the undermining and conniving that already had drenched his house in blood.

But the nearness of her, the scent of her perfume, the overhead presence of her body in her swept him, and he stood up, declaring his great affection, his regret for actions hurtful to her, swearing his devotion.

"Yea," she said cuttingly, as related by the historian Josephus, "thou didst to be sure demonstrate thy love to me by the injunctions thou gavest to Sohemus when thou commandest him to kill me if any harm came to thee from Caesar."

Herod flew into a rage. So she knew; she obviously had wormed it out of his aide, Sohemus, and she could have done that only through intimacies.

"Debauched!" he screamed at her. "Adulteress!" She denied the charges and fled the room.

Indeed, on Herod's visit to Augustus, he had left Marianne with her mother, Alexandra, under Sohemus' watch, with instructions to execute them if he were eliminated for having opposed Augustus in his war against Antony.

Herod's tactical response had been to forestall any how ascendancy of Jewish royalty, of which his wife and mother-in-law were members. Herod's mission had turned out successfully, but instead of celebration he met what he deemed treachery.

The ensuing events followed a pattern unvarying in Herod's purview—interrogations, lies, tale-bearing, intrigue, torture, violence and death.

It had been that way ever since he seized the Judean throne by force, wiping out the reigning Jewish line, including numerous relatives of Marianne.

She was a Jewish princess of the Hasmonean hous, the dynasty that had ruled since the uprising of the heroic Maccabees against the Syrians in 166 BC, restoring a Judean independence which was ruthlessly crushed by Rome and Herod.

He had 10 wives, but his marriage to Marianne had brought an authentic Jewish element into his court.

Herod was obsessed with her as a woman, but resentful of her stubborn pride in her universal God of all existence, just as he scorned Judaism itself and its people.

Because they "preferred righteousness to glory, that nation was not agreeable to him," writes Josephus. "He was conscious that he was hated by those under him."

Their olden Jewish faith, going far back to the origins of huggar civilization in the Tigris-Euphrates region, was much older than the polytheistic religions of Rome or the oriental religions of Buddhism, Hinduism and later Islam. It was only a tiny enclave generally ignored by the world at large.

It was into this oldest, yet small, little-noticed lineage that Jesus was born—the Jewish child whose exhilarating heritage would sweep the world and far outshine the passing displays of Rome and its vassal, Herod.

Yet Rome and Herod shaped the environment which the work of Jesus would permeate and change.

Religiously, it was an amorphous atmosphere, a mixed brew of many gods, myths and superstitions, gods of wind, sea and soil, of war and reproduction, of the Greek Zeus, Hera, Ares and Aphrodite blending with the matching Roman deities of Jupiter, Juno, Mars and Diana.

Merging with this celestial roster were the innumerable gods from Egypt and the mystical East.

In the midst of this motley religious milieu, Judaism stood like a resisting citadel, despite the pressures of infiltrating Greco-Roman ways, upholding its ancient faith in one, unifying Lord of history, revealed through centuries of events and recorded in their scriptures.

Marianne attended regularly the prayers and the reading of the law and the prophets, defying Herod's Greco-Roman tastes.

She had admired her husband as a daring young general, even loved him, but her esteem had turned to bitterness, as his overriding lust for power and personal suspicions led him successively to kill her grandfather, her father, her uncle and her brother.

The last case had occurred after her mother, Alexandra, persuaded Cleopatra by letter to get Antony to compel Herod to name Marianne's youthful brother, Aristobulus, as high priest. Herod had done so, but because of the popularity of Aristobulus with the Jews, had promptly had him drowned while bathing in Jericho.

Antony, at the instigation of Cleopatra, always seeking kingdom, it is invariably the male who wears the adornments. The peahen is a drab creature; the lioness lacks a luxurious mane; the female of every species was designed to be dazzled and beguiled by the splendor of her suitors.

Until recently, only men of dubious virility dared to attire themselves in fine fabrics, rich colors and bejeweled trimmings. The uniform of the average male purposely subdued all individuality; each man has wanted to look as much like the next as possible, being deathly afraid of giving an impression of dandyism, or worse.

This may have satisfied our instinct for conformity, but at the same time it frustrated our secret desire for distinction and dash. A man liked to feel himself something of a gay dog. So many opportunities for adventure have vanished from modern life, that most men either resign themselves to dullness or seek vicarious outlets in liquor or licentiousness.

The extravagantly colored shirt and the bold tie have become the symbols of rebellion, of man's challenging the woman's right to plunge him into sartorial oblivion. He feels I think, that much of his manhood has already been repressed: and only a last-ditch stand can save him from being entombed in the role of a perpetual drone until he dies.

It is one of the minor ironies of history that what used to be the male prerogative has come to be regarded as a female tendency. Women have not only come to wear the pants, but everything else that looks good, too. The sartorial revolution is just a call for equal rights.

Dief Says Tax Reform Giant Hoax

WINNIPEG (CP) — Former prime minister John Diefenbaker said today his government's white paper on tax reform is a gigantic hoax on the people.

Mr. Diefenbaker, en route to Ottawa from Prince Albert, said Finance Minister Benson's proposals are designed to take the eyes of Canadians off other problems and when it comes to actual legislation, many of the white paper's "punitive" recommendations will be missing.

In this way, he said at an airport news conference, Canadians will be relieved and will consider themselves better off than they thought.

If the white paper was implemented in full, it would be detrimental to any expansion of the economy. It would be the death knell to small business, including the farmer, and would retard any expanded exploration of the mining resources of the western provinces.

Male Needs Romanticism

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The recent blossoming of those bright-tone shirts and wild-looking ties for men represents a real need for romanticism on the part of the male animal.

A few weeks ago, I acted as a commentator for a charity affair called "A Night in Paris." For the party, I dressed as a Parisian boulevardier — complete with beret, walking stick, and jaunty Ascot tie knotted at the throat.

At first I felt a trifle odd in this strange regalia, but after a few minutes I began happily to enjoy my unaccustomed role. And by evening's end, I felt as dashing and romantic as Chevalier in his "Love Parade" era.

It is only in the last century or so that the male has subdued his costumes — and his ego along with it. Until the Industrial Revolution, it was men's clothes that took the spotlight as social functions: the cape, the ruffle, the elegant cocked hat trimmed with braid.

REAL ESTATE

HOW DOES BIG BUSINESS RATE REAL ESTATE INVESTMENT ?

ED McKINNEY
J. D., McKinney
Realty Ltd

You will find an answer in the executive decisions of some of the country's largest corporations that are presently buying in real estate.

The reasons are numerous. They include the fact that real estate yields on investment are generally higher than for other outlets; such investment offers protection against inflation as well as tax shelter through depreciation allowances; and real estate offers the most desirable kind of "Leverage" investment — where part of the purchase price is borrowed.

Corporations as diverse as auto manufacturers and consumer fuel suppliers are pouring large funds into the construction of commercial, commercial-industrial and recreational complexes.

Large corporations with their highly skilled executive teams confirm the outstanding value of real estate investment in our inflationary times and small investor may learn from their example.

Prime real estate yields a return upwards of eight percent and speculative real estate may show yields upwards of 25 percent. But an expert's knowledge of what, when and how are essential.

A knowledgeable Realtor will guide you in the best placement of your investment savings while taking greatest advantage of leverage in the purchase and tax savings through depreciation.

Commons May Act To Ban Air Strike

Air Control Job Is Tense

TORONTO (CP) — Tension and awesome responsibility are part of Tony Carcazza's daily routine. He's an air traffic controller.

He and 1,050 other controllers across Canada are prepared to go on strike Friday unless the government meets their demands for more money, fewer hours, less stress and better equipment.

Mr. Carazza, a veteran of seven years in the control tower, said in an interview Monday the tension sometimes catches up to controllers who often suffer heart attacks, ulcers and nervous breakdowns.

Each month, controllers at Toronto International Airport guide more than 20,000 aircraft to safety.

They work on rotating shifts. The first three days they work from 7 a.m. to 3 p.m., followed by three days from 3 p.m. to 11 p.m. Then, they get three days off for rest and return for three days from 11p.m. to 7 a.m.

Mr. Carazza, 37, and other air traffic controllers often must talk to 15 aircraft of all sizes, shapes and speeds at the same time.

The planes must be directed into proper flight lanes at the right time and right altitude. The controller must do it by memory—there is no time for taking notes.

Grade 12 is the only requirement academically, but controllers face stiff physical and emotional requirements. In a recent recruitment, only 20 of 900 applicants were selected.

Training, including on the job, takes five years. Mr. Carazza earns $10,200 annually, but he is one of the highest-paid controllers.

He is expected to follow the bottle rules on pilots on drinking 12 hours before shift, no drugs, plenty of rest, regular vision and hearing check-ups and the same annual medical as pilots get.

Mr. Carazza said he and the other controllers don't like to think about the lives that pass through their hands daily.

"I mean, sure, it's in the back of your mind but that's all. You know that if you say the wrong thing a lot of people could get killed but you don't say the wrong thing. You have to be right all the time. You have to be perfect.

"There are no little mishaps here. Only disasters if something goes wrong."

He said there has never been a major disaster at Toronto International, but there are close calls.

Cash-starved Farmers Now Bootlegging Grain

By PAUL CARBRAY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Farmers in Western Canada, facing desperate cash shortages because the Canadian Wheat Board cannot handle all their grain, have begun to move some grain across provincial boundaries for sale to feed companies or cattle producers.

Any interprovincial movement of wheat, oats or barley is illegal, but some farmers are willing to break the law to obtain money to meet financial commitments.

"Sure I'll sell my grain in Alberta . . . if I can . . . I'll do anything to get money," said one Saskatchewan farmer, who lives near the Alberta border.

"I haven't done it yet, but I will if the situation gets any worse. I have to get money somewhere."

The farmer, who refused to be identified, said he owns money for a purchase of some land, farming equipment, and for a car.

J. O. Wright, Saskatchewan Wheat Pool secretary, said he is alarmed at the trend.

"There's been a lot of pressure on farmers this year. Farmers are looking for cash."

Mr. Wright said that in many cases, if a farmer is taken to court and found guilty of bootlegging grain "he gets off with a token fine."

"I think that even feed merchants and cattle producers would like some stability."

Dr. Gordon Burton of Claresholm, Alta., president of the Western Stock Growers Association, has about 1,000 head of cattle on his ranch and agrees with Mr. Wright.

Cattlemen are "distressed" at what is happening to the grain farmer, he said.

In the long run, lower grain prices for feed are not going to help the cattle industry because "everyone is going to try to get into cattle and we can easily flood the market."

But prairie farmers, short of cash, are under pressure to sell grain cheaply for feed to meet their financial commitments.

Grand Jury Indicts 55 in Gambling Case

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — One of three federal grand juries investigating crime and official corruption in New Jersey has indicted Simone (Sam the Plumber) DeCavalcante, a reputed Cosa Nostra leader, and 54 other persons in an alleged $30,000,000 gambling ring.

A second grand jury is investigating alleged links between organized crime and some segments of the Internal Revenue Service, and a third is examining allegations of city government corruption in Newark.

The indictments of DeCavalcante and the others Tuesday came a week after U.S. Attorney-General John N. Mitchell said federal agents were about to crack "the largest gambling syndicate ever broken up in the country."

It was the second multi-million-dollar gambling case in New Jersey this year. Ruggerio (Ritchie the Boot) Boiardo and 18 other persons were convicted earlier on state charges involving an alleged $12,000,000 gambling operation.

DeCavalcante, 58, whose nickname comes from a plumbing business he operates, was the only big name listed in the new indictments.

Air Strike No Problem for Them!

Possibility of an air controllers' strike isn't stopping these Quinte youngsters travelling to Florida this week. Already they look airborne under their own steam. But it's just a practice dive before leaving for U.S. Swimming Hall of Fame annual development school.

Only about 20 Canadians participate, half of them from Belleville and Trenton. Keeping in shape are Robert Pape, 15, sister Angela, nine, Regina Sulk, 18, David Pape, 19, all of Belleville Centennial Swimming Club. To avoid strike, they're travelling by car.

Orders Strike

Talks Start Again

OTTAWA (CP) — With two days remaining before a scheduled national strike by air traffic controllers, union and government negotiators resumed closed-door talks today aimed at averting the walkout.

The parties returned to the bargaining table for 2½ hours Tuesday, after the 1,000-member Canadian Air Traffic Control Association announced a noon EST Friday strike deadline.

They reviewed and identified outstanding issues in dispute then broke off to re-assess their positions.

Today spokesmen for both parties said they are willing to try round-the-clock bargaining if it appears this might produce a settlement.

Para 3-5

Transport Minister Don Jamieson, meanwhile, said the government would consider legislation to prevent a strike "in the event the public interest was overwhelmingly affected."

In the Commons, Opposition Leader Stanfield asked whether the government would consider keeping the House in session beyond the proposed Friday adjournment to deal with the situation and promised his party's support for such a move.

Interviewed outside the Commons, Mr. Jamieson commented on Mr. Stanfield's proposal and said "undoubtedly we'll be looking at it very hard before Thursday. . . ."

John David Lyon, president of the 1,000-member Canadian Air Traffic Control Association who is a Winnipeg controller, told a news conference early Tuesday of the Friday strike deadline. It is the earliest the union may legally strike.

Michael Bolzer, chief treasury board negotiator, told reporters after Tuesday's session the key issues appear to be pay and hours of work "and the two are so related I don't think you can separate them." He said a "good climate prevailed at the talks.

The union, which began negotiations in June, has insisted that pay increases are not a paramount issue in the dispute. It insists hours of work that lead to hazardous controller fatigue is the key issue.

The association sought initially a reduction in weekly work hours to 35½ from 40. Conciliators and Treasury board proposed 37½. Mr. Lyon said there have been cases of controllers working 200 hours in a month and back-to-back eight-hour shifts.

He said air traffic has doubled in the last 10 years and the number of controllers has not kept pace. Even though the transport department now recognized this fact, it took five years to train a controller and no early solution was in sight.

U.S. studies showed controllers faced job stresses of 1½ to four times that of most other occupations.

District Air Service: Officials Optimistic

By BOY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Following talks this week with officials of Nordair Ltd., Montreal, the Quinte Air Committee is optimistic a commercial air service can be established for this district.

"We are optimistic at this point," stated committee chairman Warden Donald Rodgers of Sidney. Nordair has promised to take a hard look at the matter."

Currently, Nordair is running a three tie es daily jet service between Montreal and Hamilton. Its plane is that a stop for one of the flights can be arranged for the Quinte district.

Tentative approval has been given for commercial air services flights to land at Trenton, using present runways.

It would be necessary, however, for separate terminal facilities to be provided to separate passenger traffic from normal station activity.

Making the trip to Montreal for talks with Nordair officials were Warden Rodgers and Belleville Industrial Commissioner Ray Brown.

Mr. Brown said Nordair officials would conduct a needs study of the Belleville - Trenton area within the next 30 days.

Answers would be sought for two questions: the economic viability of a Quinte area stop, and the type of equipment which might be used.

Currently, Nordair is using a 727 jet with passenger capacity for more than 100 on the Montreal-Hamilton run.

Warden Rodgers said the firm would investigate the possibility of using a 40-50 passenger craft for the Quinte stop.

Nordair officials admitted there was a unique situation in the Quinte area in that the Trenton air station has modern-day terminal facilities.

Warden Rodgers said if Nordair decided to stop at Trenton, it "would fill in a weak link" in the Quinte district transportation requirements.

He emphasized that within a 25-mile radius of Trenton there is a population of more than 90,000, and within 50 miles nearly 200,000. Population figures are important, he said, because air carriers depended greatly on "the man on the street" for revenue.

At Monday's city council meeting, Alderman Gerald Joyce, chairman of the industrial committee said that area industry would be keenly interested for a Quinte district air service.

Warden Rodgers noted that Nordair was recently given carrier rights for all Ontario with the exception of the northwest. He felt they have a certain responsibility to provide service.

At the same time the service would have to be economically feasible, he said, explaining that any service established by Nordair would have to be daily with departures at a time convenient for travellers.

Tentative plans call for a terminal facilities to be established at the east end of the Trenton air field.

Warden Rodgers said there was no reason the committee could not start out in a small way, possibly with the use of a mobile trailer or porta ble classroom for terminal facilities.

Also required would be paving of ramps and loading area.

"But first we have to get a carrier," he emphasized.

Exchange Needs $1,733

By LINDA GELDART

As time runs out, the Christmas Exchange continues to press for more dollars to meet the needs of the more than 300 families registered for assistance. Donations now stand at $2,567. Organizers hope there will be adequate funds to go around so each needy family can have a happy Christmas.

The $4,400 quota set by the Christmas Exchange has sparked enthusiastic response, not only from adults in the community, but youngsters, too.

Boxes for toy donations placed in each of the public and separate schools were filled to overflowing by the children who wanted to pass on some of the joy of the season to those less fortunate.

"Efforts on the part of the teen-agers provide ample evidence of the responsive and generous nature of these young people", commented Exchange director Mrs. Jane Haslett.

The students at Moira Secondary are donating the proceeds of tonight's music and drama night to the Exchange.

City firefighters, through the generosity of the many children and parents, can virtually assure one of the happy Christmas mornings ever for the hundreds of needy children.

Typical of the response the firefighters have been getting is the donation of 30 presents by members of the Quinte Twirlers Association, plus $82 in cash donations.

Mr. Reg. Christopher of the firefighters stressed the cooperation received not only from the Fire Chief, Leo Culhane, but from Police Chief Crosbie has played a large part in the success of the project.

All the toys are being sorted and boxed by the firefighters in their off-hours. The toys are now stored in the police station gymnasium until they can be distributed.

Donations may be mailed to The Christmas Exchange, Box 815, Belleville or 224 John St., Belleville.

British MPs Vote to Retain Ban on Hanging

LONDON (CP) — The House of Commons responded in an impassioned plea by Home Secretary James Callaghan to lead the country onto a higher plain of civilization and Tuesday night voted decisively to end hanging for murder in Britain.

But it remained to be seen if the House of Lords will follow the Commons' example and bury the death penalty. It promises to be a close fight.

The eight-hour Commons debate on whether to extend for good a five-year trial abolition period which runs out next summer was dominated by Callaghan, who made it known he would resign rather than send a man into the hangman's noose.

To thrust home his argument, he produced fresh figures on murder which made Britain, he said, "appear to be an oasis in a violent world."

Industrial Commission '69--A Very Good Year; '70--Off and Running!

Even after unprecedented current year success in attracting new industry, the Belleville Industrial Commission will not start the New Year without additional prospects.

This was assured at Monday's meeting of city council when in a year-end report, Alderman Gerald Joyce, chairman of the industrial commission, outlined prospects for 1970.

Ald. Joyce said that Industrial Commissioner Ray Brown had "good evidence" with 70 different industrial firms in his files and was working with 10 firms on a close basis.

Of these, three firms appeared in "extremely good prospects.

"So it looks as if we are off and running for 1970 — at least not going out of 1969 empty-handed," he said.

Other activity by the industrial commission will see the city's industrial brochure brought up to date.

Ald. Joyce said a canvasser was now busy collecting new statistical information.

"It will not be a new brochure, but will have information brought up to date," he said.

Cause of Ducks' Deaths Can't Be Proven

TORONTO (CP) — A public inquiry into the deaths of several ducks on Toronto Island last summer ended Tuesday with a citizens' group counsel admitting it was impossible to prove the ducks had been poisoned by the pesticide Diazinon.

James Karfilis, counsel for Pollution Probe, which had charged that Diazinon administered by the Toronto parks department caused the death of the ducks, said it was also impossible to prove Diazinon had not caused the deaths.

He suggested that it would be within the commission's scope to suggest to the parks department that pesticides other than Diazinon be used in spraying the island.

Trenton 'Wall' Tumbles

The "don't fence me" in pleas of David St. residents were heard by Trenton officials, who Monday night tore down part of the barricade across the street to create a pedestrian access walkway. Mrs. Essie Conley, who had been previously forced to clamber over the wire to get her mail, tried out the new access walk with her son, Harry Conley.

Trenton Council Reopens Davis Street

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — An unbridled wire-cutting by town employees late Monday afternoon opened the route to Christmas convenience for Davis Street residents.

The gift of access to Front Street and the north Trenton business section came as a surprise to the residents whose plight was made public by The Intelligencer only two days ago.

Without informing the residents, the town cleared a pedestrian walkway through the wire barricade which had closed Davis Street to all traffic for a week.

The closure was dictated by the forthcoming construction of an elevated CNR track but inconvenienced Davis Street residents by forcing them to make a round-about trip (one mile longer for the round trip) to reach their mail drop-box at the corner of Davis and Front streets. Approximately eight families were affected by the closure.

Davis Street is the connecting link between the closed portion of Highway 33 and the temporary thoroughfare — the Wooler Road. Highway 33 has been closed since July 2, 1969, to allow construction of a CNR overpass and attendant facilities.

Tuesday evening, Trenton Mayor James M a cDonald said: "We've created a walkway for people to cross the CNR tracks and go to Front Street without a long detour and also to enable school children to easily reach their buses.

"Pedestrians can now cross the tracks easily and I don't see why the pedestrian walkway can't be a permanent one," the mayor added.

"I'm darn glad because I'm so used to going for my mail every morning and then on down to the corner store," said Mrs. Essie Conley who resides west of the CNR tracks at 149 Davis Street.

"It is awfully good that the town listened to our complaint and besides I don't like being fenced in: do you?" queried Mrs. Conley.

A second endorsement of the pedestrian walkway came from Doug Bradshaw, proprietor of a Variety Store located on Front Street just a block south of Davis Street.

"That's good — it certainly helps a lot," he said. "Not only for me but for the people who live on Davis Street and to the northwest."

However, Mayor MacDonald had no glad tidings for a few other north Trenton businesses —in particular a fully licensed hotel, a combination car wash and gas bar and a fully licensed motel — whose business volume varies proportionately with the volume of traffic in the area.

"Unfortunately, we can not leave Davis Street open to traffic," the mayor explained, "because it would be highly dangerous for cars to negotiate the elevated track which is scheduled for completion by March 31, 1970."

He went on to, note that March 31 was the target date for completion of the project and also the CNR's initial use of the overhead crossing, noting that it would not be feasible to remove the present level track until spring.

Mayor MacDonald said the town voted more than a year ago to close Davis Street in order that the CNR track can be constructed with a gradual rise, beginning south of Davis Street and increasing until it connected with the Highway 33 overpass.

In addition the mayor stated that CNR officials had requested the town to construct the fence across Davis Street because they felt that traffic would have to be halted during the construction of the elevated track.

Food Hampers Provide Yule Meals for Needy

TRENTON (Staff) — Captain Eugene Pyne of the Trenton Branch of the Salvation Army has been visited by the true spirit of Christmas — "It is more gracious to give than to receive."

This yuletide spirit will result in the Salvation Army's distribution of approximately 150 hampers to needy families this Christmas.

"The amount of help we can offer the needy depends on the amount of help that we receive from others," Captain Pyne stressed. "We appreciate this help and couldn't do much without it."

Last year 130 Christmas hampers were distributed in Trenton by the Salvation Army but there seems to be an increased need this season, Captain Pyne noted.

Interest and help has come from many quarters, the Captain emphasized, citing the Kiwanis Club, Knight's of Columbus, Orange Lodge, Christian Reform Church, Trenton Brownies and Girl Guides, the Key and Keyette Clubs of Trenton High School, as well as many other concerned groups and individuals.

Much of the food and many toys have already been collected so Thursday night Salvation Army members and the Girl Guides will tackle the big task of preparing the hampers.

Then Monday the Kiwanis Club will drive into the picture and distribute the Christmas hampers by means of a motorized campaign by members of the Trenton Kiwanis Club.

Captain Pyne said that contributions for the community effort have come in the form of gifts (both clothing and toys), food and cash donations.

With this the Salvation Army will prepare hampers tailored to the individual needs of each family recommended by the welfare agency or the Children's Aid Society.

Food staples are the basic ingredient of the typical hamper, which for a medium-sized family would include: 10 lbs. of potatoes, bread, canned goods (vegetables, soups and fruit), oranges, Christmas cake, margarine, jam or jelly and a five-pound chicken. And to bring joy to young hearts — a toy for each child.

The family is treated as a whole, with emphasis on the mother and children, explained Captain Pyne. He also noted that a large family would get a turkey instead of a chicken.

The Salvation Army's Christmas campaign is the major one of its kind in Trenton and Captain Pyne praised the united effort, saying: "The interest is high and just about everyone seems concerned and willing to co-operate in every way possible.

Policeman's Lot Still Same Despite Breathalyzer Tests

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

"The new mandatory breathalyzer test has done little or nothing to change the activities of Belleville City Police concerning impaired or drunk drivers,

Deputy Chief Harold Reid told The Intelligencer this morning that the new legislation hasn't changed the operation of the police station nor the operation of the breathalyzer in capturing impaired drivers.

He explained the only difference now was the fact breathalyzer tests are compulsory, rather than an option.

"It just gives us a little more authority, that's all," he said.

Mr. Reid said that the police department had no more occasion to use the device than before the Dec. 1 legislation.

In the past there have been very few cases where suspects turned down a request to submit to the test.

"Some have even asked to take the test and cleared themselves," he added.

The device has been used a number of times (police didn't ever how many) since legislation but there has been no increase in its use lately.

He said that the breathalyzer would not necessarily tag a driver if that driver was able to drive without appearing to be impaired and escaping the notice of a police officer.

"If the driver had control of his vehicle, it's doubtful we would pick him up," Mr. Reid said. "However if he was weaving from side to side we'd stop him."

Driver Fair After Crash

A Belleville man is in fair condition in Belleville General Hospital this morning following an accident Tuesday afternoon at the corner of Bryon and West Streets.

Frank Post of 82 South Forster Avenue suffered head injuries when his car was struck by another vehicle at 2:28 p.m. yesterday.

According to police, Mr. Post was investigating an overheated engine in his car when the car was struck from the rear. Driver Lally Dave Burshaw, 20, of 5 Holloway Street was unverified, but two passengers in her vehicle, Reginald Cole, 19, of 58 Prince of Wales Drive and Dale Sagor, 18, of 14 Westmount Drive were taken to Belleville General Hospital where they were treated and released.

Driver Unhurt, Car Wrecked

PICTON (Staff) — A Picton man escaped injury this morning when the car he was driving was demolished in a collision near Bloomfield.

Driver was John Hicks, 23, of Kings St. The one-car accident occurred at Maisby's Crossroad east of the entrance to Bloomfield village. The Picton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police estimated damage to the 1968 model car at $2,500.

Israelis and Arabs Reject U.S. Peace Proposals

By RAY DICK

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon's "even-handed" policy on the Middle East got its first major test last week, and, judging from initial reaction, the results were hardly spectacular.

What United States policy-makers learned was that, on the Middle East issue, even-handed peace proposals bring even-handed rejections.

What was rejected by Arabs and Israelis alike was a major policy statement delivered by the genial and unassuming U.S. state secretary, William P. Rogers, at an equally unassuming adult education conference.

With world attention focussed on the horrors of the Vietnam war, it hardly got the attention it deserved.

Rogers proclaimed a "balanced" policy, calling for Israeli withdrawal from territories occupied in the 1967 war in return for an Arab commitment to a "permanent" and "binding" peace agreement.

As expected, and as has happened before to similar proposals, both sides immediately rejected the move.

The Israeli policy is that direct negotiation without prior conditions is the only road to a Middle East settlement. That country's reaction to Rogers' speech was that the U.S. was asking Israel to become more "flexible."

While Israeli withdrawal from occupied lands was a major point in Rogers' speech, it was not as specific as it sounded. He left the door open for "insubstantial alterations required for mutual security."

This was taken by many Arab observers to mean Israel might hold on to the Syrian Golan Heights, the west bank of the Jordan River and other occupied lands it deemed necessary.

Regardless of the loopholes, Rogers' speech was the most comprehensive U.S. statement yet offered on Middle East policy and a show of diplomacy the administration had obviously been working on for months.

The timing of the announcement was also significant. Arab leaders are gathering in Morocco this week to form a united policy against Israel and Rogers is making an African tour in February.

"First Washington announced a major withdrawal, then a general withdrawal. I wish they'd withdraw a few of us privates while they are at it."

Local Government

The Belleville and Suburban Roads Commission is something of an anachronism — a body existing out of its time. Its jurisdiction covers arterial roads leading into the city and its annual budget is on the basis of 50 per cent paid by the province and 25 per cent each by the city and county respectively, the city's share being limited to one mill on the tax rate.

The Commission and similar bodies around the province belong, as one observer has put it, to the "horse and buggy" days. As suburban routes have been absorbed by the province so the Commission's functions have become more limited, yet as their deliberations earlier this week suggest, there remains much to do.

The three-phase reconstruction of Wallbridge road now in progress is a case in point, while construction of the CN railway overpass is scheduled for 1971, in addition to other projects. Suburban road expenditure this year, members learned, totalled approximately $124,000.

The Commission may be a carry-over from earlier days, but until such time as its functions become absorbed, say by the province, it remains an admirable example of local autonomy.

Another busy group — one of vital relevance to the protection of natural resources — is the Moira River Conservation Authority. Improvement of the river channel inside the city limit is an Authority matter which lately has been the subject of study by its consultants, and an early report to council is anticipated.

The perennial problem of spring flooding has also been considered by the engineering consultants. The firm recommends construction of a control dam and storage for the ice which each spring poses the threat of a dangerous pile-up.

These are all matters of moment to the city; they represent many hours of discussion and work by these local representative groups, activity which tends to be by-passed by citizens generally.

Wartime Legend

Down Milford way in Prince Edward County there is an ex navy commander who holds the Distinguished Service Cross and bar, the Order of the British Empire and the American Legion of Merit.

One of several vessels Commander J. Plomer had charge of was the destroyer HMCS Cayuga. The ship's "surgeon" was one Ferdinand Waldo Demara.

Commander Plomer had to have a tooth pulled and surgeon Demara obliged.

Relating the incident to Belleville Rotarians earlier this week, Commander Plomer came in for some good-natured joshing as to his judgment of professional men. And why? Because Ferdinand Waldo Demara was none other than "The Great Imposter," a man of many parts whose incredible life story has been the subject of a book by American Robert Crichton and a movie with Tony Curtis in the title role.

"He took my tooth out — I have had worse done by professionals," the Cayuga's former commander said. In his book, writer Crichton also relates how Demara treated 19 wounded Koreans (it was during the Korean war) who were located on board.

For his part Commander Plomer is busy writing a biography of railroad executive Sir Henry Thornton who back in the early twenties welded Canada's half-dozen or so major railways and a host of smaller ones into the Canadian National, and in so doing helped forge the nationhood which in those days was a hesitant, intangible element in Canadian life. For as Commander Plomer explained, the growth of the railway brought together many of the country's diverse ethnic groups and built up a vast communications system involving travel by both land and sea.

Thornton, he said, was not only a famous Canadian but an international celebrity and friend of kings and commoners. With King George V he shared a phenomenal memory for faces and names, a quality incidentally inherited by the present monarch, Queen Elizabeth.

Commander Plomer, who is a member of the Prince Edward County Education Board, has an interesting background. Born in England and raised in South Africa he has lived in Canada for many years, yet still retains the resonant tones of his native heath.

Provincial 'Rights' Throttle Progress

Kingston Whig-Standard

The constitution conference just ended in Ottawa brought forth nothing, although it was the fourth such meeting. For the next meeting — scheduled for a single day in February — it has been suggested that three matters might be discussed — the economic situation; pollution; taxation. The average citizen might be excused for wondering just what these topics have to do with the constitution of Canada.

Federalism is indeed the only real constitutional issue in this country, although nobody talks about it. There probably won't be any Canada as we know it if the provinces and Ottawa continue to wrangle about their respective spheres of interest instead of doing something to give the country a strong, effective, central government. Provincial rights have throttled this country in a thousand different areas from education to pollution control.

Most Canadians don't care greatly about the preservation of provincial "rights". They do care about effective government in a strong, united country. They know they haven't got that yet and they have just had a demonstration of the fact that the politicians they elected to manage their provincial governments are more concerned about their own power than about the good of Canada as a whole.

Ontario Election in 1971

A Province and Its Needs

Hamilton Spectator

Rallying Ontario Conservatives to the cause, Premier Robarts has told his party to get ready for a provincial election in 1971. The signal has sound ed for all parties; the politicians have just over a year to get their policies in shape for sale to the voters.

Issues that face the province warrant long range planning, research, thinking and review at the riding level. That work should start now. The drum beating and image-making can wait until campaign time.

Ontarians have a right to expect results — legislation from the Tory government or constructive policy alternatives from the Liberals and New either in expenditures or tax levies.

Democrats on questions that scream for answers. For example:

Municipal finances — cities and towns can't pay for local services out of property taxes, so councils rely on government hand-outs that change from year to year. Without revenue control, municipalities can not plan ahead with assurance

School taxes — a primary cause of the problem cited above. In many communities, particularly city suburbs, school costs have run away with local finances, often absorbing as much as two thirds of municipal budgets. Regional government should help create a balance but unless school spending is curbed, education will continue devouring an increasing share of the budget, diminishing the supply of money for all other services.

Urban problems — pollution, transportation and renewal, primarily. If the Conservatives can not deliver measurable improvements by election time; the people will be looking for a party that promises a better performance, based on clearly defined policies. Ottawa bears varying degrees of responsibility in these fields, but as provincial creatures, the municipalities must look to Queen's Park for results.

Health and hospital insurance — widespread dissatisfaction with premiums and procedures should move the government to rationalize or alter its programs, and stir the opposition parties to talk about alternative schemes and costs.

Conservation—Ontario's surge of population and industry have absorbed thousands of acres of farmland, wilderness and beaches, reducing open space accessible to the large urban concentrations. Surviving space must be protected to handle increasing numbers of people with lots of leisure time.

Planning — big cities generate development of housing, commerce, industry and highways far beyond their borders. Yet even regional municipalities are not empowered to plan for growth outside their own territory. Only the government can knit planning into a provincial pattern.

Provincial members' pay, regional government, inter - city transportation, consumer protection and other issues may provide additional election fodder. There is plenty of work for the parties to do before 1971.

The Economics of Golf

Windsor Star

Golf courses in the summer can get almost as crowded as downtown streets in the Christmas rush. But they still remain an oasis in the concrete jungle, and as such they deserve to be preserved.

Like other green areas, golf courses are costly to maintain. They earn a certain amount unlike city parks. But their capacity to produce revenue is far lower per acre than industrial land.

Up to the present, most Ontario municipalities have taken these factors into account in setting taxes on golf courses. Some have been taxed on the same basis as farm land. But when the province of Ontario takes over assessments at the beginning of next year, the system will change and the taxes on golf courses will jump.

Owners of public courses can make an arrangement to hold taxes down, but only on terms which prevent their selling the land for anything else but golf course use. This ensures that the green areas will remain, but it is hard for the owners and will tend to discourage the development of new courses.

Other such anomalies will no doubt appear as the provincial assessment system comes into effect. In cases such as this, where there is apparent unfairness, the department of municipal affairs should move to make corrections.

Portable Playgrounds

German Features

DORTMUND — A small playground that children can build to suit themselves has been introduced by the Association of German Garden and Landscaping Architects.

With all elements made of plastic, it includes light - weight building cubes, climbing "shells", slides and other items. Possible combinations are up to the imagination of children — the elements can be used to form tunnels, caves or an imaginary ship's deck, for example.

Because of their lightness, the elements can be transported easily from one location to another or interchanged among children in a neighborhood.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

December 17, 1949.

Members of the Belleville Public Utilities Commission wound up their business for the year Friday when they held their last regular meeting of 1949. All members of the commission, including Chairman Russell Wotten, Mayor D. L. Storey and Frank Follwell attended.

The Belleville Club's annual Christmas party met with success as nearly 100 members enjoyed the conviviality of the evening amid a setting fit for the occasion. One of the highlights of the night was the turkey draw competitions and many were successful and received their poultry prizes. The lucky winners were: John Buchan, Steve Flintoft, Arthur Bateman, John Ryan, Wilfred Laporte, W. H. Morton, W. C. Mikel, C. L. Jewell George Lanning and T. T. Wills.

30 YEARS AGO

December 17, 1939.

An excellent Christmas concert was presented by the schools of Bridge Street Church Sunday School before a capacity audience in the Sunday School auditorium.

Tabernacle Sunday School was crowded with eager scholars and happy adults last night on the occasion of the annual Sunday School entertainment.

Christmas entertainment of a varied nature preceded the visit of Santa Claus to St. Andrew's Church Sunday School classes. The Sunday School students and their parents were treated to pictures of the Royal Tour, Biblical pictures and suitable Christmas pantomime that proved adaptable for the occasion.

40 YEARS AGO

December 17, 1929.

An interesting event took place at the Metropolitan Store here, when the staff of the store presented the popular manager, T. Williams, with a handsome, high class wrist watch. The assistant manager, Mr. Rayner, received a pen and pencil set of high quality.

McKee's harness shop and Roland's barber shop in Stirling were destroyed by fire early this morning.

50 YEARS AGO

December 17, 1919.

The Children's Shelter Santa Claus fund now amounts to $671.

The members of the Canadian War Contingent Association in this city recently presented a silver mesh bag containing a sum of money in gold to Miss M. B. Faulkner, the president of the Association. The presentation took place at the Hotel Quinte.

W. B. Northrup, KC, Clerk of the House of Commons, and formerly of this city, is spending a few days in town.

Mayor Platt has informed that he will not be a candidate for re-election to the mayor's chair at the coming elections.

Far Off Fields and All That

Richard Needham in The Globe and Mail

The same students who ma 20 and 30 miles for India, Afra, etc., would jump do their dear old mother's throat if she asked them to go pick a loaf of bread at the corner store. I think this is a case of distance lending enchantment to the view. How easy we find it to help people we don't know, how difficult to help those we do!

Rochdale College—A Decadent Symbol of Our Gullible Times

Bruce West in The Globe and Mail

The recent debacle of Rochdale College should speak for itself as an example of what happens when advocates of a brave new world without rules or restrictions actually take control of something. Yet, under the constant brainwashing to which the public is now subjected, this interesting object lesson will probably be forgotten in a matter of weeks.

It is one of the great paradoxes of modern society that today, in the midst of what is supposed to be such a highly sophisticated age, there seem to be more gullible people than ever before. Give a bit of sheer nonsense an interesting name, deck it with an attractive catchphrase, and you can sell it anywhere. The country boomed in, people to make oil peddler or the pitchman at a rural fair in the square or the old, wild west on easier mark than many of our so-called modern swingers.

The trouble is that the voices of the present hawkers of questionable wares have been magnified a million times, until they reach into virtually every home. By TV, literature and radio there was a sucker born every minute. Now that we have television and a population explosion on our hands, the chances are this rate has increased considerably. So, the best time some spoiled and squalling brat wants to climb out of the kiddie-seat and take over the wheel of some group of intimidated elders will probably let him do so. After all, that's the mood of the times. And if you're one of those permissive souls who is prepared to move over, watch that you don't give Junior any advice about the little girl next door, because he may make you get the hell out and walk.

NHL Franchise

Vancouver Finally Makes It

Owen Sound Sun-Times

All good things come of those who wait, according to adage, and so Vancouver finally has a franchise in the National Hockey League. Of course, there was more than just waiting involved before a third Canadian city obtained entry to hockey's elite professional circle. Six million bucks, to be explicit.

Three years or so ago, when the NHL first expanded, a new franchise cost only $2,000,000. This year the price tag went up to $6,000,000 and the result is that about 70 per cent of the new Vancouver Canucks team is owned in the United States.

Following its recent custom of ignoring geography, the NHL has placed Vancouver in the league's eastern division, along with Montreal, Toronto, Detroit, New York, Boston and Buffalo, the latter another new team for the 1970-71 season.

The NHL move is fairly obvious. Placing all the Canadian teams in one division ensures that a United States team will be in the Stanley Cup final, vision, and will keep the lucrative U.S. television support pouring in until the final series is completed.

No one will ever accuse the NHL owners of letting their hearts rule their heads. Their ears are too keenly attuned to the ring of the cash register.

Orville flew it 120 feet in 12 seconds—enough to convince the brothers that sustained flight was possible—and they pursued a successful aircraft business.

Charges May Be Laid Against Firm Selling Rural House Lots

TORONTO (CP) — The legislature, expected to end its longest session in history today, heard Tuesday that charges may be laid following an investigation into Whitcrock Estates, a land investment firm, and its associated companies.

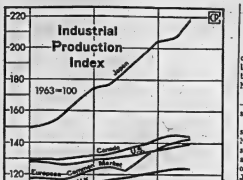
MPPs, sitting on the 172nd day of the session, heard Finance Minister Leslie Rowntree say the investigation had been made by officials of the Ontario finance department. He refused to say against whom charges are being considered or what the charges might be.

He said he would elaborate after consultation with Attorney-General Arthur Wishart. The latter said justice department investigators have further research to do into land registry office records before deciding what charges might be laid.

Asked what members of the public who have signed contracts with Whitcrock or its associates might do pending the court charges, Mr. Rowntree said they should get in touch immediately with the finance department's real estate branch.

Earlier this year legislature members questioned Whitcrock's subdividing activities on large plots of land purchased in rural areas of Ontario, particularly whether these lands were properly serviced with roads or other essential services.

Mr. Rowntree ordered the investigation under the Real Estate and Business Brokers Act.



In other business:

—Mr. Wishart said an inquiry has been completed into charges of violence by a provincial police officer against an Indian at Moosonee but a report will not be released until testimony is taken at a trial in that area.

—Education Minister William Davis said a recent bill which gives his department power over school board budgets "simply puts in statute form" power that already exists in government regulations. He declined to say whether the new regulations will permit the department to disallow board projects.

—Final approval is expected today to the Research Animals Act and an act to amend the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals Act. The legislation will force pounds to hand animals over for research after a redemption period.

—A proposed new landlord-tenant law was approved by clauses after a Liberal amendment calling for rental review boards was ruled out of order. The law, which removed a landlord's right to security deposits is expected to get final approval today.

Canada is the only one of the leading industrial countries to show a slump in its 1969 industrial production. In the second quarter of the year Canada's industrial production stood at 144, a drop of one point from the first quarter. By comparison, Japan's index rose 13 points to 218 in the same period. (CP Newsmap)

Judge Need Not Be Lawyer

TORONTO (CP) — There is no need for judges appointed to provincial juvenile and family courts to have legal training, Attorney-General Arthur Wishart told the Ontario legislature Tuesday.

Mr. Wishart, replying to questions from Morton Shulman (NDP—Toronto High Park) said the appointment of a new provincial judge at Oakville Monday was made according to the law.

Longest, Busiest Legislature Session Ending

TORONTO (CP) — The second session of the 28th Ontario legislature was expected to end today, 173 days after it began in November, 1968.

It will have been the longest —and perhaps and busiest—session in provincial history.

Until the 1950s, the normal session lasted about 50 days. Not until 1965 did the legislature set a record of 110 sitting days, a mark beaten by the first half of this session which ended last June 28 after 117 days.

The third session will open in February.

Almost 200 pieces of legislation have been considered by the 117 elected members. Many of them were based on the McIlwer report on civil rights and followed the reports recommendation for provision of a right of appeal against every legislative action.

But there were bills which seriously affected the popularity of the 68-member Conservative government, which has held power for 25 years. None of them hurt more than a bill which the government could not avoid—entry into a federal medical care insurance program—and another which did not have to be passed—the use of cats and dogs for medical and scientific research.

Other major legislation in this session, which was interrupted by a recess for July, August and September:

—A new landlord-tenant act which sought to create a better deal for persons renting living accommodation;

—Takeover by the province of municipal assessments and a five-year plan for equalizing the values placed on taxable properties everywhere in Ontario;

—Writing of a new mining act which will force mining companies to process more of their ore in Canada;

—A new police act which gives the attorney-general power to regulate the use of police weapons including guns, mob-control chemicals and electronic surveillance devices;

—Changes in business legislation to improve protection of the public, as a result of disastrous bankruptcies of Atlantic Acceptance Corp. and Prudential Finance Corp.;

—Rewriting of the Highway Traffic Act, increasing and in some cases doubling penalties for offences and giving police increased powers of arrest without warrant.

ED. LOGAN - JEWELLER
has the most accurate watch in the world.
Accutron® by Bulova

ACCUTRON, Exclusive tuning fork movement, in yellow gold filled, 20014T 51.95.
ACCUTRON, with tuf crystal, 14K yellow gold, 20403T 218.95.
ACCUTRON CALENDAR, 14K yellow gold, 20402T 295.00.
BUTZ AERO DATE, 14K yellow gold, 21007T 327.50.

What accounts for this extraordinary accuracy? Instead of the usual wheels and springs, Accutron has a tiny, electronically-driven tuning fork whose vibrations split each second into 360 precise little intervals. Ordinary watches have balance wheels. The balance wheel splits the second, too, into 5 or 10 intervals. And not so precisely. That's why balance wheel watches can't compete with tuning fork time.

Because of that tuning fork, we can guarantee Accutron accuracy to within a minute a month*.

Commons Hurries to OK CYC Money Controller

OTTAWA (CP) — A government measure to prevent speculation in land about to be expropriated was saved by an unusual trade-off of votes in the Commons justice and legal affairs committee Tuesday.

Liberal Douglas Hogarth (New Westminster) jumped the party line to vote for a motion by Andrew Brewin (NDP—Greenwood) to strike out one provision of the government's new expropriation bill, being considered by the committee.

The clause in question provoked the strongest arguments of the day before the committee went on to approve the bill which makes sweeping reforms in an attempt to increase public confidence in the use of federal expropriation powers.

The clause would deny benefits to speculators from land bought in "anticipation of expropriation" by the Crown or from any knowledge or expectation, prior to the expropriation, of the public work or other public purpose. . . ."

Trudeau's Control Plan Rejected as Unsuitable

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons northern development committee, including its Liberal majority, has rejected Prime Minister Trudeau's suggestion that international control is the best way to fight possible pollution of Arctic waters.

In a report tabled in the Commons Tuesday, the committee said international controls are not stringent enough to protect temperate waters, let alone the Arctic waterways.

Bill Reforms Will Prevent Expropriation Speculation

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons completed clause-by-clause study Tuesday of a bill authorizing appointment of a financial controller over the Company of Young Canadians.

The government, seeking quick passage of the legislation, will ask for third and final reading in the Commons today so the bill can be referred to the Senate for consideration before the Christmas recess, scheduled for Friday.

The Commons took the unusual step of referring the bill to committee of the whole House instead of a Commons standing committee Tuesday after an informal vote on second reading.

Government House Leader Donald S. Macdonald said the move was necessitated by "the extreme urgency" of the legislation.

J. Patrick Nowlan (PC—Annapolis Valley) served notice at the close of Tuesdays' debate that his party will move today to have the bill sent back to the Commons broadcasting committee so that it may recommend dissolution of the CYC.

A Number of 'Timely' Suggestions To Help the Christmas Shopper

Giving the appropriate gift for Christmas is always a problem for most people. However a few gift suggestions can always come in handy.

Selling well this year are watches (including cuckoos) and wall plaques. Conventional watches are not selling as well according to a local salesman. "A decade ago, the circle dominated the shape of most watches, then came the square, followed by variations of these two forms."

Popular with the male members of society are automatic watches featuring calendars. The shape this year is both square and oblong rather than circular.

With women wide bands are popular although they are gradually going out of style. Eight out of ten watch bands in the bracelet style are sold to women. However, calendars and automatics are not as popular with women because they are rather bulky. Cocktail watches for evening wear are also "in" this season. The lavish use of diamonds, sapphires, rubies and emeralds embellish dials and bracelets of both men's and women's watches.

Clocks are always a booster. Varieties include the desk, boudoir and wall clocks.

The Victorian era clock is coming back into fashion. Enamel clocks with dainty flower designs are perfect for the bedroom dresser, as an ornament for the coffee table or to be placed on top of a fireplace.

The wall clocks come in two varieties - electric and battery operated. A cuckoo clock is often appreciated, especially if there are small children in the family.

Wall plaques can add much to a room's decor. Often it is that added touch, the last swish of the paint brush, that makes a beautiful picture a reality. Spanish decor is one of the most popular types today.

Queensboro Couple Wed 50 Years

An "At Home" was held at Queensboro United Church on Sunday, December 14 from 1.30 until 4.30 p.m. for Mr. and Mrs. Hurrell Moorcroft, wed 50 years.

In December, 1919, Hurrell Moorcroft and Ella Diamond were married at the bride's home in Madoc Township. Since that time they have resided on the Moorcroft homestead, now a Centennial Farm on the 10th concession.

Guests were greeted at the door by Mrs. Ray Howard (Verna) of Belleville; Mrs. Fred Howard (Grace) of Havelock; Everett Moorcroft of Madoc Township and Robert Moorcroft of Port Hope.

Mrs. Moorcroft was presented with a corsage of pink carnations and Mr. Moorcroft a boutonniere. They were then given seats of honor amid the gathering.

Tea was served from an attractive tea table centred with an appropriately decorated anniversary cake. It was poured by Mrs. Grace Holmes; Mrs. Bruce Leslie; Mrs. Allan Diamond; Mrs. George Allore; Mrs. Lottie Blair and Miss Alma Moorcroft.

The servers were Mrs. Bob Howard; Misses Lois and Marilyn Moorcroft and Misses Heather and Betty Ann Howard. Misses Ria and Dinie Howard served as well.

The guests were invited to sign the guest book and to tea by Mrs. Robert Moorcroft.

The honored couple received many cards and gifts as well as congratulatory messages from Ontario Prime Minister, Hon. John Robarts, Lee Grills, MP and Clarke Rollins, Hastings MPP. A scroll was presented on behalf of the provincial government.

Club Activities

ALPHA LAMBDA CHAPTER

The regular December meeting of Alpha Lambda Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, was held at the home of Mrs. Neil Smith, William Street last Wednesday with the President, Mrs. G. Hill in the chair. Two guests, Mrs. O. Green and Mrs. A. Ross joined the members for the evening.

The short business meeting was followed by a presentation by Mrs. Agnes Ross, who was introduced by Mrs. P. Burrowes. Mrs. Ross spoke on drama in music and she was thanked for a most enjoyable program by Mrs. L. Roebuck.

Following Mrs. Ross' address, Christmas gifts were exchanged and refreshments were served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. B. Carter.

Retarded Entertained By Belleville Group

NAPANEE — The Belleville and District Association for the Mentally Retarded was host recently to about 200 trainees from various Adult Rehabilitation Centres Industries (workshops and those from schools for the retarded who were over 16 years of age.

Young people were there from Peterborough, Belleville, Campbellford, Picton, Napanee, and Kingston. The party in Club Cedars in Campbellford was just like any other party for those in their 'teens and a bit older.

They did justice to the buffet supper, featuring h a m, turkey and salads. After a bit more dancing, the crowd of young people left for home, ending what was a first experience of the kind for many of them.

The new thought with respect to the retarded is to stress, not the amount of their retardation but the far greater amount of their capacity to be just like so-called normal individuals.

Six young people from the Morven School, and six from the workshop were among the 200. Chaperones and drivers were Harold Todd, past-president of the Lennox and Addington Association, and president of the region; Frits Julianen, Association-president, "Billy" Pollard, workshop administrator, and their wives and Mrs. Fernan Martin, principal of the Morven School and her husband.

Women's Institutes

MOUNTAIN VIEW WA

The December meeting of Mountain View Women's Institute was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Motley with Mrs. Fred Motley as co-hostess. This meeting was called couples' night with the gentlemen being welcome too. There were 21 members present, one woman guest and 15 gentlemen guests.

The business part of the meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Kenneth Motley. A gift to be sent to the mental hospital was presented at the roll call and two members paid into the birthday box. Christmas carols were then sung with Mrs. David Farner at the piano.

Progressive euchre was enjoyed for a time and at the conclusion the tables were moved together and everyone enjoyed a lunch provided by all members.

Pins Presented to Junior Hospital Volunteers

At a recent mother and daughter tea held at Education Hall, 11 junior volunteers were presented with pins. The pins represent a minimum of 50 hours of volunteer service by each girl.

Receiving pins were: Rosemary Reilley, Beverly Penn, Margaret O'Brien, Carol - Ann Henry, Patricia Ferch, Louise Chartrand, Kathy Burshaw, Marilyn Bailey, Catherine Desmond, Lauren Fish and Linda Lloyd.

Guests were received at the door by Mrs. B. E. Burley, Mrs. J. E. Nelles and Mrs. S. Bochnek. Conveners for the tea were Mrs. Durrant and her social committee. Mrs. R. G. Mourneau and Mrs. E. Adams poured tea.

Speaking to the girls were Mrs. B. E. Burley, president of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary; R. A. Joy administrative assistant Belleville General Hospital; Miss R. Gaw, Director of Nursing, B.G.H. and Mrs. S. Bochnek, chairman of Volunteer Services.

The Women's Hospital Auxiliary sponsors this in - hospital volunteer program. The girls work after school, on weekends and during the holidays. Their main areas of concentration are the 4th level pediatrics and the free lending library and magazine distribution. They also supplement for cradle pictures requiring a three week training period, taken during the summer months.

Training for pediatrics is given by the nursing office, unit supervisor, play therapist and volunteer convener.

Girls interested in doing something for the community and gaining an insight into the hospital structure can spend rewarding hours as junior volunteers, which often leads to a future career in hospital work.

Junior Volunteers Receive Pins

A special ceremony was held recently at Education Hall when the junior volunteers were presented with pins after completing 50 hours of volunteer services. They include, from left, Rosemary Reilley, Beverley Penn, Margaret O'Brien, Carol-Ann Henry, Patricia Ferch, Louise Chartrand and Kathy Burshaw. Mrs. B. E. Burley, president of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, presents the pins as Mrs. S. Bochnek, Chairman of Volunteer Services, looks on.

After Santa gave out presents and bags of candy, everyone partook of a buffet lunch.

UCW Program on Yule Traditions

DESERONTO — The evening unit of the Deseronto UCW held its annual December visit to the manse last Thursday, with the secretary, Mrs. Harold Piercy, in charge both of the devotional period and of the program. Instead of having the Scripture lesson read, she used a record which gave a reading of the Nativity story, and carols by the Leslie Bell Singers. Then followed carol singing by the group. She, herself gave the meditation, treating the 'joys of Christmas.' Prayer closed this section of the meeting.

In answering the roll call, each woman was required to say something kind about the lady sitting next to her. Minutes read by Mrs. Piercy, and the financial report by Mrs. Harold Transue, were both accepted. Satisfaction was expressed over the financial returns from the successful bazaar November 29. Announcement was made of a general meeting in January.

For the program period Mrs. Piercy used an article giving a credit line to the various traditions which have grown around Christmas, such as the tree, candles, gifts, carols, holly, mistletoe, greeting cards and Christmas seals. Each legend was read by a woman to whom the information had been given. Mrs. Ralph Aylsworth, Mrs. Percy VanVlack, Mrs. Howard VanVlack, Mrs. Roland Anderson, Mrs. Gladys Gould, Mrs. Ross Sexsmith, and Mrs. R. S. Boyce were the readers. Mrs. Piercy had spotted the article in the current number of 'The War Cry'. Carol singing followed, and then two contests, won by Mrs. William Hendry and Mrs. Ross Sexsmith. After an exchange of gifts, refreshments were served, with Mrs. George Lyons and Mrs. Bruce Cuthill, leader of the unit, assisting the hostess.

UCW MEETINGS

TABERNACLE UCW

Tabernacle UCW held a dessert meeting in the church hall recently with a good attendance. After the meal, a Christmas program was presented, in charge was unit 8, Mrs. J. Cornell read a Christmas story intermingled with Christmas carols.

Unit 9 was in charge of the devotional period. Mrs. Carol Coons and Mrs. R. Pickel read the Scripture and meditation and led in a Christmas prayer.

The meeting closed with the benediction by Mrs. Stenson.

Ready for the Festive Table

After all of your loving efforts the beautiful bird is ready for the table. Mary Moore gives you two methods of roasting turkey — the standard one and the low-slow method that many of our readers have adopted because of its dependability and ease and tenderness.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Low, Slow Way to Cook Turkey

By MARY MOORE

These two turkey roasting methods will be your guide come Christmas Day. The low slow method was so popular last year I have decided to repeat it. I have included the higher temperature method too for those who prefer it.

ROAST STUFFED TURKEY (15 to 18 lbs.—low, slow method)

One 15-lb. oven - ready turkey (thawed if frozen)

STUFFING:

3-3 cup butter or margarine
1 cup chopped Spanish or other mild onion
12 cups soft fresh bread-crumbs (not packed)
2 tsps. salt
6 tbsps. chopped parsley (or bottled flakes)
½ tsp. (to more) rosemary
2 cups either canned, drained chopped Chinese bamboo shoots OR water chestnuts OR mushrooms OR celery

In an outsize frying pan or saucepan gently melt the butter or margarine and in it sauté the onion until soaked, not brown. Add the crumbs, mix well and let stand over very low heat until butter just begins to crispen them. Remove at once and add all remaining ingredients. When cool stuff into ready turkey but do not pack. Close opening with skewers and tie wings and legs to body of bird. Brush skin with melted butter. Cover with a tent of wide heavy duty foil and put on trivet in roaster in oven at 7 or 8 a.m. on Christmas morning at 185 deg. Fahr. It should brown skin. Remove foil if it is not browning quickly enough.

SAVORY STUFFED ROAST TURKEY (14-15 lbs. —regular method)

16 slices fresh white bread crumbled (buzzing in blender speeds up crumbing)
¾ lb. margarine
1 tbsp. savory
1 tbsp. chopped parsley or bottled flakes (optional)
1½ tsp. salt
1 tsp. onion salt
1 tsp. celery salt (or celery seed)

In a large pot melt the margarine and add the savory, parsley (if used.) salt, onion salt and celery salt and gently saute until seasonings are soaked with margarine. Add the bread crumbs, crispen a little and mix well and stuff prepared 14 to 15 - lb. bird, thawed, if frozen. Skewer, tie the turkey and butter the skin and roast it at 325 deg. Fahr. for 2 hrs. then reduce heat to 250 deg. Fahr. for 2½ hrs. It will be roasted to a delicious golden brown and will be moist and tender. Baste your turkey if you wish.

A CHRISTMAS REMINDER

As in previous years, anyone wishing to have a social or personal item in the Intelligencer Christmas issue is requested to mail information or phone the Social Department at the Intelligencer no later than December 22. No other contacts will be made in the solicitation of Yule personals.

Elect Officers

Christ Church ACW Hold Christmas Meeting

Recently, the members of the ACW Evening Branch of Christ Church met in the parish hall for their business meeting.

Before the meeting, Canon R. B. DeBolt Wright conducted the installation of officers for the coming year as follows: honorary president, Mrs. R. B. Wright; honorary vice-president, Mrs. E. Smith; past president, Mrs. J. Kilburn; president, Mrs. L. Stephens; vice-president, Mrs. H. Rose; treasurer, Mrs. P. Burton; secretary, Mrs. J. Chase; prayer partner's secretary, Mrs. E. Smith; "Living Message," Mrs. A. V. Smith; social convener, Mrs. E. Green; sunshine fund, Mrs. L. Mason; telephone convener Mrs. J. Spencer; refreshments, Miss Frances Reid; pianist, Mrs. L. Williams.

Prior to the installation, Canon Wright gave the members an inspiring talk on the theme "Love casts out fear," and that most people don't know where they are going, and that the world is looking for "Love".

After the installation, the president, Mrs. J. Kilburn opened the business meeting with a hymn.

The minutes were approved as read by the secretary, Mrs. Earl Mossman. A letter of thanks was read from Mrs. F. Cook, who is home from the hospital. Reports were also given from all other departments. The past year has proved to be most gratifying to all members in all aspects of work.

The meeting was adjourned and a Christmas party was enjoyed by the members.

Points for Parents

By MARY ERTSON

Mother: "Oh, please go and play in your rooms for awhile. I'll never get the Christmas cookies baked if you're underfoot here in the kitchen."

Mother: "Put on your aprons and you can help me decorate the cookies. I'm going to make some shaped like Christmas trees and some like angels."

Part of the pleasure of Christmas for children is in the anticipation, planning and sharing. Let them help with the chores even if it does take longer to get things done.

Ann Landers

Pushers of Drugs Rarely Use Them

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My I say a word to the potheads who keep saying marijuana is better for you than alcohol? (It's the same as saying typhoid is better for you than small pox.) I just read something so funny it blew my mind.

ANN LANDERS

The Feds caught up with a college kid who plunked down 30 grand for a half ton of pot. It's hard to believe a college student could lay his hands on that much scratch. But he did. The dumb chick planned to fly it from Mexico to San Francisco.

How many kids could get soaked on a half ton of grass? How much profit is there in that much alfalfa? Who gets rich? Who gets stuck? The kid who was caught pushing the stuff was no user. When asked how many joints he smoked a day he replied, "It's to sell, Stupid."

The pushers I know (and I know several) tell me it's strictly business with them. They're too smart to use it themselves. Just sign me — ONE TRIP WARREN.

DEAR ONE: Thanks for the travelogue. I read you loud and clear.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: This is for the lady who discovered an 11-year-old boy in the ladies room "getting his eyes full." She can call it "shocking and outrageous" if she wishes, but it's a well known fact that a tendency toward voyeurism (a fancy word for "getting one's eyes full") is common among the majority of men and women in our society.

The youngster who lay down on the floor to look up into the next booth could have been arrested if he had not been a minor. The charge would be disorderly conduct and he would have to pay a fine or go to jail.

It would be interesting to know whether this boy received any sex education at home or in school. I'll bet the answer is no. — THE OLD BARN OWL.

DEAR BARN: No takers here. I'd bet no, too.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My head is splitting because my husband and I have just had the same fight for the fifteenth time.

Lawrence insists that when a man is asked by a male friend taboot a social engagement — "Can you and your wife be our guests at the Country Club Dinner Dance next Saturday?" he is supposed to say, "I'll check with my wife." Then his wife is supposed to call the man's wife and let her know if they are available. I do not agree. I told Lawrance that the man, since he was asked, should check with his wife, then he should call his friend and tell him yes or no.

We missed out on a fancy evening recently because Lawrence did not call his friend back. He assumed I had called the man's wife. Lawrence has been so mad for three days, he hasn't spoken a word.

We've had this sort of problem so many times I'm ready to brain him. Is there a solution? If so, what is it? — YOU TELL ME.

DEAR YOU: The social arrangements between married couples should be made by the women, not the men. When a man asks another man, "Can you and your wife come to dinner?" — or whatever — he should say, " My wife makes the social plans in our family. Please ask your wife to call her."

* * *

CONFIDENTIAL TO RIGHT OR WRONG, YES OR NO: Your question cannot be answered by a "yes" or a "no", nor can it be considered a matter of right or wrong. I can only offer an opinion. I am sick to death of all the talk about hair. It is not that important. The following quote from Lycurgus, a leader of Sparta, mirrors my own views: "Hair makes good-looking men more beautiful and ill-looking men more terrible."

Hair Pieces Not Recommended for Every Day Wear

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: My 15-year-old daughter has wavy hair, but it is so thin; she has no body to her hair. She can only wear it cut very short, cropped close to her head.

Is there any treatment that you know of that can thicken hair? The wavy hair we know can be straightened, but does this harm the hair in any way?

Nowadays, all the girls wear their hair long, and we have talked of purchasing a fall to improve this problem. Do you think she is too young to wear hair pieces to school?

She is very self-conscious about this and it is affecting her personality. She isn't the happy outgoing girl I would like to see her be. — Not a Crowning Glory

Dear Not A: The foods you eat, the hours you keep, the anxieties and tensions you build up during the day are reflected in your top knot.

There are products on the market that give body to fine hair. Any chemical processes like straightening the hair or curling the hair take their toll of hair strength, but are all right if done with discretion.

There's not a thing wrong with the new wash-and-wear full wigs for special occasions — and for wavy hair one of these would be better than a fall or hair piece. I'd hesitate to recommend it for everyday wear.

* * *

Dear Doris: I would like the names of some books to assist us in telling our children "the facts of life." I have told them that babies come from their mother's tummies, but I am wondering just how they should be told about how the baby gets there, etc.

My mother was not one to talk about such things, and I never felt very close to her in this respect. I do not want my children to feel this way, but rather that they can come to us with any questions they may have, and know that we will talk things over with them to the best of our ability. — At a Loss

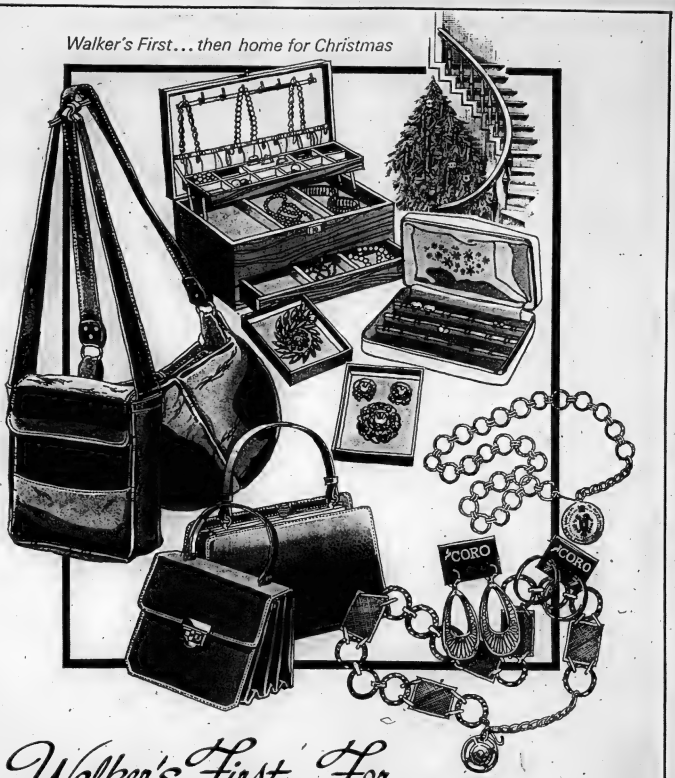
DORIS CLARK

Dear At A Loss: You struck a snag — the snag that stops many a brave soul. Yet there are natural, comfortable ways of explaining the roles of Mummy and Daddy in this important undertaking.

If you don't tackle it, somebody else will. We don't want it to be the kids on the street corner, or anybody who will distort the facts and make it all seem fearful as well as taboo. This is one intimate subject which can pave the way for chummy chats later — about any old thing.

I'm sending you the list on which I recommend several well-written books and booklets about the facts of life, sex, dating, and related topics.

Confidential to Thirty-Five Years: A 35th anniversary is a reasonable facsimile of a 25th, which is written up in the sheet I am sending you.



Invite the original wedding party, if possible, the clergyman who performed the ceremony, family and close friends.

By tradition the 35th anniversary is coral or jade which gives you some leeway as to color scheme.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League

QUESTION: What are some of the major activities that will be on in Miami during the Orange Bowl festival week?

ANSWER: There'll be no end of fun, excitement and activity. The big highlight, of course, will be the Orange Bowl football game on New Year's night. The parade in downtown Miami is always worth seeing. There'll be an Orange Bowl regatta, hydroplane races and then, later, the National Professional League playoff game featuring two of the top teams in the National League. Make sure you have accommodation booked.

QUESTION: We plan to be in Miami shortly after the first of the New Year and would like to get tickets to see the Jackie Gleason Show. Can you help?

ANSWER: I am sorry to tell you that the season's quota of tickets for the 1969-70 Gleason shows has already been filled. Apparently people are ordering a year in advance. If you do the same, you should write to the Jackie Gleason show, 1700 Washington Ave., Miami Beach. There is a limit of two tickets per request, and a return, self-addressed envelope.

* * *

QUESTION: What kind of temperature may we expect in Miami in mid-December?

ANSWER: If it is a normal month you could look for an average monthly high of 77 degrees and an average month ly low of 59 degrees. And, in the event you are interested in rain possibilities, the weatherman says there will be about two inches of rainfall during December and seven days throughout the month in which rain will fall.

QUESTION: Is it true that Florida is now the fastest-growing state? When I was there 10 years ago it was very sparsely settled.

ANSWER: The past decade has seen remarkable changes in Florida and the growth has been phenomenal. This state is now the fastest growing. The population in 1967 was 5,9980,000. Experts predict this will soar to 9,650,000 by 1985. This would be a whopping 61 percent increase. When you get back there, you will notice some of the great changes are in the improvement and expansion of roads

Not giving the proper turn signals as required by law while driving upon a highway is a bad driving habit. Many motorists disregard using turn signals, or are not aware that the proper turn signal is required prior to starting and entering a stream of traffic from a parked position, and 100 feet in advance of turning or lane change movements.

Inoperative turn signals on your vehicle do not exempt you from making the proper turn signal. Proper hand signals must then be made. Also, motorists must give a signal prior to stopping.

Inoperative tail lights on your vehicle don't exempt you from making the proper stopping signal. Hand signals must then be used. Any motorist violating the proper signal law shall, upon conviction pay a fine of not less than $20 and not more than $100, and in addition will lose two points on his driving record.

On losing nine points, you are called in for an interview to show cause why your license should not be suspended.

With a loss of 15 points, your license is automatically suspended. Some motorists have the bad habit of waiting until they are about to turn before signalling. Particularly during the winter months, it is absolutely essential to let the driver behind you know that you are going to turn well in advance. With slippery highways in the winter, you can't stop suddenly without causing an accident and this can lead to a chain reaction when there may be as many as a half dozen cars involved by your carelessness.

MPs Want Pollution Made Crime

OTTAWA (CP) — After a rapid succession of brief anti-pollution speeches, the Commons gave second reading Tuesday to a private member's bill that would make water pollution an offence under the Criminal Code.

The measure, proposed by David Anderson (L—Esquimalt-Saanich), would make it an offence to discharge noxious matter including raw sewage into interprovincial waters or the sea, thus endangering the lives, safety, health or comfort of the public.

A first offender would be liable to a fine of $25,000, with a $50,000 fine for a second offence.

Lloyd Francis (L—Ottawa West) said that there must be an over-all attack on the water-pollution problem.

The Ottawa area had some of the most glaring instances of pollution, such as the Rideau River. But the problem would not be solved by the passage of Mr. Anderson's bill because long-term planning was needed.

Gordon Aiken (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka) said the bill would strengthen the proposed Canada water act.

Phosphates Ban Said Not Simple

OTTAWA (CP) — Proposals to ban phosphates from detergents because they speed up the aging process of lakes and rivers are gross oversimplifications of the pollution problem, Dr. O. M. Solandt said Thursday.

He told a news conference that the phosphate pollution problem is far too complex for such an easy solution. It was almost a classic sociological and technical confusion, when first put into detergents, phosphates were regarded as a completely safe ingredient.

Whole industries had been geared to phosphate-base detergents and would be seriously involved in any attempted solution. For example, most dishwashers and washing machines manufactured now function properly only with phosphate-based detergents.

Dr. Solandt, chairman of the Science Council of Canada, cautioned at a news conference that his views are "slightly biased" because he also is vice-chairman of the Electric Reduction Co., the country's major producer of phosphates for detergents among other chemical products.

Irving and Wardell Challenge Press Inquiry

THE PICK OF Punch

"Bye-bye, Mummy and Daddy! Thank you for a lovely childhood."

OTTAWA (CP) — A Senate inquiry into the news business boiled up Tuesday after a week of quiet bearings with charges that one of the inquirers should disqualify himself on grounds of bias.

Testimony before the special Senate committee on mass media by New Brunswick industrialist K. C. Irving and publishers of his newspapers also featured an attack on Premier Louis Robichaud of New Brunswick.

The publishers, Michael Wardell of Fredericton and Ralph Costello of Saint John, said Senator C. B. McElman (L—New Brunswick), a committee member and outspoken critic of Mr. Irving's ownership of all five English-language daily newspapers in the province, should disqualify himself from the inquiry because of his alleged bias.

Mr. Irving, making a rare public appearance, charged that the Robichaud government had vowed to destroy Mr. Wardell and withdrew government business and arranged to cut off liquor advertising from the Fredericton publishing company.

That was after the 1963 federal election, in which the Frederickton Gleaner supported the Progressive Conservatives.

Mr. Wardell, in turn, said the Liberal government of Mr. Robichaud had booby-trapped Mr. Irving in a 1967 deal that saw control of Brunswick Mining and Smelting Co. pass to Noranda Mines Ltd. from Mr. Irving.

The British-born publisher, a colorful figure with an eye patch, said outside the committee that the provincial government aided the takeover of the multi-million dollar mining enterprise after Mr. Irving had balked at terms of a government loan.

Mr. Irving testifying in what a committee spokesman said was his first-ever public appearance in connection with his newspaper and broadcasting interests, charged in his statement that Mr. Robichaud is trying to destroy Mr. Wardell.

Senator McElman, who otherwise took little part in questioning the Irving group witnesses, denied the accusation by Mr. Irving and took issue also with features of testimony by Mr. Costello and Mr. Wardell.

Senator Keith Davey (L—Ontario), committee chairman, defended Senator McElman as a useful member of the committee who has shown an interest in other aspects of the press.

Answering accusations by Mr. Wardell that the inquiry forms part of harrassment, including the withdrawal of business from The Gleaner by the Liberal government of New Brunswick and a recent investigation of the Irving newspaper group by federal combines branch, Senator Davey said he was quite sure Senator McElman knew nothing in advance about plans for the present Senate inquiry.

Senator Keith Davey and Senator J. Harper Prowse (L—Alberta) challenged Mr. Wardell on a statement that the inquiry, in combination with other harrassment, amounts to an attack on freedom of the press.

Mr. Wardell, under persistent questioning, finally agreed with the principle of a press inquiry, but insisted outside that "it is shocking that the government of Canada be utilized in this way to harrass the newspapers of New Brunswick."

The components of a good newspaper, he said in answer to another question, would be the money of the Toronto Star, the Toronto Telegram's idea of having a forum for various opinions and the Toronto Globe and Mail's ratio of news to advertising.

Mr. Fisher said he considered the journalistic performance of Thomson newspapers to be low. He said he is fortunate enough not to have to read them.

Journalistic Guides

Editorials No Longer Influential: Columnist

OTTAWA (CP) — Former New Democrat politician Douglas Fisher said Tuesday the importance of newspaper editorials has diminished and he doubts whether the opinion of the editor of the Winnipeg Free Press, for example, count "for any more than that of a local taxi driver."

The Toronto Telegram columnist was asked at the Senate committee on mass media whether reporters or editors exerted influence over politicians as some had in the past.

He said there was no great influence nowadays that he knew about.

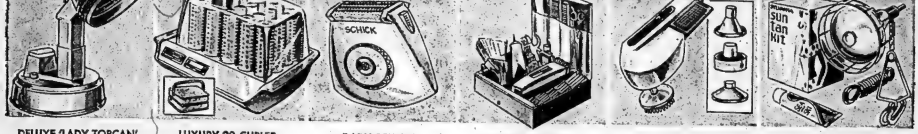
Senator Charles McElman (L—New Brunswick) asked why journalists in the press gallery and their newspapers always raised such a fuss when members of Parliament sought an increase in pay.

Because the journalists are so badly paid themselves, Mr. Fisher said. A major factor has been the resistance of publishers to attempts of newspapermen to organize for better pay and conditions through the American Newspaper Guild.

Questioned by committee lawyer Yves Fortier, Mr. Fisher agreed press gallery reporters "less their cool" during the parliamentary pipeline debate of 1956. They also tended to take sides during political scandals of Lester Pearson's administration.

The gallery seemed to follow the herd instinct during the elections of John Diefenbaker in 1957 and Prime Minister Trudeau last year, but "they quickly readjusted."

He said he personally regrets the linking of political names with Gerda Munsinger in that affair of a few years ago. Similarly, he did not like press exposure of Prime Minister Trudeau's date in London last year, but Canadian reporters then were under pressure to match accounts published by British newspapers.



Asked by Mr. Fortier to suggest guides for journalistic behavior, Mr. Fisher said generally they would include leaving a man's past alone, leaving his family alone and not reporting a situation if a public man "makes a fool of himself" at a private party.

Benvenuti Follower Indicted in Probe

NEW YORK (AP) — A grand jury probing boxing in New York indicted light heavyweight contender Frankie De Paula and two others Tuesday and named its attorney to the areas of bribery, extortion, loan-sharking and gambling.

The 29-year-old De Paula was named in a perjury indictment along with James (Jimmy Nap) Napoli, 57, an admitted gambler, and Joseph (Joe Carbo) Calabo, 44, a reputed hanger-on in the camp of middleweight champion Nino Benvenuti of Italy.

The indictments were announced by Alfred J. Scotti, chief assistant district attorney for New York County Manhattan, who said they were an outgrowth of the grand jury's investigation "to determine whether there has been in existence in the Count of New York a conspiracy to commit the crimes of sports bribing and sports bribe-receiving."

All three indictments, however, were handed down on perjury charges.

De Paula was released on $3,500 bond and Napoli and Calabro on $15,000 bonds.

On May 12, two weeks before Benvenuti lost a non-title bout to Dick Tiger at Madison Square Garden, Calabro and Bruno Amadozzi, Benvenuti's manager, were said by the grand jury to have met with Napoli between fights at the Garden

Rowers Adopt National Team Program in Gold Shortage

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Canadian rowing will adopt a national team-training program in an attempt to recover prestige lost in international competition.

The sport won this country gold and silver medals at the Melbourne, Rome and Tokyo Olympics, but failed to place a crew in any of the finals at Mexico City last year.

Canada's top oarsmen will assemble here next spring in a training camp aimed at developing the strongest possible national entry in the 1970 World Rowing Championships.

All of Canada's rowing clubs and colleges will be asked by the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen to send their best men. A national coach and a manager will be appointed, and a concerted five-month training program will begin, leading up to what the CAAO hopes will be a powerful seven-boat team for the world regatta here Sept. 2-6.

The national training plan, announced today by CAAO president Gerald Martin, is the direct result of a lengthy study carried out by a six-man committee of the national rowing body.

In the past, clubs and colleges raised their own entries. National trials then determined the best and CAAO officials formed Canada's rowing contingents from among the winners. But many of the country's best athletes were lost because they rowed in boats which lost at these trials.

The national team-training scheme is designed to remedy this situation.

"We feel it will be beneficial to rowing in two ways," said Martin, who chaired the six-man CAAO committee. "It will produce the strongest possible crews for international competition and will, at the same time, raise the calibre of club rowing all over Canada."

While the oarsmen and scullers who will gather at St. Catharines next spring are expected to make up Canada's proposed seven-boat entry in the 1970 World Rowing Championships, the plan does not rule out challenges by clubs and colleges wishing to row on their own.

If any of the national boats is challenged and beaten, then a special committee will have the power to designate the trial winners as part of the national team.

"However, the whole basis of our plan is to make the training camp team so strong any one boat can handle all challenges put to it," said Tony Biscaichi, the Brock University rowing coach and former international sculler who was a member of the six-man CAAO task force which drew up the national training plan.

The others include Chris Leach, a former Olympic oarsman now head coach of Port Credit Dons; Jim Roche, a former international sculler now head coach at Toronto Rowers; Neil Campbell, the well-known Olympic oarsman and Ridley College rowing coach, and Harry Edmonstone, past-president of the St. Catharines Rowing Club.

The over-all budget for next year's first attempt at forming a national rowing team has been estimated at $20,900 by the task force.

Each club or college placing an oarsman or sculler on the national team will be assessed a fee of $225 a man to help meet scheme expenses. The CAAO, in turn, will contribute $5,500 while another $8,650 is to be raised through subscription.

Plante Turns Play-Maker

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

St. Louis Blues have their scoring stars who often spark the team with two- or three-goal performances but it took the scoring plays of goalie Jacques Plante and defenceman Barclay Plager Tuesday to point out that a team effort wins hockey games.

Plante recorded his fifth National Hockey League career assist while Plager picked up a goal and two assists in a 6-4 victory over Detroit Red Wings in the only scheduled game.

Tim Ecclestone, Jim Roberts, Phil Goyette, Ab McDonald and Gary Sabourin provided one goal each.

Pete Stemkowski and Nick Libett each scored twice for the Red Wings.

Goyette's goal along with one assist pushed him into a share of the lead among scoring leaders. The St. Louis centre now has 15 goals and 25 assists for 41 points. Defencemen Bobby Orr of Boston Bruins has an equal total on eight goals and 33 assists.

The two leaders meet face-to-face Thursday night in the only game when Boston Bruins visit the Blues. Goyette and Orr now are four points ahead of the pace set last season by Boston centre Phil Esposito in his drive to the scoring championship. Esposito ended with a record 126 points on 49 goals and 77 assists.

The 15,913 fans at St. Louis saw the Red Wings take a 2-0 lead in the first period with first Stemkowski scoring and then Libett. Ecclestone beat Detroit goalie Roger Crozier to narrow the margin, but Stemkowski made it 3-1 less than four minutes later.

But Plager helped set up goals by McDonald and Goyette to tie the game before the period ended. Plager's third goal of the season and Sabourin's ninth put the Blues ahead to stay in the second period.

Sabourin took a clearing pass from Plante and streaked down centre ice, split the defence and poked the puck past Crozier.

Plante had an easy night in goal, stopping 16 Detroit shots while Crozier was pelted with 38 St. Louis drives.

The win gave the Blues a seven point lead over second place Minnesota North Stars in the West Division while the Red Wings remained four points back of third-place Montreal Canadiens in the East.

New York Rangers tonight have an opportunity to widen their East Division lead when they play host to Philadelphia Flyers. The Rangers are just two points ahead of Boston and four up on the Canadiens who travel to Pittsburgh to meet the Penguins. In other games, Chicago Black Hawks meet the Kings at Los Angeles and Minnesota faces the Seals at Oakland.

Baby Habs Reunite

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Junior Canadiens of last season, Memorial Cup champions, will be re-united here Dec. 19 to tackle the visiting Russian world hockey championship squad in an exhibition contest.

The Soviet team starts an eight-game tour of Canada tonight at Winnipeg against Canada's national team.

Now Canada's Turn To Balk at Tourney

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Canada's national hockey team may be withdrawn from the 1970 world tournament, scheduled for next March at Montreal and Winnipeg, depending on a rule interpretation.

The rule in question, approved last summer at an International Ice Hockey Federation congress in Switzerland, concerns the use of nine professionals by the Canadian team for the 1970 tournament.

Toronto businessman Charles Hay, president of Hockey Canada, threatened at a Montreal news conference Tuesday to pull his team out of the 1970 competition if the IIHF does not go along with his interpretation of the nine-professionals rule.

The IIHF rule allows the use of nine professionals, providing none of them have played in the National Hockey League this season and all are reinstated as amateurs by Feb. 15.

But Hay insists that NHL-owned players, transferred or loaned to minor league teams but recalled into NHL games on an emergency basis, should be eligible to play for the national team.

A. J. (Buck) Houle, general manager of Hockey Canada, along with NHL president Clarence Campbell and Montreal Canadiens president David Molson, who attended the news conference, all agreed with Hay's interpretation. Campbell and Molson are Hockey Canada directors.

"We are in the tournament under the rules as they now exist," Hay said. "If there are any changes in the rules allowing pros, then I can see us withdrawing and forgetting about the tournament in Montreal and Winnipeg."

Gordon Juckes, CAHA executive director, disagreed with Hay's interpretation. Juckes said in Winnipeg Tuesday: "I don't see how the rules can be changed now. If we wanted a change, we should have argued it then," at the meeting in Switzerland.

Juckes said the interpretation of the rule expressed at the Montreal news conference is "contrary to the interpretation put on the rule in Switzerland." He declined further comment until after a scheduled Thursday meeting in Winnipeg involving Hockey Canada officials, representatives of the Montreal Forum and Winnipeg Arena.

Hay reached later Tuesday when he returned to Toronto, reiterated his stand. "We don't intend to part from these rules," made at Switzerland, Hay said. " . . . If people keep on changing the rules (Hockey Canada) are not interested in being involved in it. . . . I don't think the public is going to be proud of us if we keep on conceding."

The change of rules referred to by Hay involves a threat last week by Avery Brundage, president of the International Olympic Committee, to disqualify any countries from the 1972 Winter Olympics if their hockey teams play against Canada's professionals in the world tournament.

Campbell announced Tuesday that all 12 NHL governors have agreed to provide players for Hockey Canada. He said the governors would like Houle to express his needs to the NHL general managers and "if a player in question is eligible . . . he will be made available."

It was previously believed professional player talent for Canada's national team would only come from the five Canadian-based teams, Toronto Maple Leafs and Montreal of the NHL, Quebec Aces and Montreal Voyageurs of the American League and Vancouver Canucks of the Western League.

Coach Parker Gets Two-year Vote of Confidence from Lions

VANCOUVER (CP) — If just a little of that old Jackie Parker power trickles down to the ranks from the lofty heights of the head coach's office, those chronically defanged British Columbia Lions may go into the next Canadian Football League season with a brand new set of dentures.

Parker, 37, one of the greatest football players ever to don cleats in the CFL, Tuesday was confirmed as the Lions' head coach for the next two years after holding the job for three months on an interim basis.

And in the gentle, guarded parlance of the professional sporting world, he let it be known that football players—big ones, small ones, fat ones and skinny ones—are the number one priority of his Christmas shopping list.

"We're not looking at positions, we're looking for players," intoned the former quarterback and halfback from Mississippi State—whose biggest problem right now appears to be quarterbacks.

Parker's appointment was announced at a news conference by club president Alan McEachern, who described him as "the greatest player our game has ever seen."

Parker is the all-time CFL scoring leader with a career total of 750 points. He's a three-time winner of CFL most valuable player honors.

Parker played with Edmonton Eskimos from 1954 through 1962 and was instrumental in the Eaks' three consecutive Grey Cup victories which started the year he joined the club. He moved to Toronto Argonauts in 1963 and played with them until injured in 1966.

After a brief fling as head coach of the Toronto Rifles of the Continental League in 1967, Parker joined the Lions as an assistant coach.

Top Gainers Give Chargers Double Threat

NEW YORK (AP) — San Diego Chargers' Dick Post and Lance Alworth captured the American Football League's rushing and receiving titles in last weekend's regular season finales while Jim Turner of New York Jets retained his scoring crown and rookie Greg Cook of Cincinnati Bengals emerged as the No. 1 passer.

Post rambled for 109 yards against Buffalo Bills to finish atop the rushing parade with a total of 873, 123 yards more than runner-up Jim Nance of Boston Patriots.

Alworth repeated as the top pass-catcher by grabbing seven against the Bills to beat out Oakland Raiders' Fred Biletnikoff 64-54 for the season. The San Diego flash went over the 1,000-yard mark for the seventh successive season and set a professional record of one or more receptions in 96 straight games.

Turner registered 129 points on 32 field goals and 33 extra point kicks for a 10-point edge over Jan Stenerud of Kansas City Chiefs. The Jet kicker won with 145 points a year ago.

Cook, first rookie passer to lead the league, nipped New York's Joe Namath and Oakland's Daryle Lamonica in the aerial ratings, based on average gain per pass play, percentage of completions, touchdown passes and interception percentage.

Ellis Offered $100,000 To Defend Against Chuvalo

TORONTO (CP) — Irv Ungerman, manager of Canadian heavyweight boxing champion George Chuvalo, Tuesday offered Jimmy Ellis of Louisville, Ky., $100,000 to defend his World Boxing Association title.

Ungerman also telephoned Dick Pearson, Canadian Boxing Federation secretary-treasurer in Saint John, N.B., to protest a CBF ultimatum that Chuvalo defend his Canadian title by Jan. 1.

"You have my signed contract that... George will accept $5,500 and $400 expenses to defend his title in January," Ungerman told Pearson. "How can the federation be so stupid as to threaten to take away his title after he has just won a far bigger fight in New York?"

Chuvalo stopped Jerry Quarry with a seventh-round knockout in the Friday bout at Madison Square Garden.

"You get a promoter and George will fight anybody," Ungerman said. "I read in the paper that someone has offered us $25,000 to fight Bob (Pretty Boy) Felstein. I don't want $25,000. I'll take $10,000 for that one."

Montreal promoter Lucin Gregoire has offered $3,000 for Chuvalo to meet second-ranked Charlie Chase for the Canadian crown.

Chuvalo's last title defence was in July, 1968, when he outpointed Jean-Claude Roy of Montmagny, Que., in a 12-round bout.

Ungerman said his telegraph bid to Angelo Dundee, manager of Ellis, was in answer to an earlier offer by Dundee's brother, Chris, offering Chuvalo $25,000 or 30 per cent of the gate receipts.

Ungerman said he hoped that a Chuvalo victory over Ellis would set up a return bout with Joe Frazier of Philadelphia and "George could make a quarter of a million."

Hill Best Scorer; Beard Doesn't Care

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) — Dave Hill of Jackson, Mich., Tuesday was named winner of the Vardon Trophy for the best scoring average on the pro golf tour.

Hill, the No. 2 money winner with $155,849 in 1969, played 90 rounds at an average of 70.344 blows to edge Frank Beard. Beard had 70.527 in 112 rounds but was the Professional Golfers Association dollar king with $173,746.

In order to qualify for the Vardon Trophy a tour player must complete at least 80 rounds. Last year's king—Billy Casper—was not eligible since he played only 72. Casper's 71.803 would have been only ninth best if he had been included. Last year's winning figure was 69.821.

Other top 10 this year are: 3. Tommy Aaron, 70.723 in 112; 4. Don January, 70.880 in 83; 5. Don Sikes, 70.929 in 98; 6. Lee Trevino, 70.943 in 106; 7. Arnold Palmer, 70.983 in 89; 8. Jack Nicklaus, 71.038 in 80; 9. Miller Barber, 71.207 in 111; 10. Dale Douglass, 71.278 in 126.

Beatle and Wife in Toronto

TORONTO (CP) — Beatle John Lennon and his wife Yoko Ono arrived at Toronto International Airport from London Tuesday for a one-week visit to launch a Christmas crusade for peace.

Much to the dismay of some 1,000 placard-waving fans who had gathered to greet the pop singer, Lennon left quietly through a back door and was whisked away to a secret hideout.

In a statement he said: "It's great to be back in Canada again and we expect to stay for a week."

He said he would hold a news conference today.

Lennon and his wife travelled under the pseudonym of Mr. and Mrs. Chambers, but made little effort to hide their identity during the flight.

The Beatle told reporters he was sending the bill for his latest world peace gesture—the printing of thousands of Christmas posters reading "War Is Over, If You Want It"—to United States President Richard Nixon.

These posters now are being put up in 11 cities around the world, he said.

"They cost less than the life of one man, and I am sending the bill for printing to President Richard Nixon."

Lennon, who twice visited Canada earlier this year, said in London last Sunday he had decided to return to Canada because it was the best place to talk to the press about peace."

Generation Gap Comes at Six Years

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Speaking of the difference in looks between generations, as I was the other day, reminded me that the very word "generation" no longer means the same as it did.

The old dictionary definition of a "generation" is about a third-of-a-century, or 33 years. It used to refer to a time-period between the birth of the parents and the birth of their offspring. But, of course that kind of reckoning is totally outdated today.

Actually, a "generation" has been shrinking in time - span every decade since I was born. The modern rate of change has not only affected our technological and cultural lives, but it has telescoped the generations down to just a few years.

From 33 years, it was cut to at least 15 years a decade ago; and now, it is my educated guess a generation is six years or less. It used to be that the parents felt, or were regarded, as a generation away from their children: now the older children themselves feel a generational gap between them and their younger siblings.

My daughter, at 25, is as different from her teen-age siblings as they are from their own parents. My son of 9 is a different breed than my son of 14; not just different temperamentally, but the product of a new "mix" of influences.

Thus, when we speak glibly of the "generational gap" between parent and child, we are really talking about several quantum jumps, not one. And the distance seems so vast, as compared with previous ages in history, not because the gap itself is larger but because it consists of several separate stages of removal, rather than one.

My generation grew up with a very real sense of the past, for change was relatively slow, and manners and morals and institutionalized rules persisted for many decades. The new young people have been cut off from the past, because things happen so fast that even the present is a blur, much less the events of their parents' time. Hitler might as well have lived in the Middle Ages for most of them, and the Depression is as remote and antique as the Black Plague.

To blame them for this would be quite absurd and unjust. It is we who must understand what has happened under the tremendous sensory impact of the new technology, and find ways to reach them that can prevent the new freedom from turning into a new barbarism.

Sincere Appreciation

To the many people of Belleville who re-elected me to council.

I pledge myself to continue to exercise thoughtful judgment on the many issues that will affect our community.

My Best Wishes To All
For A Happy
Holiday Season

Sincerely
Alderman Enos David

Herod's Spies Everywhere

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

The king's pervasive web of spies and informers watched as the 10 dagger-carrying assassins stationed themselves in the lonely streets of Jerusalem, ready both to kill Herod and to die for it.

Those same ubiquitous eyes saw the scholars from the distant East, enter the city, hunting a new-born "king." The vigilant sentinels also reported when 40 devout men mounted the temple wall to tear down the Roman emblems.

In each case, mass death struck in Judea. It was the habit of a sick, shuddering and volcanic King Herod the Great.

"He was now overrun with suspicion and hatred against all about him," writes the ancient historian of that era, Josephus. "He encompassed the whole nation with guards, that it might by no means get from under his power."

And he masked his oppression with extravagant building projects, savage sports and perpetual "levees." Roman-style banquets that lasted far into the night.

Although biblical accounts scarcely mention it, the country at the time of Jesus' birth had been flooded with pagan Greco-Roman practices and structures—public steam baths, theaters, fortresses and hippodromes.

The stadiums at Jerusalem, Jericho and Caesarea resounded with the screams of prisoners under torture, or the roar of crowds as gladiators battled, chariots raced and ravenous beasts leaped on condemned slaves or other victims.

These were the spectacular works of Herod, who initiated celebration of Olympian Games in Judea every fifth year, in honor of Caesar.

"Truly, foreigners were greatly surprised and delighted at the vastness of expenses here exhibited, and the great dangers that were seen," writes Josephus, adding that the bloodletting horrified faithful Jews as "barefaced impiety."

Ten of them posted themselves in the Jerusalem theater when Herod was to attend.

But an informer warned him, and Herod withdrew to his palace, sending his guards to seize the culprits. Confronting him, they boldly admitted their plan, calling it an holy action in defence of their faith.

Herod had the men stretched on the rack until they died.

Outraged citizens ambushed the hired spy in the street and tore him limb from limb.

Herod rounded up hundreds of witnesses, torturing them to learn the perpetrators. Finally some women, shrieking in agony, blurted out the names. Herod seized and executed them along with their entire families.

About this time, 7 BC, the birthdate of Jesus despite subsequent miscalculations in forming the calendar, Herod's two sons by his alain wife Mariamne, Alexander and Aristobulus, returned home from their education in Rome.

Their presence aroused new trepidation. Tales came to Herod of their wrath at being "forced to live with those who had been their enemy's murderers, and to be partakers with them."

Herod's slippery sister, Salome, and Antipater, a scheming son by another wife, fed the fires of suspicion. Gossip, accusations and recriminations circulated among guards, officials and slaves. Tortures and executions multiplied, for guilty and guiltless.

The tentacles of conspiracy and dread crept through Herod's new palace, built high on the western hill of Jerusalem, overlooking it.

It was "full of terror and trouble," writes Josephus. "He could trust nobody."

Already afflicted with physical maladies and tormented by nightmares that caused him to rave in his sleep, Herod had sought to smother his lurking fears in a splurge of public construction and largess.

Over a 10-year period, he had rebuilt the Jewish Temple, using 10,000 stonecutters, carpenters, masons and other workmen, and 1,000 wagons to haul stone and timber.

The magnificent edifice was virtually complete at the time of Jesus' birth. It delighted the Jewish populace. It was Herod's "atonement," the rabbis said, for having slain so many sages of Israel.

Moreover, in the midst of two famines caused by severe droughts, he had brought wheat and corn from Egypt and organized bakers to process it to feed the starving.

Chiefly, however, he catered to his Roman masters, erecting costly temples and statues to their gods and to Augustus Caesar in numerous outlying cities of his kingdom and in cities abroad, meanwhile draining rich and poor alike for his royal treasury.

Taxes reduced the poor to destitution, with levies on births, deeds, property deeds, purchases, inheritances, merchandise sales, exports, imports, and an imperial poll tax, the "tributum" on every householder.

It was such a tax census that brought Joseph and Mary to Bethlehem.

At the royal portico of the Jerusalem Temple, 40 men led by two honored Jewish scholars, Judas and Matthias, used ladders and slim ropes from the upper parapets to reach the eagle emblem.

They ripped down the hated image, forbidden by their Scriptures, and cut it to pieces with axes. Word of the deed speedily reached Herod, and guards brought the 40 before him, their arms bound.

"Superstitious fools," he bellowed. "Dared thou to destroy the ensign of Caesar?"

"Yes," the two rabbis said. "What was ordained we contrived, and what hath been performed we performed it, and these with us have acted with such courage as becomes men, in dedication to the majesty of Almighty God.

"Accordingly, we will undergo death or whatever punishment thou canst inflict upon us with pleasure since we are conscious that we shall die not for any unrighteous actions but for love of our religion."

Herod, a throbbing pain in the back of his head and ulcers tearing at his bowels, ordered the two rabbis burned alive, and the rest hanged.

About that time, Herod came into possession of a letter signed by his son Alexander, intended to taunt him. It read:

"You do not need to torture any more persons, for I have plotted against thee, and have many partners in it. So hast thy sister, Salome, who came to me by night and lay with me whether I would or not. All men are come to be of one mind, to make away with you, so as to get rid of the continual fear they are in from you."

Also at that time, spies informed Herod of the philosophers from the East, the Magi, inquiring in the city: "Where is He who has been born King of the Jews? For we have seen His star in the East, and have come to worship Him."

Haggard, wild-eyed, roaring commands, Herod launched a new wave of arrests, including 200 officers associated with his sons, and he ordered the Magi brought before him for interrogation.

Tomorrow: An interview, illness and insanity.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Trench Mouth Only Occurs When Gums Are Diseased

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Now my husband has a good reason for not kissing me goodbye when he leaves for work. He has developed trench mouth. (But I'm kidding. We are really an affectionate couple.)

The inside of his mouth and gums are all inflamed, but he won't go to the dentist or our family doctor. All he does is rinse his mouth three or four times a day with warm salt water. He says he has heard this is all that is necessary and it will go away. But it has been hanging on for at least six weeks already. So far I've been fortunate in not catching the infection. I keep my toothbrush away from his, we don't kiss, and I carefully sterilize our glassware and eating utensils. But don't you think it's about time to get help? — Mrs. T.

COMMENT: The vote is two to one. I agree. It's time for a dental checkup first. If he thinks it necessary, he will also refer your husband to your family doctor.

Trench mouth is the common terminology for Vincent's angina. This is an infection caused by germs which are sometimes present in the healthy mouth. Only when gums get diseased and when teeth need repair does the infection break out in susceptible people. As in your husband's case, it can be stubborn and trying.

All physicians and dentists do not agree that kissing spreads the infection Mrs. T., but I'd play it safe for a while longer, at least until your husband is under the dentist's care. Perhaps the cause in his case is too much tartar on his teeth, poor fillings, or unhealthy gums. Some doctors prescribe vitamins A and C with the hope of building up the mucous membranes in the mouth. Others also apply local medications and suggest medicated rinses. As you see, it's time for professional advice.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have had a bladder infection for a couple of years. At times urination is painful. The doctor says I have red blood cells in my urine and some bacteria. I keep on taking the same antibiotic, which doesn't seem to help. Do you have any advice. — Mrs. C.

COMMENT: Are you under the care of a urologist (bladder and kidney specialist)? If not, I believe your doctor will be interested in his special investigations: such as direct examination of the bladder wall, X-rays of the kidneys, investigation of the type of bacteria and the antibiotics they are most sensitive to.

Bladder infection can be chronic and stubborn. However, it's best to know (if possible) what's causing it and the most efficient way to treat it.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My husband has been told he has emphysema. His doctor did not tell him to give up tobacco. He still smokes one to two packs a day and has a cough. I have pleaded with him to give up smoking but he will not do this. What is the outlook for one who will not quit smoking? Will you please print this in the hope he will quit before it's too late? — Mrs. B.

COMMENT: The outlook? Dark, darker, until it becomes hopelessly black. I'm not exaggerating, Mr. B. Your wife has good reason for her consternation and anxiety. I have never seen an emphysema patient recover who continued to smoke one or two packs daily.

Police Won't Prosecute

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario is secutors will be employed in trying to improve the image of traffic cases in Metropolitan Toronto courts.

To spread the system across of minor charges and traffic offences, Attorney-General Arthur Wishart said Tuesday.

He told the Ontario legislature "I don't know how far I can go that as a first step special pro- at the moment."

THE HEART OF INDIA by Duncan Forbes

India is a vast and varied land, steeped in tradition and ritual. In spite of poverty and overcrowding there is a fascinating beauty about the land. Duncan Forbes fell under its spell during the war and in Heart of India he records his second visit when he had time to journey through country and city at his leisure.

STEPS TO A FORTUNE by Mark Howell and Tony Morrison

This is the second book by these two young adventurers into the land of the Incas. This time, equipped with electronic aids, they are in search of treasure. After several harrowing escapes in the Andes and elsewhere, they arrived at the Inca ruins and we will leave it to the reader to discern what luck they had.

LIFE FOR LIFE'S SAKE a book of reminiscences by Richard Aldington.

In these pages lie the nostalgia of the author's Edwardian childhood, his years at London University and his life in the twenties as a poet, critic and essayist. In addition to his memories of the English countryside, he writes of his travels in France, Italy and Spain and of the remarkable men and women of his acquaintance.

PEACE IN THE FAMILY OF MAN by Lester Pearson

In 1968 Mr. Pearson delivered Reith Lectures on the BBC. These talks have now been published in book form. In them he reflects on the state of the world today and the prospects for peace in the family of man. He begins after the first World War, which was to end wars, and ends as the major powers armed like gladiators, confront each other.

MONTREAL UNDER MAISONNEUVE by Gustave Lanctot.

The origin of the City of Montreal had a religious basis. Thanks to a group of French patrons, a small party under the leadership of Governor Maisonneuve arrived in the spring of 1642 to establish a mission post. In addition to vivid accounts of their daily life and conflict with the Iroquois, the author has managed to bring to life, key figures such as Jeanne Mance, Dallard, Laval and other leaders of the community.

SAHARA by John Julius Norwich

In 1966 Lord Norwich travelled by Land Rover and camel some 2,000 miles across the Sahara. The great sand dunes normally associated with the desert are only part of the picture. The area ranged from arid and rocky to 11,000 foot mountains, and it is inhabited by two million people. Here is a superbly illustrated account of fascinating country and a way of life still based on medieval feudalism.

A TALENT TO AMUSE by Sheridan Morley

Noel Coward if one of the great theatre personages of the 20th century. His Talent to Amuse has glittered across the stage and screen for almost half a century. Mr. Morley has written a biography tracing and evaluating Coward's spectacular career, including amusing accounts of other great theatre personages with whom Coward has been associated.

Tourists In Winter Are Sought

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario government plans to spend the bulk of a $2,400,000 advertising budget in 1970 telling Americans that the province is the place to come to for winter vacations.

Spokesmen for the provincial department of tourism and information said Tuesday most of the advertising budget would go for spot television advertisements telling United States audiences near the border about Ontario.

One TV spot announcement shows a family in a horse-drawn sled in front of a snowy farmhouse under the heading: "We're a little old fashioned in Ontario—we think winter's fun."

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"America didn't become great by people saying, 'We can live without it!'"

Farmer Shot Seven Times

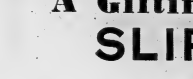
TILLSONBURG, Ont. (CP) — Ernest Simmons, 53, of Courtland, Ont., remained in fair condition in hospital Tuesday after being shot seven times when four assailants robbed him at his home on Monday.

Police are searching for the four masked men who took $150 from the farmhouse 25 miles south of Woodstock where Mr. Simmons lives with his 83-year-old mother.



Mr. Simmons was shot in the neck, chest, groin and upper arm and underwent surgery for the removal of .22-calibre bullets.

In August, 1968, one man was seriously wounded and two youths slightly injured by shotgun blasts when Mr. Simmons found five men and a woman on his property.

The six were charged with break, enter and theft and two of the men subsequently received two-year suspended sentences.

Charges against the woman were dropped and three other men were found not guilty.

OSD Pilot Project Places Students in 'Hearing Atmosphere'

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

The classroom outwardly has the marks of something special.

The floor is carpeted; the class intimate; there's a microphone for the teacher.

It's on the second floor of Queen Mary Public School. But is exists by courtesy of the local public school system.

The students are from the Ontario School for the Deaf, participants in a pilot project that places them in an ordinary school environment.

In all there are nine youngsters hard of hearing — not deaf — and they've been going to Queen Mary since September, mingling with schoolmates of normal hearing.

"The idea is to place them in an overall hearing environment," explains OSD assistant superintendent Peter Kitcher, "to get them to integrate as much as possible."

Integration is not an instant process — and the Queen Mary project is no different.

Hence the special classroom, equipped and staffed by the OSD — after local school authorities signified their co-operation for the 1968-70 school year.

But the experiment's origins are from an earlier date — with Mr. Kitcher and Queen Mary principal Ronald Caswell as motive forces.

The school board provided the room — and the carpet needed to improve acoustics. The OSD installed a hearing loop — needed to amplify teaching instructions on students' hearing aids — and audio-visual equipment.

It also designated OSD staff member Lynn Savage to conduct the pilot class.

Now, the project is ending its first quarter-year. Indications are that it will not disappoint neither its two originators or the authorities.

"It's early to say yet," cautions Mr. Caswell, "But — I've great hopes it's working out better than we'd expected."

Both student bodies within Queen Mary have accepted the situation as nothing phenomenal.

"The OSD children have fitted well into the school environment — and the school children have accepted them," says the principal. "It's a very normal situation. They're just another class in the school."

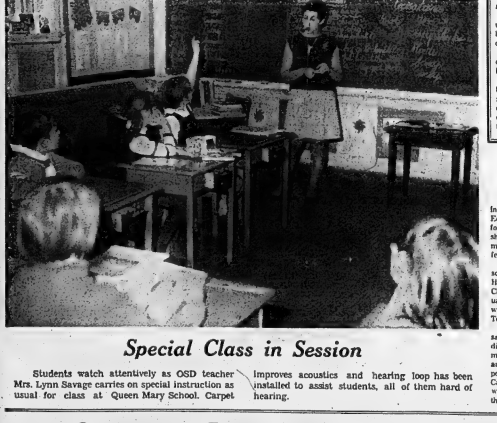
Encouraging results have been demonstrated by the contact.

Many young people, deaf or hard-of-hearing, do not converse easily with strangers since they are certain they may not be understood, says the school head.

Yet "these children have done something I don't think they could have done three months ago: They're taking part in our assemblies. They will read and talk to our student bodies."

However, the special classroom also has paid dividends for Queen Mary students. Advantage has been taken of the availability of such a specialized service. At least two pupils with speech handicaps have "definitely improved," says Mr. Caswell.

The OSD students range in age from eight to 11 years. Queen Mary enrolment ranges up to Grade 6. There are no provisions for moving OSD students into higher public grades — as yet.



Mr. Caswell admits something will have "to be done" for students who qualify for such grades.

Mr. Kitcher says that "hopefully, this is the next problem."

A Teacher and Her Students

Intimacy of Ontario School for the Deaf special class project is demonstrated as students crowd around Mrs. Savage. There are nine OSD pupils participating in pilot program that places them in public school surroundings.

Special Class in Session

Students watch attentively as OSD teacher Mrs. Lynn Savage carries on special instruction as usual for class at Queen Mary School. Carpet improves acoustics and hearing loop has been installed to assist students, all of them hard of hearing.

Stolen Dynamite Hunted

Provincial police are seeking the whereabouts of a large cache of dynamite which disappeared recently from an Ontario Hydro worksite on Belleville's outskirts.

The theft came to light yesterday when a man found 18 sticks of dynamite and several blasting caps in a field near the Canadian National tracks east of the city limits.

The find prompted police investigations which revealed two boxes of dynamite had been looted some time since Dec. 9.

The explosive was being used by construction crews building hydro towers north of Belleville, say police.

They believe about 75 dynamite sticks and nine blasting caps are missing.

Meanime, police at Trenton today said they were still seeking 12 sticks of dynamite stolen from a construction site in the town a week ago.

A series of meetings is being arranged by the Prince Edward Milk Committee to inform all county industrial milk shippers about the Group 2 milk pool which goes into effect next spring.

Afternoon meetings are scheduled for the Bloomfield Hall on January 13 and at Cherry Valley Hall on January 15. An evening meeting will be held at the Hillier Township hall on January 18.

All meetings will have the same agenda and will include discussions on the Group 2 marketing plan with a question and answer period, and the policy and programs of the Canadian Dairy Commission with questions and answers on the national policy.

They'll Give So Others Can Receive

Quinte Secondary School could be starting a new trend in Christmas celebration at schools.

Quinte Secondary will hold a Christmas Carnival Friday for the students. It has a two-fold purpose — celebration of Yuletide and gifts to the needy.

Sponsored by the Girls' Athletic Club at the school, the carnival will be divided into three sections.

Bill the Lizard, a local rock group, will donate its services for a rock dance in the gymnatorium. In the students' cafeteria pupils will participate in an assortment of games and elsewhere there will be carol singing.

Admission to all the events is one gift for a needy family. It is the first time that Quinte Secondary has tried such a Christmas project in place of an assembly.

Consumer Protection Prime Interest of Special Chamber Bureau

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

Do the words unsolicited mail, unethical or misleading sales practices ring an all - too - familiar bell?

It doesn't have to be that way.

There is always the Consumer Protection Bureau.

Run by the Chamber of Commerce since 1953, the bureau advises the public on matters pertaining to these practices, while at the same time endeavouring to raise the general level of business ethics in the community.

Even though the Chamber of Commerce organization is local in nature, the services of the Better Business Bureau in larger centres is tapped as a source of additional information.

The services of the bureau are not only diverse, but practical.

All itinerant salesmen (selling goods away from their place of business) must register with the bureau.

"But," said Chamber Manager O. F. Bradley, "the service by this bureau goes far beyond that".

"We are concerned with the registration of salesmen, particularly those selling magazine subscriptions. We also investigate complaints regarding representatives of firms from larger communities who seek to sell their products or services in the Belleville area."

Mr. Bradley then went on to give an example of the kind of situation the bureau must deal with.

"One problem that has been encountered is the solution of advertising using forms which closely resemble invoices. These forms have been received by many of the businesses in Belleville area."

The forms are carefully worded to cover a proposition for service of questionable value which would be provided sometime in the future.

"What happens in most cases is that the business in question assumes that these forms are in fact invoices for services already provided. They approve the amount shown on the form, later realizing they have purchased unwanted services or advertising space," said Mr. Bradley.

Another frequent problem that arises is the so-called "free" offer — for vacations, or prizes to mention just two.

"We have had many inquiries concerning a free vacation accommodation offer in Florida or California," related the Chamber of Commerce manager.

"These offers usually result from completing entries at a sports show or similar event. Those completing such entry forms receive notification that they have won vacation accommodation for a number of days."

The only way around a situation such as this is to read the fine print — and read it closely.

"Unless the so-called winner reads the correspondence carefully, he may assume that he is receiving a complete vacation package," Mr. Bradley pointed out.

In reality, what the winner must realize is that he or she must pay their own transportation and perhaps become involved in other expenses.

What is Mr. Bradley's advice in such a situation?

"When you receive an offer such as this, the individual concerned should not be rushed into a commitment before ascertaining details of any expenses which may be mandatory with the acceptance of such an offer."

The bureau received about 30 to 40 inquiries and complaints every week — a growing indication of a concerned public.

Of course, there is a maximum amount of paperwork involved in the whole operation — for both the individual inquiring, the company against which the complaint is lodged, and, naturally for the Consumer Protection Bureau itself.

After the initial phone call during which time the complaint is first lodged, it then must be made in writing. Copies are then sent to the company concerned, so that both sides of the story can be considered.

The Chamber of Commerce cannot become involved in legal matters, therefore its satisfaction of legitimate complaints is left in the hands of the firm or the individual against which the complaint has been lodged.

Mr. Bradley remarked that "a very small percentage" of the complaints received apply to local merchants.

Giving the public the advantage of his experience with the Consumer Protection Bureau, he emphasized the following as points to remember:

- read all offers carefully;
- understand conditions of acceptance of any unsolicited proposition;
- you are not required to pay for unordered merchandise;
- it is against the law to send an individual unordered merchandise to be paid C.O.D., and
- if you do not wish to retain unsolicited mail, return it to the Post Office signed "refused."

FULFILS AMBITION

Ronnie Schnell, seen on television's The Jim Nabors Hour, says television has permitted him to fulfil an ambition he's had since 1952. "Finally," he says, "I've saved up enough money to buy a 1952 car."

Recording Boom

Toronto Could Become Canada's Nashville

TORONTO (CP) — Can Toronto become a mecca for recording artists—the Nashville of Canada?

Revolution Sound Studios Ltd., just opened for business, hopes it can show the way. Its equipment is so acoustically impressive that from now on it might be unnecessary for Canadian performers to troop off to Nashville, New York or London to cut their records.

The studio is presided over by Terry Brown, a young English engineering wizard who was imported to Toronto about a year ago by Doug Riley and Mort Ross of Revolution Records to handle engineering chores for their pop-recording and jingles business.

The Ross-Riley partnership has since broken up but Mr. Brown held on to the new studio.

"It's much like the studio I set up in England but there's no difference—this one is more flexible. We've got 16-track equipment which is capable of recording a terrific range of bands and singers and we're the only studio in Toronto with that. One studio in Montreal has 16-track but I don't think it's operating yet."

"Of course, we've just started and it takes a while to learn your studio and your control room. I mean two sounds may seem to bleed beautifully when you're sitting in the control room, but later on tape they may not sound right. But so far after our first couple of sessions the whole setup is fabulous."

Apart from that machine, Revolution also boasts full stereo facilities, a separate vocal booth and full echo equipment.

The studio itself is made with double-height ceilings, the musicians are draped in large, brightly colored banners that serve the double purpose of controlling the sound and pleasing the eye. The lights shine in a variety of shades.

"All I have to do is press the buttons and right away the studio becomes a place where, as a musician, you feel you're playing a nice gig. It isn't like working in a studio at all. It's like feeling right at home."

Doug Riley, whose new jingles business rents space in the Revolution building, is using the studio for a couple of his commercial recordings. His ole partner, Mort Ross will rent time to record sessions for his Revolver pop label featuring Ragood Hardy, Moe Koffman and Motherlode.

Local jazz pianist Brian Browne will cut a record. And Capital and Columbia are joining the rush to Revolution.

By June, 1970, business could be even more spectacular. In the space next door to its present home, Revolution is laying plans for a second. It will feature a 24-track recording machine equipment big enough to accommodate nothing less than a full symphony orchestra.

School to Be Built At Mountain Grove

TWEED — A central public school to serve the Kennebec and Olden township area will be built at Mountain Grove, where an existing two-room school will be incorporated, Frontenac County Board of Education decided Thursday night, December 11.

After hearing a report by property committee chairman Bruce Warmington, the trustees authorised purchase of two parcels of land adjacent to the Mountain Grove School to form a 10-acre site.

Five sites were considered by the committee before a selection was made. There was a public meeting in November at which eight sites were discussed, said Mr. Warmington.

The other sites considered were at Elmtree, Arden, Henderson and land offered free by Ross Baker, an area resident.

Total cost of the additional area will be $2,200, Canadian Pacific Railway has offered to sell 5½ acres for $1,000, and approximately four acres of what is known as the Barr property will cost $1,300.

St. Ola

ST. OLA — There will be a Christmas musical service December 22 at 8 p.m. with the Young People of Madoc and Deidor taking part.

The OL-A Craft members and their husbands and families met on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mac Martin. Everyone enjoyed the pot luck dinner, after which the women had their meeting and the men enjoyed a good visit.

Christmas concert will be held in Gilmour United Church Sunday, December 21 at 11.30 a.m.

The United Church Women met at the home of Mrs. Ed Longmuir recently for their Christmas meeting.

St. Ola post office will officially close on January 29, 1970. Patrons in St. Ola and on the St. Ola Road will receive daily mail service from Gilmour and will be Rural Route No. 1.

Queensboro

QUEENSBORO — A community shower was held in the WI Hall on Dec. 4 in honor of Miss Doreen Gordon, a December bride-to-be. Doreen received many lovely and useful gifts and an enjoyable evening was spent by all.

Mr. and Mrs. Harrell Moorcroft were at home to their friends and relatives in the United Church on the afternoon of December 11, the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary.

Demorestville

DEMORESTVILLE — On Saturday evening Sophisbury ball teams held a banquet in Demorestville hall. A turkey supper was served with all the trimmings.

Choir practice is being held every Tuesday evening in preparation for the Christmas Carol service on Christmas Eve, also Christmas music for Sundays.

FATHER WAS INVENTOR

Sheila MacRae, who plays Alice Kramden in The Honeymooners episodes of the Jackie Gleason television show, says her late father was an automobile designer and inventor in her native England. One of his favorite innovations, she recalls, was placing a car's accelerator on the side of the door "so the driver could operate it with his elbow instead of his foot."

THE LITTLE WOMAN — MR. TWEEDY — by Ned Riddle

"Thank heavens I came to my senses before it was too late!"

"DON'T PLAY WITH THE TOYS!"

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For December 18

Your birthday today: The coming months find you making a fresh start on a more simple basis. Reasonable effort in your work should put you well ahead of most competitors. Social relationships turn out to be complex and interesting. You may be suspended between old, not quite liquidated, obligations and strong demands of new emotional ties. The new situation is more likely to claim your time and resources.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Useless information suddenly turns out to have a bearing. Your enthusiasm for something new tempts you to scrap reasonable schedules.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Sound advice arrives, briefly, from a most unlikely source. Expect some dispute from people near you. Resolve not to get involved in detailed questions and answers.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Anybody you are trying to help is likely to cause inconvenience. Simply restrict your aid program. Discipline your urge to purchase gadgets. Find a party this evening, relax a bit.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): It is a busy day with many contacts, because of promises you have made and implied over the last several months. Tact is needed to correct any expectations that exceed your real program. Complete candor is the ideal but is too harsh for some friends at the moment.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Business activity and public exposure is helpful in the long run. Make the most of any opportunity. Family matters inevitably come up for discussion.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): You must co-ordinate your actions and plans with those of others. Some of your program faces delays. Complaints on this only causes more difficult obstacles. The most feasible course is to be a good sport.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Almost any action you enter wholeheartedly today comes off quite well. Don't let distractions annoy you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Compromise is essential, because the energy of your planning and actions stirs resistance and competition. A little concession goes a long way if you keep moving and get things done before it runs out.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Hire instructors for permanent improvements on home and property if you are sure you have found a responsible contractor and a sound plan. Attend the needs of older people and parents.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Friends and acquaintances are quite willing to go along to spread your resources. Ration your time as if it were cash.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Personal efforts are essential in the sphere of your business. The key moves cannot be delegated. Review your financial support. Charge more for your services, or ask for a raise — according to what is most appropriate.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): You can do quite a bit for relatives, but it should not include financial assistance beyond absolute minimum requirements. Travel does not produce the results you need or the contacts you should cultivate.

New Moira River Bridge Factor in Ice Control

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Belleville's new Dundas Street bridge over the Moira River could make flood prevention measures more difficult next spring.

This is the conclusion of Crysler, David and Jorgensen, Toronto consulting engineers, who have completed an ice and flood control study on the Moira within the city limits.

The report of their study notes that the new Dundas Street bridge is not likely to increase the potential for ice jamming at the river's outlet into the bay but could make ice channeling for flood prevention more difficult.

The report says that ice jamming in the lower stretches of the river has always been associated with spring floods in Belleville. The last serious flood in the city was in 1936 but as many as eight or more floods causing serious property damage have occurred within the past 100 years.

The egineering report on measures to prevent or alleviate the periodic spring floods in the city, urges the Moira River Conservation Authority to exercise extreme caution in the approval of fill application within the banks of the Moira and says that any encroachments on the existing river channel should be avoided as much as possible.

It says encroachment in the river channel can be tolerated in certain areas but advises that serious' consideration should be given to the location, type and extent of the encroachment allowed.

In this respect the report considers the new Moira River bridge an encroachment, but the conclusion is it will not increase the potential for ice jamming at the river outlet which in the past has led to flooding.

In recent years the city public works department has undertaken ice channeling in the vicinity of the CPR bridge to allow the escape of flood water during the spring break-up.

Brink's Guard Killed, Later Man Shot in Car

MONTREAL (CP) — A wounded man and two accomplices who are suspected of shooting him early this morning on the Laurentian autoroute were being questioned by Quebec Provincial Police today in connection with the killing of a Brink's Express guard during a $120,000 holdup at a credit union Wednesday.

Provincial police said several thousand dollars, guns and masks were found in the car of the two men.

Brink's guard Real Champagne, 31, was killed in a hail of bullets Wednesday as he tried to intercept four robbers who stole the estimated $130,000 from the Caisse d'Economie des Employes des Usines Angus.

Provincial police today said the wounded man was involved in an argument in a car on the autoroute. They said he was shot and thrown out of the car near the Ste. Rose exit, just north of Laval and Montreal Island.

Blairton Family Burned Out

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

BLAIRTON — For the second Christmas in a row fire has left a big family homeless in this community five miles northwest of Marmora.

This time Arthur Coles, 48, a part-time brush cutter, his wife and nine children are homeless.

Mr. Coles earns about $60 a month and receives a $50 food voucher. The children are aged two months to 18 years.

The family is taking temporary refuge at the home of friends in nearby Norwood.

Firemen say the blaze which destroyed their two - storey frame home was caused by an overheated wood furnace in the basement. They were unable to extinguish it after a nearby well ran dry.

The last serious fire in the community was Dec. 21 last year when Mr. and Mrs. Willimer Grieves and their 11 children lost their home.

Mr. Grieves was living on a disability pension at the time and had purchased his family's Christmas gifts. He claimed the fire was caused by arson. It resulted in an investigation and conviction of a local man for arson earlier this year.

Provincial police at Camp Seaford today said there was no need to further investigate causes of the fire which destroyed the Coles' home.

Blairton is the site of what was once a promising, booming community of the late 1800s.

Its fortunes were tied to operations of a nearby iron mine. The village gradually fell into disuse as iron resources dwindled, then failed.

Planes Kept Flying By Late Settlement

Bombs Wreck Relief Plane

COPENHAGEN (AP) — A Canadian Super Constellation relief plane was destroyed by Nigerian air force bombs on the ULI airstrip in Biafra Wednesday night, and five Nigerian aid workers were killed, but the Canadian crew of four escaped unharmed, the Joint Churchaid airlift headquarters here said.

The Canairelief plane, flying in from the island of Sao Tome under cover of darkness, was hit by bombs soon after it touched down at the Uli strip, the last remaining lifeline for millions of starving Biafrans.

The crew, following standard procedures, headed for air raid shelters immediately after the plane landed, but Biafran aid workers kept unloading the plane's provisions of food and medicine even after bombs began falling, Joint Churchaid headquarters said.

Five workers were killed, two Churchaid trucks were destroyed and the Super Constellation was left a total wreck, the announcement said.

The plane's cargo was destroyed, too, and that meant the loss of one meal for 100,000 women and children," Joint Churchaid said.

The plane carried approximately 16 tons of food.

"I dreamed last night I had a sleigh and reindeer that could fly!"

Two Airport Groups' Must Ratify Pacts

OTTAWA (CP) — A settlement, wrung out by government and union negotiators Wednesday, has postponed — and in all likelihood ended — the threat of a national air strike at Christmas time.

Treasury Board President C. M. Drury delighted the Commons with the settlement announcement — which averted both an emergency late-night House debate on the dispute and a strike set for noon EST Friday.

Here's part of the official announcement by the 1,000-member union and the treasury board:

"We have reached agreement on a new contract between the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association and government. Terms of agreement subject to ratification of the association membership."

Association President John-David Lyon said of the ratification:

"I don't think our members will be overjoyed, but I think they will ratify the agreement."

Neither government nor union spokesmen would disclose terms of the agreement until after the membership learns of them.

Later the union announced a majority of its 11-member national council voted by telephone to postpone the strike until 12:01 EST Sunday, Dec. 21, and to recommend membership ratification of the package.

Mr. Lyon said he considers the proposals "reasonable."

The announcement says: "The agreement covers all of the issues in dispute, including hours of work, pay, term of agreement, vacations, training, shift differentials and designated holidays."

A strike of 2,100 electronics technicians that would have grounded commercial aviation and cut federal communications abroad apparently was also averted by conciliation Wednesday.

The technicians must ratify by majority vote the settlement reached under conciliator Eric Taylor by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and federal negotiators.

"We're hopeful that by Friday we'll have the final results," Jim Wolfgang, international representative for the union, said in an interview after two days of hard bargaining on a single issue.

The bulk of the collective agreement was reached in November and ratified by the technicians after seven months of bargaining. The union was on the point of signing a contract when a dispute over the interpretation of the salary schedule became evident.

Bills Won't Carry Queen's Portrait

OTTAWA — The Queen's portrait will be removed from four denominations of Canadian banknotes and replaced with portraits of former prime ministers.

As well, a new likeness of the Queen will be used for the bills retaining her portrait.

John Diefenbaker charged that the changes were part of a continuing Government policy of converting Canada into a republic, without giving Parliament an opportunity to discuss the question.

When the switchover is complete, the Queen's new picture will be on the face of $1, $2, and $20 bills. The likeness of Sir Wilfred Laurier will adorn the $5 bill. Sir John A. Macdonald will be on the $10 bill, Mackenzie King on the $50 bill and Sir Robert Borden on the $100 bill.

Ice Control Dam Urged for Moira River

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Construction of a new ice control dam south of College Street, 300 feet north of the old Lott dam on Station Street is recommended as a possible solution to the recurring spring flood threat in Belleville.

The dam, estimated to cost $686,185 would create a reservoir storage capacity for 1,500,000 feet of ice and would reduce by 20 per cent the amount of "frazil" ice which each winter floats downstream to plug the outlet channel at the Bay of Quinte.

The recommendations come from consulting engineers Crysler, Davis and Jorgensen who last week completed an ice and flood control study for the city of Belleville.

Three different proposals were considered by the engineering firm for the control of ice which traditionally has been responsible for serious flooding during the spring break-up.

The first of the proposals considered was the erection of eight dams between the Belleville footbridge and 401 Highway to form pools which flood out fast waters where frazil ice is created and form a continuous sheet of ice and a number of ice storage basins. However, because of the estimated high costs, this proposal was not recommended for serious consideration.

The second proposal was the construction of an ice control dam north of the College Street bridge which would have used a city owned quarry as an ice storage basin.

This site has already been the subject of several studies in the past, including a hydraulic model study. The cost of the College Street dam is now estimated at $730,000, and was ruled out on the basis of cost — also because of the limited ice storage of 500,000 cubic feet, as compared with 1,500,000 feet for an alternative site further downstream.

This is the Lott damsite, 4,000 feet closer to the river outlet than is the College Street site and located about two-thirds the way down a very fast flowing section of the river.

This, according to the report, provides the advantage of controlling a greater length of the river, an important asset for ice control.

Along with upstream ice jamming at the river outlet, frazil ice is also blamed for creating conditions conducive to flooding.

Ice control by channel improvement was also considered by the consulting engineers but the high cost of $3,000,000 eliminated this from further consideration.

The engineers said the river channel could be altered so that the normal winter discharge of water could be handled efficiently either sheet or frazil ice formation.

The method of control would involve the construction of a smaller "low flow" channel in the bottom of the existing channel.

This channel would have to be 25 feet wide by six feet deep. Its function would be to cause a deeper flow, with smaller surface area, thus reducing the heat loss which is a large contributing factor to the formation of frazil ice.

The small channel would also have the prospect of producing a much smaller ice sheet, the total result being the production of less ice on the river.

Engineers felt that while this scheme would appear to solve the problem of ice formation, the problems of ice control above the city would still exist. As ice above the Canniton and Corbyville dams moved downstream, it would still lodge in the lower section of the river and under the right conditions cause flooding in the downtown business section.

Moira Student Concert Raises $320 for Needy

By LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

With teamwork, effort, and heart — a lot of heart — the students at Moira Secondary School went on stage last night in a performance that said louder than words how much they cared about people.

A capacity audience filled the school auditorium to enjoy their evening of entertainment — with the realization they had a part in assisting the more than 300 needy families registered with the Christmas Exchange.

All the proceeds from the venture — $320.20 — the students voted to go entirely to the Exchange fund to provide hampers and cheques where possible in those less fortunate.

The program combined the talent of folk singers, school bands, the drama department and a 100-voice choir for an evening of variety and fun.

Donations to date stand at a total of $3,187 with $1,7"1 more to go before the $4,400 quota is met.

Several organizations in the city are assisting the Exchange — not merely through their donations, but by actively helping to meet the many needs of the families registered with the exchange.

The Kiwanis Club has placed more than 200 toy fund cans in businesses throughout the city, in an effort to insure each of the 1100 underprivileged children will have a happy Christmas morning.

The Firefighters' Association has been working hard at sorting and boxing hundreds of toys given to them by the people of Belleville.

One of the biggest differences this year is the fact that the firefighters are not repairing toys, because the majority of them are made of plastic and once broken are not repairable.

In their quest for toys in good condition, members of the association have been rewarded with a deluge of toy donations — not only from parents, but from children, too.

The Salvation Army will again be assisting a number of families this Christmas, and taking from the exchange any families left without donors.

Mrs. Jane Haslett, director of the Christmas Exchange is proud of the assistance given to the Exchange, particularly the efforts of the young people at Moira.

She called their contribution of $320 a real "boost', terming the gesture "a fantastically generous thing to do. I feel it is wonderful when teenagers want to get so involved in helping their community'."

Donations may be sent to the Christmas Exchange, Box 815, or 224 John St., Belleville.

Curse You, Red Baron!

"I have only begun to fight," Snoopy screams, as his Sopwith Camel is riddled with bullets. "I will get you, Red Baron," he threatens as he clenches his paw. The battle wasn't real and neither were the bullets — but the Charlie Brown Christmas was a highlight of the music and drama night at Moira Secondary. Snoopy was played by Peter Lenk.

Conservationist Blasts Trent Valley Authority

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Reporter

BRIGHTON — An area farmer has severely criticized the conservation authority of which he is a member.

Paul Heissler, a Stockdale farmer, charged Tuesday night that the executive of the Lower Trent Valley Conservation Authority has failed to communicate with its members and had also shown little willingness to work together with other organizations of the same nature.

This morning Mr. Heissler said he was hopeful that there would be some changes in the organization's executive when a new slate of officers is elected at the authority's annual meeting in February.

Among the points of issue Mr. Heissler cited to the authority in a letter were:

- Important decisions made by the executive without the approval of the full authority, resulting in regulations coming into effect without the approval of the full authority;
- A landowner at Cranberry Lake (north of Castleton) offered the authority rent-free land for a wildlife sanctuary in June, but despite the urging of Mr. Heissler, the executive didn't even contact the landowner until last week;
- The authority has yet to answer a letter sent to it by the Murray Township Ratepayers' Association a year ago;
- Suggestions of other properties in which the authority might be interested have not yet been investigated;
- An expensive brochure was published six months ago, but as yet it has not been distributed to Authority members;
- Omission from the minutes that at a Nov. 6 meeting of the authority's Fish and Wildlife Committee meeting, Mr. Heissler expressed dissatisfaction with the authority and gave to all members present a copy of a conservationist's speech citing how involvement would increase the effectiveness of a conservation authority.
- Delegates were sent to a biennial conservation authority meeting in Peterborough earlier this month at the local authority's expense, but they did not prepare a report to tell the local authority's members what transpired at the Peterborough meeting.
- Mr. Heissler said that he was told by the local executive that the May 5, 1969, Eastern Ontario Conservation Authority workshop sessions in Kingston were strictly for chairmen of local authorities. Yet he received an invitation from the workshop organizers who informed him that the workshops were designed for members of newly established authorities.

In addition Mr. Heissler said that at a June 17 advisory board meeting he was asked to give the local authority a report on the Kingston meetings, but later told by the local chairman that this would not be necessary since he would send a copy of his report to each member. Mr. Heissler noted that these copies have yet to be received by the members.

- The minutes — which are seldom received on time— don't give enough information and Mr. Heissler asks: "If we are not fully informed, how can we as conservation authority members, be effective?

Mr. Heissler said that he was not satisfied with the authority's answers to his questions despite the comment by the lower Trenton Valley Conservation Authority Chairman Cyril Macdonald that the authority welcomed Mr. Heissler's letter and needed criticism as a guideline for future direction.

The authority did take a step to improve its administration by moving to set up temporary headquarters in the Trenton Chamber of Commerce offices. Files and records will be kept here until a permanent office can be found for the authority.

Chairman Macdonald said that the authority would lose the support of the public unless a solution could be found to the communications problem and challenged the public to become involved in the authority's work, suggesting that they attend the annual meeting Feb. 12, 1970 and bring along names of candidates for next year's executive.

North's School Tax Claimed Too Costly

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Increased school taxes, set last spring, are still a sore point, especially in the north, separate school trustees learned Wednesday.

Michael Murray of Murray Brothers Lumber Company Ltd. appeared before the board to protest the high assessment and mill rate in Murchison Township, Nipissing district.

"We are paying two-thirds of the separate school taxes in the area," he said. "Rural land in our township is assessed at $4 an acre, but across the line in Hastings County the assessment is $1.50 an acre."

Mr. Murray said his company is now paying public school taxes on private residential property it owns, and separate school taxes on the plant buildings.

Later, a company spokesman said Murray Brothers will pay a separate school tax of about $1,100 this year and a public school tax of about $1,200.

Mr. Murray told the board the assessment in his area of Nipissing district was set "years ago" by the parish priest.

"Being dead, he can't change it," commented Rev. Louis Casarteli of Maynooth.

"The Murray sawmill keeps Murchison going," the priest said. "Maybe it was the priest who assessed the property a long time ago when they were trying to start a separate school and these people graciously went along with it."

He said the mill rate in Murchison was raised from 40 mills to 60 in 1968 to pay for water services at the school.

"That school came into our board this year with no debts," Father Casarteli said. "They are being penalized at the rate of two to one for being thrifty and paying their way."

Edgar Paquet, business manager for the board, assured Mr. Murray tax relief was on the way, but not before next year.

"We have no more authority over assessment," he said with reference to the coming provincial take - over of assessment responsibility in 1970.

"You will see a more equitable balance between the public and separate schools next year," he told Mr. Murray. "We will have one equalized rate for all separate school areas across the system."

411 BRIDGE ST. EAST DIAL 962-5388

Bridge Ice Control Factor

However, because of the close proximity of the two bridges, mechanical channeling, with the use of ice saws, dragline and wrecking ball and channel blasting with thermite or other explosives, would now create a problem, it is stated.

The present river channel is little more than large enough to accommodate peak flows without flooding, says the report and emphasizes that before the authority allows any fill to be placed in the river it should establish a definite system of rules.

All fill should be confined by a retaining wall, no fill should be allowed on the outside of channel curves, and fill areas should never be allowed on both sides of the river at the same section.

While advising that encroachment should be avoided if possible, the report did state that fill may be placed in bank depressions where new berm created would actually straighten the channel.

The effects of a possible 10-foot berm along the west bank of the river from the College Street bridge to the Bay of Quinte was outlined in the report.

The general effect of the 10 - foot fill encroachment would be to elevate the water surface by about 1.5 feet throughout the stretch from College Street to the outlet.

The maximum increase in water level would be 2.20 feet at the lower-bridge.

Below the lower bridges there would be little effect from the 10-foot encroachment in the river channel with the water remaining within six inches of the level under existing conditions.

Careful consideration would have to be given to guard against erosion while also the effects of the encroachment have to be taken into account.

Belleville has a long history of flooding dating back well over 100 years, although there are no detailed accounts of floods occurring prior to 1864.

And they were reported to have been caused by ice jams with flood waters covering a large portion of the city in the lower area of the river.

A flood in 1868 is ranked among the five most severe ever occurring in the city.

The other four serious floods were in April, 1883; January to March, 1886; March 1918, and March 1936.

There has been no flood since 1936, but serious flooding occurred in April, 1870; February 1878, March 1884, March 1891; February and March 1916 and March 1922.

The floods occurring in 1868, 1885 and 1918 were caused by the breaking up of ice jams upstream. Severe flooding occurred in the lower portions of the city when the sudden rush of ice and water overtaxed the harbor ice.

In 1886 the ice jamming first occurred on January 10 and the city remained flooded until March 8.

The flood of 1886 was the most remarkable ever occurring in the city.

The river was open for a mile upstream from Corbyville and an estimated 23,000,000 cubic feet of frazil ice (ice crystals formed in fast flowing waters) were formed in the open water and swept downstream to plug the channel at the outlet of the river.

The last flood in 1936 took place after thawing had been going on for several days, followed by a heavy rainfall which floated down ice from above the Cannifton and Lazier dams.

The ice jammed at the bay where the ice sheet was still intact. This caused an ice jam which extended from the CPR bridge to above the Upper Bridge forcing water over the banks to inundate the lower section of the city.

Approximately 200 people were forced to leave their homes and an estimate of the loss ran as high as $250,000 based on the dollar value in 1936.

When the new Dundas Street bridge was planned the five midstream piers were placed to coincide with the piers of the railway bridge.

Accordingly the new bridge is not expected to increase the danger of ice jamming, but it is felt the two bridge structures could possibly make ice channeling operations more difficult.

Film Board Cutbacks

Visual effect as presented on film is one of the most powerful weapons of communication and propaganda.

Christopher Chapman's award winning film A Place to Stand, is a case in point. The film, shown at Expo and circulated widely since then, probably did more to bring visitors to the province of Ontario than any other single item of publicity.

Since then many other shorts have been produced by the provincial government's tourist department, and these too have been seen on many television outlets in the United States with consequent beneficial results to the tourist trade.

The "Friendly . . . Familiar . . . Foreign . . . and Near" theme, for example, is a prime example which has been exploited successfully both on television and in magazine advertising.

Thus it is all the more surprising to see such a vital factor in a country's image being downgraded at the national level. We refer to the dismissal under the government's austerity measures of more than 100 employees of the National Film Board.

It means the loss of some of the country's finest creative people and restriction of the functions of an organization which as much as any has helped foster Canada's image abroad. As one spokesman has put it, the NFB is a unique Canadian institution where films are made of a kind that are not made anywhere else.

Job security among government employees is a tenuous thing these days. Admittedly there are many departments which could function quite well with fewer employees, but the loss of people of this calibre is unfortunate.

Rather than putting its employees out on the streets (with nowhere to go save the United States or Britain), the Government could have been frugal in other directions — for example by curbing its weakness for extravagance in such areas as departmental furnishings and equipment generally. For too long in Ottawa money has been no object — courtesy of the taxpayers. The government is now cutting back — but the wall-to-wall carpeting and the like remain, while people's livelihood is tossed out the window.

Focus on Looks

Remember when the Beatles were possibly the most clean-cut group of musicians around. Well they have changed somewhat, to the point where they seem a little careless about their appearance.

Perhaps it does not really matter if John Lennon comes to Canada to talk peace through his shaggy and somewhat worn image; that is his affair, yet it is probably safe to say his words would carry more weight if his contemporary image resembled more of the clean-cut Lennon of old than the hippie-like personage of today.

Columnist Sydney Harris was talking recently about this matter of appearance and he concluded the human race has improved considerably in this regard. "The modern generation," he noted, "is probably the best-looking group of young people our country has bred. There are more pretty girls around than I can ever remember, and even the boys — beneath the formidable foliage and outrageous apparel — make my high school class of '34 look sick. . ."

He could be right — and while columnist Harris is an American, the same sense of style and individuality in clothes is apparent in Canada too. Not so much color as say in California — but then wait until next Spring!

A Moment of Beauty

Outside the sphere of political programming in which it often shows a disturbing leftist bias, the CBC does a good job in presenting shows of cultural worth and artistic beauty.

The recent half-hour program on Chilean poet Pablo Neruda was a case in point, and Monday night's hour long special with former world figure skating champion Peggy Ann Fleming and the Ice Follies was another.

If "poetry of motion" is a hackneyed phrase it is the only one which describes adequately the beauty of the skating art as portrayed by one so gifted as Miss Fleming, coupled with the guitar accompaniment of another great artist, Jose Feliciano.

A word of praise too for the American producers of the program and the Hydro companies who sponsored it.

At 59 George Hees Closes the Generation Gap

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Say what you will, about George Hees.

Say he is not a deep thinker.

Say he sometimes clowns around.

Say that the Liberal cabinet does not always take him seriously.

Say all those things and more.. and you would be right.

But never say that George Hees does not operate under a full head of zest, with a power-drive of enthusiasm, and above all say not that he is not always interesting and usually entertaining.

George Hees at 59 has been around these political parts for 20 years and in all that time since his House of Commons debut back in 1950, he has never been bored — or boring — nor ever blase.

In or out of the Commons, you will find no stuffing in the Hees shirt. And he gives it the old college try there on the floor of Parliament, and in no less generously colorful measure than, say, well, for example, on a high school auditorium platform.

Man! Just watch him go as he zaps it to the collegians, if you want to savor the Hees flavor.

There he stood, in front of 900 high schoolers here in the Capital, swinging a casual arm with the smooth and easy grace of the trained athlete to laughing response to the applause and cheers — just as he did 31 years ago in the Toronto Argonaut backfield on the sun-splashed oval of Varsity Stadium.

Of course, with the years he had changed his helmet, padded sweater and other gridgear for the sharpest set of double-breasted — jacket and weskit —threads you have seen this side of Saville Row.

They had introduced him, in all dignity, as Mr. George Hees, former Conservative Trade Minister, and still — after two decades — an honorable member of the House of Commons.

But it was not as a politician he wanted them to remember him, he was frank to say.

But rather as a member of the Argo's "great Grey Cup team of 1938."

Up they leaped with an immensely enthusiastic "Yeah, man!"

And over them, as if it were a benediction, he raised his arms with a great laughing "O-kay men, let's all simmer down."

So they simmered down.

And did he talk politics?

Uh uh.

Sports. And the "Great Years."

He told them what "sports do for a guy."

"Gives you guts, great heart, and perhaps as important as anything, self control."

He had them eating out of his hand, and he went on:

"It is wet, Cold, Blowing snow. The ball is greasy. Your fingers are dropping off. The game is losing. And they are blaming you.

"Quit? Are you crazy? You go on and on, hoping to win, but if you lose, it is with good heart."

Here he tossed in a couple of stories.

"It was Grey Cup, '38, and we were behind. Worse, I figured the referee was sticking us, and when he penalized us five yards, I blew, yelling 'Joe Breen, you stink.'"

(Joe Breen of 21 years ago since has made it as Joseph Breen, President of Canada Cement.)

"Joe Breen heard me just as he was leaning over to place the ball five yards back — and he straightened, scooping up the ball and marched back another 10 yards.

"Then turning, he put his hands on his hips and barked: 'Hees, do I smell any belter from here?'"

After that, Hees vowed never again to ass referees. He was learning self control.

But there was a further lesson, the very next year when he was coaching a senior collegiate team. Those were the days before unlimited substitutions, and a coach could only communicate with the team on the field by uncertain extra sensory perception or sure (if illegal) signals from the bench.

He was so signalling when the referee spotted it and penalized the team five yards.

"Listen, stupid," he raged, "you are such a lousy referee you do not even know the penalty for illegal signalling from the bench is 15, not five yards!"

"Hees," the referee coolly told him, "the kind of coaching you have been doing this afternoon is not worth more than five yards."

The collegian key clubbers loved it. Loved Hees, too.

"Wasting my time talking to kids?" he echoed news men when they suggested there might be more politically profitable things to do.

"These kids," he said, "are going to be voting in a couple more years."

And so they will — and they will remember him as a kindred spirit even if he is three times their age.

They just might give him some of their votes, because George Hees is going to be sticking around maybe for another 20 or so years.

He is having too much fun to quit and go off to enjoy his several million bucks.

Trenton Man Protests CNR's Proposed Transfer of Staff

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

May I as a citizen, and a long standing employee of the Canadian National Railways have space in your paper to reply to Mr. H. J. Fast, Rideau area manager, of the CNR concerning his release to the public about the transfer of work from Belleville to Montreal.

Mr. Fast has stated that the CNR will pay for the cost of moving us to Montreal, as well as the real estate fees for selling our homes. We will not suffer any financial loss through this move. We have the option of exercising our seniority rights in the city or other Eastern Ontario communities.

He also states that there is no such plan at this point in time to abolish the Rideau area.

What Mr. Fast has not stated is the following:

With this move to Montreal, Que. we will not receive any higher salary. On the contrary, some of us may receive less.

We immediately would have to pay more money for auto insurance, fire insurance on our homes and pay more to get to and from our jobs. It would, take longer for the majority of us to get to and from our jobs. Then there are parking fees.

By going to Montreal we would have no seniority rights and no guarantee of work in the future should our company decide to make further reductions in work forces.

He does not state that by exercising our seniority rights with in our own community most of us would have to take jobs that pay less.

He does not state the conditions required by law within the province of Quebec and by CNR policy which we would have to work by.

Some of these are the following: Company policy requires employees to be bilingual on some jobs in Quebec — none of us are. The Province of Quebec is attempting to have the French language as the working language in the province. The CNR has in the past and will continue to require employees to learn to speak, read and write in French in the province.

He says nothing of the separatist movement within Quebec which has an effect on the English speaking and French speaking people. Can we educate our children in English if we so desire? Are we assured of protection of our personal property and life from separatist movements?

These are well chosen words Mr. Fast when you say there is no such plan at this point in time to abolish the Rideau area, I say nonsense Sir, we all know very well that this movement of IT employees' work to Montreal is only the beginning of the elimination of the Rideau area. Where then would we exercise our seniority?

In closing I would like to say instead of attempting to move men, women and children, these being ourselves and our families, to machines why does the CNR not move the machines to us. They have no hearts or souls.

In this way the Can. Nat. Rlys. can make effective savings without undue suffering of our families.

Italians Fear History Could Repeat Itself

By CY FOX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The killing of 14 persons in a Milan bomb explosion has shocked Italians into a months sense of national crisis following a year of crippling strikes and street disorders.

Some Italians hope the disaster will turn men of all political persuasions against the idea of violence and hasten the day when the country's long squabbling parliamentarians unite to deal constructively with the social and economic problems prompting the deep unrest.

But the gravity of the situation is clear from the frequency with which comparisons are made between it and the turbulent months preceding Benito Mussolini's assumption of power in Italy 47 years ago.

In those days, too, there were strikes, as well as stubborn disagreements among moderate politicians which made strong democratic government impossible and destroyed faith in parliamentary institutions.

Extremists of the left and right vied for control of the streets in an atmosphere of violence exemplified by the 1921 bomb blast which took 20 lives at a theatre in Milan.

Heading for two decades as Fascist dictator of Italy, Mussolini consistently played on middle-class fears of a Communist takeover.

These fears remain today, with almost 30 per cent of the vote going to Communists in the last general election.

Anarchists, a vocal force in Italy since the 19th century, also are active on the far left, as are Maoists and Trotskyites.

They face a vociferous enemy in the revived Fascist movement, the extreme right in general now controlling 61 out of the 630 seats in the Italian parliament.

Yet democracy in Italy probably stands a better chance of surviving its current trials than it did against the extremist pressures that beset it after the First World War.

The war disrupted the country's economic and social life in a manner tailor-made for extremist agitators.

The Treaty of Versailles, which formally ended the conflict, gave Mussolini an extra propaganda advantage through its failure to satisfy Italian territorial claims.

Nevertheless, Italy's contemporary problems have all the earmarks of being insoluble unless a great change comes over the nation's middle-of-the-road politicians.

The Christian Democrats, who govern under Prime Minister Mariano Rumor, are split over the issue of Communist participation in future cabinets.

So are the Socialists, whose internal disagreements on the Communist question led to their division into two separate parties.

The same issue helped bring down a coalition of moderate parties last summer.

On Rumor's attempts to restore unity depend Italy's chances of resolving mass dissatisfaction with wages, social services, housing, education, the legal system, and of thus easing the dangers to its present political system.

Rising Sport

Wheeler-dealers Take Over Bleecker

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

Bellevillians soon may be rolling the hours away with their feet — if a new sport introduced by the city's recreation department catches on.

Not that roller skating is exactly new. But for Belleville, the program being unveiled tomorrow night by the department organizes it as a mass sport for the first time.

"It's something that has not been done here before and we're hoping it's a success," says assistant recreation director Clifford Belch.

And, to meet the demands of a possible instant hit, the department already has 200 pairs of skates available — and ready to roll.

The equipment is rented out from Toronto professional Jim Betts, whose business is roller skating and who initiates the new sport tomorrow night with a series of demonstrations.

Mr. Betts already has inspected the auditorium and pronounced its smoothened concrete floor suitable for the sport.

The skates are also designed for maximum wear and a minimum of tear on flooring, says Mr. Betts.

Gone are the heavy steel-wheeled appliances once a familiar plaything of free-wheeling youngsters.

The wheels now are made of a nylon - plastic fibre, light but durable.

"They won't mark the floor and they wear for a long time," says Mr. Belch.

Quality of the skates — and the sports fun potential — was demonstrated privately last night.

The department invited young members of Eastminster United Church's Canadian Girls in Training group to try their hand — and feet — on the floor.

With little difficulty they skated around the auditorium for nearly 90 minutes.

Friday, Saturday and Sunday sees the sport thrown open for free participation. After that — during the Christmas holidays — skaters must pay rental-admission fees. Youngsters will pay 50 cents, adults $1.

Skates are carefully checked before and after leasing, a chore specifically assigned to Belleville youth Terry Summers.

"We hope to go right through to the end of March with the program," says Mr. Belch.

However, if the public demonstrates popular response, the sport could be extended through the summer months, he adds.

Construction Supervision Course Offered

A 10-week course in effective supervision for owners, managers, supervisors and foremen in the construction industry will be offered by Loyalist College and the Quinte Construction Association, beginning January 12.

David Heeley, campus planning coordinator at Loyalist College, who provided instruction in similar courses before coming to Belleville, will be the course leader. Mr. Heeley is a member of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada.

An Ontario Department of Education certificate will be awarded on successful completion of the course, which is one of a series of seminars offered under the management development program of the Applied Arts and Technology Branch of the Ontario Department of Education.

A feature of the course is introduction to the critical path method and its use as an aid to successful project management. Those taking the course will receive a detailed reference manual covering factors of prime consideration in the of small, medium and large mechanical, electrical or general contracting jobs. The course content is applicable to private business firms and service industries as well as government and institutional agencies which may be engaged in various aspects of construction.

In the 10 weekly two-hour sessions the following topics will be presented based on cases and in readings and discussions: the role of the supervisor concepts of effective supervision; taking proper action; motivation of the worker; setting goals and objectives; planning the job; fundamentals of CPM; measuring progress and costs; making job improvements; organizing and planning your time.

Tiny Tim and Teen-ager Wed On TV While Millions Watch

NEW YORK (Reuters) — Pop singer Tiny Tim tiptoed through 10,000 tulips with his teen-age bride after his wedding here — and pledged to abstain from sex for three days.

"We must keep the mind cool . . . put the laws of Christian cleanliness first and man last," the long-haired falsetto-voiced groom said Wednesday night after his television studio wedding to Vicki Budinger, a 17-year-old fan.

After the ceremony—in a prefabricated Victorian mansion complete with marble pillars, chandeliers and sconces—the couple paraded down a make-shift aisle surrounded with the 10,000 tulips imported from Holland, a tribute to his hit song "Tiptoe Through the Tulips" which shot him to fame.

The wedding took place on the Johnny Carson Tonight television show.

The ceremony, in NBC's Manhattan studios, was taped before 250 guests and telecast five hours later; NBC estimated that 20,000,000 viewers watched the vows.

Tiny Tim—he admits to being 18 years old but school records say he is 23—turned up in a Victorian waistcoat, frock coat and cape and carrying a carved walking stick.

He warned his bride "not yet" as she leaned toward him, apparently for a kiss, as they met in the aisle.

Then the six-foot crooner recited his marriage vows in a mono-tone a few octaves lower than his usual falsetto and added he would "be sweet, gentle and not puffed-up."

The bride, who met him in Philadelphia at an autograph party for his book Beautiful Thoughts, wore a $2,300 ivory gown with a high lace-trimmed neck and huge mutton-chop sleeves.

Tiny Tim, whose eccentric appearance, ubiquitous ukelele and reordering of tunes from a bygone era have turned him from an itinerant Greenwich Village performer into one of the world's biggest pop attractions, said "it had to be l-o-v-e at first sight."

He added: "We want as many children as the good Lord allows. How many he hasn't said yet."

The singer, who once declared, "I don't believe in kissing, or holding hands or touching before marriage," unabashedly wears rouge and lipstick, carries his jars of face cream to engagements in a plastic shopping bag, eats carrots and raw honey, and perfumes his floppy locks several times a day.

The wedding was conducted by Presbyterian minister Rev. William Glenesk of New York, who incorporates rock 'n' roll and poetry in his services.

Then, in his warbling falsetto, Tiny Tim serenaded his bride with two songs composed for the occasion—The Wedding Song for Miss Vicky and You Were There.

They refused champagne but toasted each other with a blend of milk and honey.

"It was a good idea, so why not!" the bride declared in one of her few comments before the couple left for a honeymoon at the Bahamas gambling resort of Freeport.

The first three days will be spent apart, Tiny Tim said, in accordance with the Old Testament tradition of Tobias.

Seaway Future Cloudy

TORONTO (CP) — When the Welland Canal locks slide shut for another season at midnight Monday night they will close on a St. Lawrence seaway whose future, after 10 years in the sun, is starting to cloud over.

The Montreal section closed Wednesday, to end that section of the $500,000,000 inland waterway's current season.

Seaway proponents in the 1950s predicted it would transform the inland economies of Canada and the United States, particularly Canada.

The transformation has been less than many expected, and the seaway has brought problems to the Canadian shipping industry.

True, cargo along the seaway has almost tripled since it opened in 1959. But expenses have risen four-fold—to $17,700,000 last year from $4,600,000 in 1959— and the seaway is in debt deeper than ever to the governments who financed it.

Since its peak season in 1966 it has been battered by strikes and buffeted by the encroachment of alternate transport means.

Cargo volume has slackened. This year, despite an expected 10-per-cent increase, cargo dropped 14 per cent from 1968.

Tonnage figures to Dec. 14, released by seaway officials Wednesday, show total cargo through Montreal at 40,000,000 tons this season compared with 48,000,000 last year, a drop of 16 per cent. Through the Welland, cargo dropped to 52,000,000 tons from 58,000,000, down nine per cent.

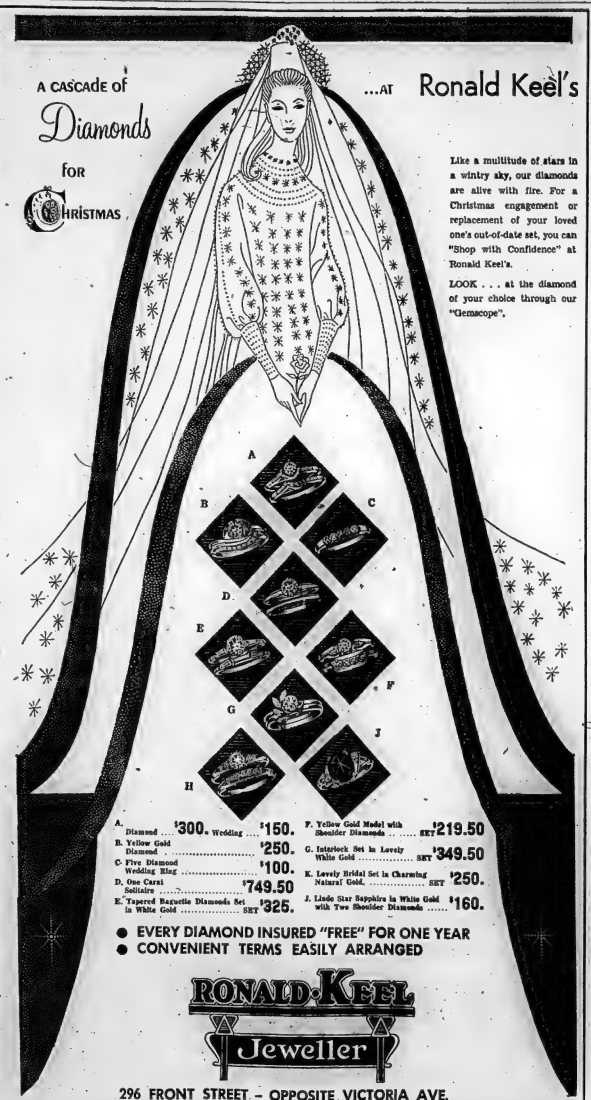
There are a variety of reasons. Declining Canadian wheat exports led to an almost 20-per-cent drop in wheat shipments, which usually comprise at least 18 per cent of all seaway traffic.

Iron ore shipments, usually a third of total traffic, were off 27 per cent at the Welland and 35 per cent at Montreal.

Seaway officials blame strikes at Quebec iron ore companies which halted deliveries for more than two months last summer.

But some shipping officials say increasing quantities of Lower St. Lawrence ore are already being shipped through the Gulf of St. Lawrence to the U.S. They say that if seaway costs increase the economic advantage of shipping inland will disappear.

Coal cargoes, the other big bulk commodity on the waterway, rose slightly this year—to 11,955,000 tons from 10,000,000 tons.



But all the increase was in U.S. coal from Lake Erie brought through the Welland canal to hydroelectric plants and steel companies on Lake Ontario. Shipments through Montreal dropped almost by half because the end of government subsidies on Nova Scotia coal has also ended the economy of shipping it to Ontario. Such shipments are expected virtually to end next year.

Some kinds of cargo were up sharply from 1968. Containerized shipments through Montreal rose 50 per cent and car and truck shipments through both seaway sections rose to 189,000 tons from 142,000 tons.

But all the increases were in commodities which form less than 10 per cent of seaway traffic. Shipments of finished iron and steel, which amounted to about 5,000,000 tons annually, were down 20 per cent.

The seaway has smoothed its technical problems—except for locks and a draft unable to handle really large ship.

Eaton Warns U.S. Not to Think Hanoi Defeated, Discouraged

TOKYO (AP) — Cleveland industrialist Cyrus Eaton said today the United States should not believe that North Vietnam is "defeated or discouraged" or that it no longer has the capacity to fight.

After a week in Hanoi, the 86-year-old Canadian-born millionaire reported that the North Vietnamese "would be delighted to end the war, but they are prepared to fight on no matter what time is involved, and they are sure of the massive support of all the Communist countries in the world."

Eaton—sponsor of the Pugwash Conference, which periodically brings Communist and Western leaders together for discussions—said Premier Pham Van Dong and other leaders with whom he spoke appeared convinced that the United States intends to continue the war, either indirectly or through air and naval support for the Saigon government.

The Hanoi chiefs "have made plans for a couple years more of war," he said.

Eaton, a native of Pugwash, N.S., said the North Vietnamese do not regard the continuing withdrawal of American troops as "a serious effort" but only as a "token to impress the United States."

Eaton said the North Vietnamese told him they want the Paris peace talks to continue even though some changes in personnel may be involved.

"They want the United States to stop pretending it can't speak for the Saigon government.

"The United States must take a more realistic view of the situation. It has got to offer terms to end this war. It cannot offer other armies to take its place."

He gathered, he said, that if President Nixon would give a firm assurance he is willing to end the war, the North Vietnamese would respond "with all sorts of flexibility."

"I think this war could be ended overnight on terms which would be acceptable to any American businessman."

Eaton said that among the Hanoi leaders the "feeling of nationalism far surpasses their attachment to communism."

"They don't want to be dominated by Russia, China or the United States. Every fighting Israelist has been aroused by foreign soldiers on their soil."

Fort's Garrison Slain

CAIRO (Reuters) — Egypt said today that an Egyptian infantry unit raided an Israeli fort in the northern sector of the Suez canal Wednesday night, killing its entire garrison.

An Egyptian military spokesman said three members of the attacking force were killed and the rest returned safely to base.

He did not give numbers for the Israeli casualties but said the entire Israeli force, one tank and two cars were destroyed.

Newark Mayor Is on Job In Spite of Indictment

NEWARK, N. J. (AP) — Mayor Hugh J. Addonizio pledged "business as usual" today despite his indictment by a federal grand jury investigating alleged official corruption New Jersey's largest city.

Demands for the ouster of Addonizio and of other officials indicted Wednesday on charges involving extortion and tax evasion drew this reply from Gov. Richard J. Hughes:

"New Jersey law does not authorize removal of a public official because he is under indictment."

Addonizio made it clear he had no intention of resigning.

The indictments allege extortion of $238,000 from the engineering firm of Constad, Inc., a contractor of various city projects, including sewer construction and urban renewal.

Those indicted besides the mayor include:

— Anthony (Tony Boy) Bolardo, who the FBI has named as a Mafia figure.

— Municipal Court Judge Anthony Giuliano, whose activities on the bench were suspended by the New Jersey Supreme Court "pending the outcome of said indictment."

— City Councilmen Calvin West, Irvine Turner, and Frank Addonizio, a distant cousin of the mayor; and Lee Bernstein, a former city councilman.

— Former corporation counsels Philip E. Gordon and Norman N. Schiff.

— Anthony LaMorte, head of the Municipal Utilities Authority, and James Callaghan, an employee of the authority.

— Contractors Joseph Biancone, Mario Gelo Ralph Vicaro and Benjamin Krush.

The 53-year-old mayor also was charged with income-tax evasion. The indictment said that in 1963 he reported an income of $38,423, while, actually making much more.

Bolardo, son of reputed Mafia boss Ruggiero (Richie the Boot) Bolardo, was charged with reporting lower than actual income of $265,053 in 1966, plus $80,763 in 1967 and $67,191 in 1968. The younger Bolardo had been sought for grand jury questioning but disappeared last week.

Also charged with income-tax evasion were Frank Addonizio, Bernstein, Callaghan, Gordon, Giuliano, LaMorte, Vicaro, Biancone, Turner and West.

In one extortion count, the defendants, except for Biancone, were accused of delaying construction of a Newark sewerage project in 1965 by "the wrongful use of fear, of financial injury and under the color of official right."

The indictments contained 65 counts alleging each of the 13 defendants obtained payments of $500 to $37,000 from Constad, Inc.

The mayor surrendered about an hour after the indictments and was released on $25,000 bail by Judge Robert F. Shaw of U.S. district court who ordered the mayor's travel restricted to New Jersey. The mayor is to be arraigned before Shaw Friday.

Food and Drug Regulations will Protect Consumer

EDMONTON (CP) — Proposed regulations by the Canadian food and drug directorate will protect the Canadian consumer from imitation or "filled" that is nutritionally inferior to whole milk, says Margaret Gee, home economist at the University of Alberta.

In imitation milk, the butterfat content is replaced, usually by coconut oil, and the product sells for as little as 15 cents a quart.

The proposed regulations will ensure that when the product is introduced in Canada it will be nutritionally equal to milk, Mrs. Gee told a refresher course for graduate home economists.

She said the directorate believes that in the future many people may depend on formulated food to supply essential nutrients, but that the nutritional value should be at least equal to foods replaced or imitated.

Missionaries To Spend Yule Season Here

Two missionaries from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will spend their Christmas and New Year's season in the Belleville area.

Elder Richard Smith, of Petal, Mississippi, has served in London, St. Thomas and Toronto during the four months he has been called to the Great Canadian Mission. Elder Stacey Madson, of Malad, Idaho, came into the area October 18 and has been serving here since.

Their stay will consist of visiting local homes and youth organizations, explaining the principles and basic beliefs of the L.D.S. religion. Both are 19 years old.

"The Book of Mormon which is a history of the ancient inhabitants of the American continent, will be the most valuable interest to the people we meet," explained Elder Tolbert.

Elder Madson stated, "The Book of Mormon is another Testament of Jesus Christ. Prophet Joseph Smith, who translated the book from gold plates lighted in a hillside in New York."

Talk Given on 'Operation Beaver'

Miss Diane Savage, an audiologist at the OSD, was guest speaker for Eastminster UCW at their Christmas meeting. She presented colorful pictures and gave a vivid account of her summer's work with "Operation Beaver". Mrs. Kay McCauley introduced Miss Savage.

Miss Savage is a graduate of BCI, Peterborough Teachers' College, and Manchester University. She also spent one summer with Crossroads Africa and this last summer with Operation Beaver at Wabasca in north-west Alberta.

"Operation Beaver," Miss Savage explained, is a voluntary organization of young people, one third of whom must be Canadian Indians, one third Canadians other than Indian, and one third people from other countries. Groups of these are sent into various parts of Canada to help the Indians of the area with recreational projects." In Miss Savage's group were eleven "Beavers" who came from widely scattered parts of Canada, the U.S.A., Philippines, Ireland, Ceylon and England. After an orientation program at Slave Lake in July, they proceeded to Wabasca where five Indian reservations are located within a five mile radius. Their project was to help these Indians build five houses.

The pictured and striking accounts of daily events of work and play, of her fellow Beavers, of local Indians and Metis, and especially of the Indian children, showed Miss Savage's great delight in her work, and a deep understanding of the people with whom she worked. "Everyone is an individual personality," she said.

Telling a story to illustrate the point, she added "Drinking is the greatest social problem among the North-West Indians, but the best way to solve the problem is to direct their energies in the right way". Her two concerns were what would happen to the Indian children, and would the Indian culture die out.

In conclusion she stated that the summer's project was important, but more important was the fact that the Beavers had worked with the people and had got to know them.

Mrs. Lois Clarke expressed the appreciation of those present and presented the speaker with a gift.

Previous to Miss Savage's talk, the group enjoyed a potluck supper with attractively decorated tables arranged by the Emerald group of the UCW.

A most meaningful and impressive candlelight worship service was presented around a creche scene by Gerry Read, Bonnie Wormald, Bobbie Belfry and Thelma Zwicker. All were dressed in colorful costumes of shepherds and prophets which had been brought from Iran by Mrs. Belfry. Readings from the Bible were interspersed by appropriate Christmas carols sung by everyone present.

A short business meeting concluded with the announcement that the Silver group would be in charge of the next meeting to be held in the afternoon of January 12.

Hastings Manor Group Lists Officers

There was an excellent attendence at the Auxiliary meeting of the Hastings Manor held on Monday of this week.

The president, Mrs. F. Davidson conducted the meeting and gave some thoughts on Christmas cards. Reports given included a report on last year's activities. Mrs. Kingston reported there had been five rose bowls sent to residents in the Belleville hospital during the past month with a total of 36 being sent during the past year. The treasurer's report was given which showed a gratifying amount on hand for the year's closing. Reports were given on the progress of the tuck shop and the coffee shop which also were very gratifying. The visiting committees reported a total of 167 visits made to the Manor during the past month by various organizations.

Mrs. C. Holmes installed the officers for 1970: past president Mrs. F. Davidson; president Mrs. D. MacLean: 1st vice-president Mrs. O. Bertrand: 2nd vice - president Mrs. N. Wessels: recording secretary, Mrs. K. Harsden; treasurer Mrs. H. E. Leslie; social convener Mrs. B. Atkins. Other conveners were also elected.

Mrs. Davidson thanked everyone for their co-operation during her time in office as president. Mrs. Ray and Mrs. Losey were thanked and presented with a gift for their untiring efforts in the tuck shop.

It was announced there would be a gift-wrapping bee at the Manor on Dec. 17 and as many as possible were asked to assist.

At the conclusion of the business everyone joined the residents in the dining-room for the customary birthday party. Greetings were extended to the guests of honor and a friendship circle formed around them and the birthday song sung.

Two of the residents shared the honor of being the eldest guests present, Mr. George Ketcheson and Mrs. Mary LaRue.

Pictures were taken and all enjoyed a social time with Mrs. N. Wessels and Mrs. F. Davidson presiding at the tea table which was decorated in keeping with this festive season.

Sr. Citizens Enjoy Annual Yule Party

MARMORA — A fitting prelude to the annual Christmas party of Marmora Senior Citizens Club, Wednesday, was a turkey dinner at the White Hall which 44 members and friends thoroughly enjoyed.

After thanks was extended to the ACW of St. Paul's Anglican Church for catering to the banquet, members continued the festivities of the day at their club room, beautifully decorated for the occasion by president, Mrs. Eva Post, Mrs. Arthur Reynolds, Mrs. Percy Gordon and Mrs. Florence Fluke.

A Christmas program arranged by the president included appropriate numbers for Christmas by Mrs. Pearl Bonier, Mrs. Don Bailey, and Mrs. Robert Southworth. Mrs. Fluke gave a reading on the customs of Christmas, and a contest about Christmas hymns by Mrs. Post was won by Mrs. Garth Sahine. The five voices of members contributed to the singing of traditional carols. Two pleasants donated by Mr. and Mrs. S. Fondyga were won by Mrs. William Archer and Mrs. John Hebner.

During the exchange of gifts, tea and Christmas cake were served, with the concluding wish by the president to all for a happy and safe holiday season.

Rotary Club Holds Party For the Blind

St. Andrew's Church hall was the scene of the 22nd annual Christmas party for the blind of Hastings County given by the Rotary Club.

Mr. E. Fairman of the CNIB advisory board was chairman. Rev. L. Sutherland invoked the blessing. A tasty meal of turkey and all the trimmings was served by the women of the church to some 80 guests.

Greetings were brought from Mr. R. Lanping, president of Rotary, Miss Pat Baverstock, president, White Cane Club, Mr. G. Sheppard and Mr. L. Lesperance, field secretaries from CNIB, Kingston.

Entertainment was provided by Clyde Dawson on the accordion and two solos by Colin Adams accompanied by Alec Gordon on piano.

Winners of the jelly bean contest were Mrs. Brydges, Mary Gregory, Twilla Litler and Kenneth Little.

Ann Landers

Sister Queries Legal Responsibility of Kin

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was always amused by the nitwits who sent their problems to you. Now I have a problem that is not very amusing.

Last week my sister-in-law brought my brother to our home and dumped him here. She screamed, "You made him this way, now take care of him!" Then she threw his suitcase in the corner and left.

My brother, Judd, is 52 and completely senile. His wife claims he began to act nutty after I arranged for him to meet an old flame in my home. I realize now it was a mistake, but I had no idea it would create such a mess. Shortly after that meeting Judd began to go to pieces physically. The doctor advised his wife to take him to a psychiatrist. The psychiatrist told my sister-in-law that he was aware of Judd's long history of romantic involvements because several of his women patients described affairs with him. My sister-in-law became so incensed she went to a lawyer the next day and started divorce proceedings.

My questions are as follows: Am I legally responsible for my brother? Can philandering cause senility? Is there a cure for it? Will a Home For The Aged take a man 527 pieces answer. I'm stymied. — PENITENT CUPID IN ILLINOIS.

DEAR PEN: I find it difficult to believe that a psychiatrist would volunteer information about other patients. I also find your use of the word senile baffling. If philandering caused your brother's breakdown, he is not senile, he is emotionally disturbed. If he is indeed a victim of premature senility, this is an organic illness and not related to his lady friends.

I suggest that you take your brother to another physician to verify his psychiatric problem. And I hope you will see a lawyer in regard to the legal questions. Laws vary according to state and what might be legal in Illinois might not be legal elsewhere.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: How dumb can you get? I nearly got an attack of apoplexy when you told that woman, "A man who is home every night is not likely to be having an affair at the office during his lunch hour."

It took me five years to figure out why my husband was pooped all the time. Right after dinner Glenn folded like a tent. One day I accidentally locked myself out of the house. I had to go to Glenn's place of business to get a key. It was then that I caught him — in broad daylight at 1:15 p.m. in his office with the door locked.

So why don't you wake up and smell the coffee, kiddo? And tell me how you like it. — FORMER DUMBELL.

DEAR FORMER: The coffee smells fine. It's the rest of the story that doesn't smell so good. The next letter might be of interest to you. Read on.

* * *

DEAR ANN: So a man who is home every night is not likely to be having an affair, eh? Well, you're wrong, honey, and I've seen the proof with my own eyes.

My office faces a parking lot that serves about 250 people whose offices are in this building. You wouldn't believe what I see every day from my window from 12:00 to 2:00 p.m. — and without binoculars.

What do you have to say now, Ann Landers? — TWENTY-TWENTY VISION.

DEAR VISION: I say, it's time you got away from the window and went to lunch.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Will you print, please, this definition? I ran across it recently and I believe it says a mouthful. "A hippie is a person who looks like Tarzan, chooses like Jane and smells like Cheetah." Thanks. — DOWN WITH EYESORES ON THE LANDSCAPE.

DEAR DOWN: That definition has been kicked around for at least two years. I'm printing it out of respect to old age.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "Behave yourselves and quit bickering or you won't get any Christmas presents.—For" certainly not going to go to all the work of getting ready for Christmas if you're going to be so mean to each other."

Mother: "Let's put the boys away for awhile and I'll read you a story while we have some fudge and cookies. I need a little rest, too, before I finish getting the house cleaned up for the holidays."

Don't let yourself get trapped into making threats you wouldn't carry out just because the holiday chores seem to be overwhelming you. Take a break with the children and both your tension and their irritability may melt away.

Both Parties Should Be Examined for Fertility

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Our problem is that we have no children. I have been to three doctors about this; two said there was nothing wrong with me, and third, an infertility specialist, wanted to organize a schedule of examinations, including hospitalization and minor surgery, costing about $500.

I left after one interview. I simply cannot afford that much money for tests like these which may lead to negative results anyway. — Still Hoping.

Dear Still Hoping: My gynecological consultant wonders that no plan was made to examine your husband. In sterile couples, the fault is on the man's side in about 35 percent of cases, and he should be checked before any surgery or other expensive procedure is done to the wife.

Conception occurs over a period of about 30 hours each month, and that's all. The examining doctor takes this into consideration in determining possible infertility.

Other special tests come later. Sometimes minor hospital procedures can solve the problem. The charge you mention sounds like far too much, to my doctor.

Contact the gynecological clinic at your own general hospital for advice about examinations for both your husband and yourself.

Dear Doris: My husband is a salesman and those invited to our party would be other salesmen, their wives, secretaries and husbands.

Do you have any suggestions for games? Have you ever heard of an adult scavenger hunt? — Eager for Ideas.

Dear Eager: The 10-cent leaflet, "Party Games and Refreshments" has some good ideas and it is on its way. Haven't heard of an adult scavenger hunt, but why not? Especially if you live where folks are friendly and will enjoy going along with any old gag.

Each couple might be given a list of trivia — empty thread spools, milk bottles, caps, leaf from a house plant, plastic sandwich bag, broken balloon — and sent out to scrounge them in the neighborhood.

If you do it, let's know how it works out.

Ways of Serving Raspberry Sauce

By MARY MOORE

Working girls — teachers, nurses, sales people, secretaries, hairdressers, all of you business girls who desperately need short cuts to have Christmas dinner on the table on time — take note.

A clear raspberry sauce is going to be the topping that makes something underneath look and taste Christmasy.

First I will describe the sauce and then suggest what will go underneath it.

CLEAR RASPBERRY SAUCE

One 15-oz. pkge. fresh frozen raspberries
Water (see below)
1 tbsp. arrowroot flour (or corn starch)
2 tbsps. sugar
Shake of salt

Thaw frozen raspberries and drain through sieve and measure juice. Push raspberries through sieve to puree them. Make up to two cups by adding water to juice and puree.

In a saucepan mix dry together the arrowroot flour (which may be bought at large drug stores) (or corn starch), sugar and salt. Then stir in raspberry puree and syrup and cook stirring until thick and 1 min. super. Cool. Pour into jar, cover and chill. May be made two or three days in advance of Christmas. (Note: If desired 2 tbsps. Cointreau or Drambuie may be added to Raspberry Sauce.)

WAYS OF Serving Raspberry SAUCE:

1) In stemmed glasses put a scoop of ice cream, over it, round side up, place a large drained canned half peach or pear, spoon Raspberry Sauce over all and serve at once.

2) The hectically busy girls will be glad to know it makes a good topping for canned rice or tapioca pudding and gives a festive air.

3) Serve Raspberry Sauce over blanc mange pudding in stemmed glasses.

Good luck and God bless all working mothers.

Dinner Menus

THURSDAY

SUNDAY (Guests)

Park Dale Home and School

Educational System Explained by Chairman

Members of the Park Dale Home and School Association attended a combined meeting recently in the school auditorium. After a brief business meeting conducted by the president of the association, J. Cox, the regular meeting was concluded, to leave ample time for special guest speakers.

Guests were introduced by school principal Mr. Wright, who welcomed the members and pointed out the creative murals which students in the school had designed. These were on display in the school corridors and in the auditorium.

He also introduced the vice-principal Mr. Burnett, who thanked the many parents who had assisted in instructing the Friday afternoon activity groups which are supervised by the teaching staff.

The school choir (consisting of over 50 students) conducted by Mrs. Gregory presented two Christmas selections. The choir was accompanied by Miss Johnson on the piano and bells and like many school choirs in the area its selections have been recorded by CJBQ for broadcasting at a later date.

Mrs. Evelyn Bailey, program chairman introduced James Clarke, chairman of the Hastings County Board of Education who discussed the formation of the present Board which has combined 12 smaller boards. He explained in detail the purpose, objectives and goals of the present board which now encompasses 78 schools, 24,000 children and 1,100 teachers. He stated that the present board has improved upon transportation provided to students who travel approximately one and one-quarter million miles a year on a budget of about one million dollars. Accomplishments include kindergarten being introduced to all schools; oral French being taught in many, as well as Family Life courses.

Book About Canadian Rockies Turns Out to Be Best-seller

EDMONTON (CP) — Esther Fraser has always been fascinated with the Canadian Rockies and with the courageous early explorers who first struggled to surmount them.

For years she read everything she could find on the Rockies and collected stories about the people who knew them best in the early days.

But it has still come as a surprise to this tall, quiet mother of two grown children that she now is the author of a best-selling book about the mountains.

The Canadian Rockies: Early Travels and Explorations went on sale in November. Of the 7,500 copies in the first printing, 4,500 had been ordered in advance, which makes it something of a Canadian best seller.

As well, it's an award-winner. In mid-November Mrs. Fraser, a native Albertan from the Hanna area, received a Hudson's Bay Co. Beaver award for the best manuscript written by an Edmonton author.

"I had never meant to write a book," she said in an interview. "But I was fascinated by the stories of the early Canadian explorers, and the libraries are so frustrating.

"All the material was spread out in half a dozen books."

Mrs. Fraser explained that before she began The Canadian Rockies her writing experience had been limited to scripts for radio-school broadcasts.

When a broadcast series on Trailblazers in the Rockies received a favorable reception, she decided to write a small paperback history about the better-known mountains. This would have been sold in stores in national parks.

"I dropped in to see Mel Hurtig, the Edmonton publisher, to see how much it would cost to get a little paperback printed for this purpose," she said.

"He asked me if I knew my stuff and I said 'Yes, I do.'

"Then he asked me if I could write and I said I thought I could.

"So he suggested I forget the paperback idea because people would just read it and throw it away. He suggested I write a book and he'd consider publishing it.

"I wrote about six chapters and then I couldn't bear not knowing if all that work was going to be of any use. So I took him the six chapters to look over."

Mrs. Fraser says she "didn't know how I was going to stand the suspense—then he phoned me just a few days later and said to go ahead."

The result is a 260-page book that spans the years from 1800 to 1940. It is a book for the general reader and focuses on the chief passes and main peaks of the Rockies and Selkirks.

"I hope it will awaken some Canadians to the excitement and wonder of some of our early explorers, for they are sometimes forgotten men," she said.

One of her favorite explorers is Sir George Simpson, who was "Banff's first tourist." In one passage in her book she describes his feast in the shadow of the Rockies: roast turkey, suckling pig, new bread, fresh butter, eggs, ale and wine.

When she talks about her mountain men, her face brightens, her eyes glow and she smiles to herself.

"There are still a lot of stories to tell about the mountains and the people who live in them," she says.

So now she's thinking about another book.

AWARD - WINNING AUTHOR — Mrs. Esther Fraser, always fascinated with the Canadian Rockies and the courageous explorers who hopped them, has produced a best-selling, award-winning book about the mountains. Previous writing experience was limited to scripts for radio - school broadcasts. (CP Photo).

Bayside Guides Plan Visitation

The Bayside Guides held their Christmas party in Bayside School Gymnasium recently with their leaders, Lt. Doreen Pelletier and Lt. Shealeagh Watson presiding.

The guides got on four Christmas skits prepared by themselves. Afterwards there was an exchange of Christmas gifts and each guide brought a donation of canned goods. The box has been packed and passed on to the Salvation Army for distribution to the needy.

On Monday evening, December 22 the guides and their leaders will meet at Green Acres Nursing Home where they will entertain the patients by singing Christmas carols.

Braun Says Seventies Too Soon for Mars

WASHINGTON—(CP) — The man who developed the rockets that put Americans on the moon says a manned flight to Mars should not be attempted during the 1970s.

Dr. Wernher von Braun, in written answers to questions submitted by The Canadian Press, said the groundwork for a manned Mars expedition in the early 1980s must be laid through advancement of technology during the next decade.

"First we must learn more about the Martian environment through unmanned, heavily-instrumented probes, just as we did before making a trip to the moon," said the director of the Marshall Space Flight Centre in Alabama.

"Life support systems must be improved to sustain men in space for almost two years. Propulsion systems must be advanced, and the use of nuclear propulsion is highly desirable.

"Manned planetary exploration should follow as the natural evolution of this nation's spacefaring capability."

Dr. von Braun left no doubt he was proud of, and impressed by, the accomplishments during the first decade in space, and he was equally optimistic about the future.

When Neil Armstrong stepped on the moon's surface, he said, what was attained in that moment was a completely new step in the evolution of man.

"For the first time, life had left its planetary cradle: the domain for man's activities had acquired a new dimension: and the dawn of a broadened measure of thought swept across the face of the earth."

He said two aims are uppermost in the immediate future: to reap the maximum benefits for mankind through applications of space technology and to obtain the newest information about the solar system.

To do this, U.S. space planners were recommending a broad and well balanced program of both manned and unmanned missions.

Dr. von Braun saw a new breed of space hardware, including re-usable spaceships to fly between ground and low earth orbit, between earth orbit and lunar and Mars orbits and between lunar orbit and the lunar surface.

Apollo-type hardware would still be used in the early 1970 to continue exploration of the moon and for building the first embryonic space station in earth orbit.

He said satellites of the 1970s will have increasing applications in the communications, meteorology and navigation fields, but that the most important will be in the earth resources area.

"For all their apparent abundance, the natural resources of our planet are definitely limited," he said.

"Unless we locate new sources of metal ore, oil and natural gas, unless we learn to protect and manage our food crops and timberland more effectively and intelligently, it does not take much imagination to see that a mere generation from now the vast majority of mankind will be engaged in a struggle for sheer survival."

Satellites and space stations, with modern photography and remote sensing techniques, can make a tremendous contribution in this field.

Free Enterprise on Trial In Seventies Says Mackasey

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian method of government and the free enterprise system in Canada will be on trial during the 1970s, Bryce Mackasey, federal labor minister, said Wednesday night.

"Our system will be judged by the slums that exist beside the skyscrapers, by what we do for people on fixed incomes, by what we do for the mentally retarded, the old and the crippled," he told a testimonial dinner given by the St. Patrick's Society of Montreal.

Also honored at the dinner were Justice Minister John Turner and Communications Minister Eric Kierans.

Mr. Turner told the 250 guests that Canada's Criminal Code must be made adaptable and flexible "in response to the changes in today's society."

Mr. Kierans said French Canada is "desperately trying to preserve a culture against almost impossible odds, against impossible economic odds and against the odds of 220,000,000 English-speaking North Americans."

"We must convince them that these things can be better preserved in Canada."

Diabetics Have More Accidents

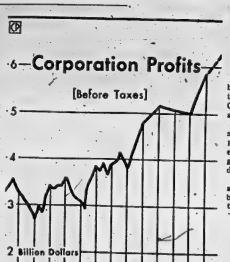
OTTAWA (CP) — Diabetic drivers get involved in significantly more traffic accidents than non-diabetics, says a 36-year study done in Prince Edward Island.



They also incur a substantially greater number of major court convictions and minor convictions as well.

The study, made public today by the Traffic Injury Research Foundation, says that between Jan. 1, 1963 and June 30, 1966, 346 diabetic drivers were matched against an equal number of non-diabetic drivers in the same age group.

The diabetics were involved in 1.72 as many accidents, 2.5 as many major convictions and 1.2 as many minor convictions.

"There appear to be three times as many accidents and major conviction repeaters among diabetics but the incidence of minor conviction repeaters is virtually equal to the controls," says the survey report by Dr. E. Campbell, foundation medical director and Dr. K. G. Ellis, chairman of the provincial medical society's traffic accident committee.

The survey covered 346 out of a total of 1,028 known diabetics in the province. Because more than four times as many men as women were registered drivers, the number of men in the sample totalled 283 and women 63.

Corporation profits, total profits of all companies after subtracting the losses of all companies, are estimated to be about $6,346,000,000 for 1969. That is 8 per cent higher than the 1968 figure of $5,876,000,000.

U.S. Rail Strike Possible

WASHINGTON (AP) — The renewed threat of a U.S.-wide railway shutdown early in 1970 poses a post-holiday hangover for the Nixon administration following union members' rejection of a contract that included the biggest wage proposal in their history.

But a change in work rules, not the wage package, was blamed by the union for the rejection.

"I'm naturally disappointed," Labor Secretary George Shultz said Wednesday. He had directed government efforts to reach the tentative settlement.

Bill Imposing Financial Restrictions On CYC Gets Final Commons Approval

OTTAWA (CP)—A government bill to impose financial restrictions on the Company of Young Canadians got final Commons approval Wednesday.

Senate approval and royal assent to the bill, considered a priority by the government, is expected before Parliament begins its Christmas recess Friday.

Conservatives made one last attempt Wednesday to send the bill back to committee so that the CYC could be abolished.

Stan Schumacher (PC—Palliser) urged the government to end "subsidization by the taxpayers of revolution in this country."

"Let us be done with this pipe dream and recognize that it would be folly to continue on the path we have been following," said the 28-year-old Drumheller, Alta., lawyer.

His motion to refer the bill back to committee stage was ruled out of order by Deputy Speaker Hugh Faulkner and the Commons then approved by voice vote a financial controllership for the CYC.

Under the bill, the controller must approve CYC contracts and be a co-signer of any cheques issued by the company, which has about $900,000 in public funds.

Bickering among the 10 elected and five appointed members of the CYC's governing council and the council's disregard of the company's Ottawa administration led to the government action.

NDP members fought and lost a battle to have the comptroller's powers lessened.

In other Commons business, the government easily turned back another Conservative motion to kill a bill calling for the continuation of a three per cent surcharge on incomes of individuals and corporations.

The tax was first imposed in 1968 and was to expire in December. Under the government bill, now in second-reading debate, it will be imposed until the end of next year.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) argued that the government had imposed the surtax to stabilize the economy. Now it was being used as a means of revenue only.

His motion to kill the bill was defeated when 107 Liberals and independent Perry Ryan (Toronto-Spadina) opposed it.

In favor were 54 Conservatives, 20 NDP members and seven Creditistes.

Pickersgill Visited Bahamas But Paid Own Fare and Keep

TORONTO (CP) — The royal commission report on the 1965 collapse of Atlantic Acceptance Corp. Ltd. says J. W. Pickersgill, former federal transport minister, visited Grand Bahama Island at the invitation of a firm which was seeking Air Canada flights to the island.

The commission report, released Dec. 11, says Mr. Pickersgill's visit was regarded as "particularly advantageous" to Dallie Corp., which also was seeking government guarantees of long-term financing of prefabricated housing contracts abroad.

Mr. Pickersgill, now chairman of the Canadian transport commission, admitted in an Ottawa interview that he did make the trip, but he said he paid for his own fare and hotel bill.

Air Canada began scheduled flights to Grand Bahama about a year after the minister's five-day visit in January, 1965.

The report says Dallie issued invitations through Ottawa lawyers Ross W. Tolmie and John H. McDonald to then prime minister Lester Pearson, then trade minister Mitchell Sharp and Mr. Pickersgill.

The invitations were to attend the ceremonial opening of the Aviation Club, "which did not exist," the report says.

The report notes that Mr. Pearson and Mr. Sharp declined the invitations but Mr. Pickersgill "apparently did attend" in the company of Mr. Tolmie.

"At this time Mr. Pickersgill, as minister of transport, was being asked by Dallie's representatives to support the provision of scheduled flights to and from Freeport by Air Canada, a Crown corporation, so that his appearance, according to . . . correspondence . . . was regarded as particularly advantageous."

Mr. Pickersgill said he and Mr. Tolmie visited the island with their wives and that "I paid for my own fare from Nassau and my hotel bill."

"Somebody spoke to me while I was down there that it would be a good thing to have some flights."

But there was no pressure of any kind and "I formed the opinion, myself, that it looked like a good place for Air Canada to make some money."

He said he had made his opinion known to Air Canada representatives on his return from the island.

Rangers Rally to Retain Perfect Record Against West

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

New York Rangers have an undefeated streak going for them in the National Hockey League. They are yet to lose a game this season to a team in the Western Division.

The Rangers rallied Wednesday night on a pair of third-period goals by Dave Balon to tie Philadelphia Flyers 2-2. The tie extended the Rangers unbeaten streak against Western Division teams to 13 games.

The tie gave the Rangers a three-point lead in the Eastern Division standings over Boston Bruins and Montreal Canadiens, both tied for second place.

The Canadiens moved into the tie with the Bruins, idle Wednesday, by downing Pittsburgh Penguins 5-2 in a game which erupted into two fights in the first period.

Meanwhile at Los Angeles, the Kings won their first game for new coach Johnny Wilson by stealing Chicago Black Hawks 3-1. In another game on the West Coast, Earl Ingarfield scored twice to lead Oakland Seals to a 3-1 victory over Minnesota North Stars.

Balon's two goals spoiled a formance by Philadelphia's Bernie Parent, who had stopped 34 shots in the first two periods.

Goals by defencemen Joe Watson and rookie Lew Morrison had given Philadelphia a 2-0 lead at the end of the second period. But Balon got the Rangers first goal within two minutes of the third period when he recovered a loose puck and poked it into the corner of the Flyers nets.

Then with 1:26 left to play, Balon scored the tying goal in which goalie Ed Giacomin picked up an assist.

Henri Richard paced the Canadiens to their win over Pittsburgh with two goals and an assist. Richard scored Montreal's first and third goals and assisted on th second goal—scored by J. C. Tremblay—in the first period. Ralph Backstrom and Yvan Cournoyer scored the other Montreal goals in the third period.

Bob Blackburn scored for Pittsburgh in the first period to give the Penguins a 1-1 tie. The Penguins pulled to within 3-2 early in the third period on a goal by Wally Boyer. But the Canadiens came back with quick goals by Backstrom and Cournoyer.

Forty-four minutes in penalties were called, including four majors for two fights in the first period.

Jacques Laperriere of Montreal and Tracy Pratt squared off in the first fight but in the second bout, between Montreal's Terry Harper and Boyer, Pittsburgh goalie Al Smith left the net to help Boyer and earned himself an automatic $100 fine.

It was the third time this season Smith has come out of the nets to fight.

Eddie Shack and centres Jimmy Peters and Butch Goring all scored in the third period to give the Kings their win over Chicago.

Cliff Koroll scored for Chicago in the opening period to give the Hawks a 1-0 lead

Wilson, who took over the coaching duties Monday from Hal Laycoe, now has a tie and a victory in his NHL coaching debut.

Sporting a cap full of snow and twelve wins, Minnesota Viking head coach Bud Grant leaves snowy field last Sunday with the Vikings' latest National Football league win, a 10-7 victory over the San Francisco 49ers in Minneapolis.

Cold War Over

No Pros, No Soap: Canada

By STERLING TAYLOR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The cold war is over and the International Ice Hockey Federation must make a choice between allowing professionals in the 1970 world championship or playing without a Canadian entry.

That was the significance of a statement Tuesday from President Charles Hay of Hockey Canada, which operates Canada's national team.

It also gives the IIHF a choice of living up to its July decision of allowing Canada the use of nine professionals for the world tournament next March or reversing it in the face of a ruling from the International Olympic Committee.

According to IOC president Avery Brundage, anyone competing with or against professionals in the world tournament will be ruled ineligible for Olympic competition.

In the face of this threat, J. P. (Bunny) Ahearne, president of the IIHF who cast the deciding vote last July in favor of professionally-reinforced teams, has called a special January meeting to study the possibility of reversing that rule.

A decision to reverse the rule, according to Hay, would mean the immediate withdrawal of the Canadian national team.

On the other hand, if the IIHF upholds the July rule change, Ahearne says that most of the European countries will not go to Canada for the 1970 championships for fear of losing their Olympic eligibility.

Not even Ahearne, who disagrees with the Brundage interpretation of professionalism, will hazard a guess as to the outcome of the January meeting of his seven-member council in Geneva.

He said in an interview at his home in London Wednesday:

"It looks as if the federation will have to make a decision whether to drop professionals from the world championship or risk having the national teams of the participating countries ruled ineligible for the Olympics.

The tournament is scheduled for Montreal and Winnipeg and the participating countries are Canada, Russia, Sweden, Czechoslovakia, East Germany and Finland.

In the event the IIHF changes its ruling and disallows Canada the use of nine professionals and this country follows through with its threat to pull out of the championship, the United States would then be promoted from Pool B status to fill in as the sixth team.

The tournament could still be staged in Canada, however, without a Canadian entry.

The decision on whether to back the Hockey Canada stand and drop the tournament will be discussed at a meeting today in Winnipeg between the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, the arena managers at Montreal and Winnipeg and the Hay group.

"Such a decision would be mostly up to the arena people in Montreal and Winnipeg," says Gordon Juckes of Winnipeg, secretary-manager of the CAHA.

The decision by Hay came after almost five months of bickering.

The Canadians had originally proposed that the 1970 tournament be declared an open championship. This proposal was immediately voted down and Canada then proposed the use of 12 professionals for the tournament.

Grant Landslide Winner As NFL Coach of Year

NEW YORK (AP) — Bud Grant, the strong, silent man who is the power behind Minnesota Vikings, has been named Coach of the Year in the National Football League by an overwhelming vote of a panel for The Associated Press.

The panel, composed of three sports writers or sportscasters from each league city, gave Grant 42 full votes.

Tom Landry, a winner at Dallas in the Capitol Division, received two votes, and there was one each for Vince Lombardi of Washington, George Allen of Los Angeles and Blaton Collier of Cleveland. One committee member split his ballot three ways among Grant, Landry and Allen.

Grant, 42, played with Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference and then took over as head coach, succeeding Allie Sherman, former New York Giants coach, in 1967. Sherman was later named coach of the year in the NFL.

Soviet Coach Cuts Up Referees

WINNIPEG (CP) — Coach Anatoli Tarasov of Russia's national hockey team says he is certain there are good referees in Canada but he is still waiting to see them.

His comment on Canadian referees came after his team's 5-3 win over Canada Wednesday night, the first of eight exhibition games the Russians will play this month on a country-wide tour.

"There were some referees who acted like bandits when your Canadian team won the centennial tournament here (in 1967) and I'm sure you must have good referees in Canada," Tarasov said.

But two days of refereeing like we saw here tonight might be like a nightmare to me.

The Russians meet Canada's Nationals again tonight in Winnipeg.

Referees Dan Kurdydyk and Gord Kerr called 18 minor penalties Wednesday night and 11 of them went to the Russians.

It was a hard-fought contest with periodic outbursts of rough play.

"I would not call it a real sports spectacle and I'm sure all your famous Canadian players don't want to play this kind of game," Tarasov said. "I would rather see a game played with more friendship, more exchange of talent between two good teams. . . ."

Barrie Fracas Cost Money

TORONTO (CP) — Fines totalling $220 were announced Wednesday to players and coaches of two Ontario Hockey Association senior series clubs for a fracas during a game in Barrie Sunday.

Bill Hanley, association secretary-manager, said the fines totalled $185 for Orillia Terriers and $115 for Barrie Flyers.

Coaches Ike Hildebrand of Orillia and Harry Pidhirney of Barrie were each fined $25 for allowing players to leave the bench.

In addition, five Orillia and two Barrie players were fined $10 each for leaving the bench, and two other Barrie players were fined $20 each for the same offence. The higher fines were levied because it was the second offence for both.

Three players from each team were fined $10 for entering the fight when they were already on the ice.

Blair Takes Up Where Imlach Left Off Issuing Blasts

By STERLING TAYLOR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Wren Blair was a confrere of Punch Imlach when the turtleneck was still part of a hockey uniform and most players thought a degree was the difference between hard natural ice of a watery surface.

So, it is only fitting that Blair, who inherited many of his coaching theories from Imlach, should carry on the favorite Punch lines that rattled hockey fans for a decade.

Imlach's last coup as manager-coach of Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League was a ban against sideburns at the opening of the 1968-69 training camp.

It was a special deal Imlach cooked up to keep the reporters off his back while he was conducting the usual difficult chore of signing players to contracts.

But it made him the favorite look of sports fans until he was fired for a different reason at the end of the season.

Now Blair has seized the opportunity during a dull period in the sports season to whip more than a few hockey purists into a frenzy.

Speaking at a luncheon meeting of hockey writers in New York a short time ago, the manager-coach of Minnesota North Stars criticized the lack of United States players in their own college system and their offering of hockey scholarships to Canadian boys.

He named several NHL players who, in his estimation, had hampered their hockey abilities by choosing a U.S. school over the usual route to professional hockey.

"Furthermore, the education kids get when they're attracted, as innocent boys, by hockey scholarships, is often worth nothing," he charged.

He contended that it made better sense for a boy interested in hockey to choose junior hockey in Canada.

"A hockey scholarship is nothing compared to the deal a boy gets playing junior hockey. And he gets a free education."

He also said most of the players with Toronto Marlboros of the Ontario Hockey Association junior A series attended the University of Toronto.

He stretched a point here and means, instead, that a University of Toronto education was available to most members of the Marlboros.

He did not bother to point out that a rigorous junior schedule discourages many boys from completing their high school courses, and the number that enrol for university courses is negligible.

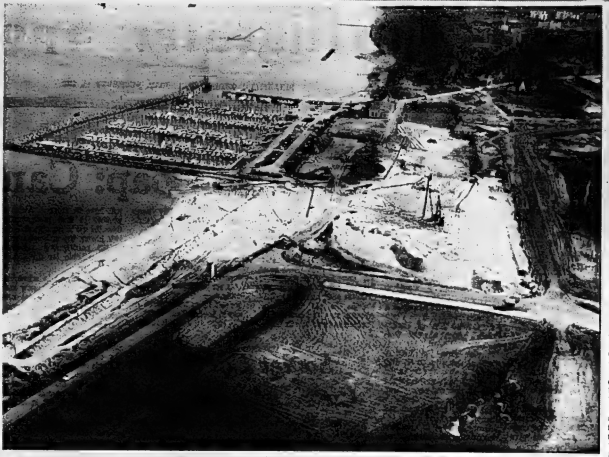
But, continuing in obvious hopes of raising the ire of U.S. college heads, Blair said the rules in American colleges deny players a proper chance to groom themselves for professional hockey.

The rules forbid body-checking by the offensive team in the other team's defensive zone, he said—failing to point out that amateur hockey in Canada follows the same rule.

What makes the situation worse is the insistence of colleges and high schools in the U.S. on students not playing for teams outside the campus, he said.

"What makes a hockey player best in competition. Now, why should a player be denied the chance to develop himself? Why does he have to play for a school team when it ruins his chances of ever making the National Hockey League? Why should he play an inferior brand of hockey?"

Then he suggested that Canadians should not be given hockey scholarships in the U.S. All team positions should be available to Americans to encourage more interest among U.S. boys in college hockey.



It was a roundabout way of saying that U.S. college hockey was inferior and that potential NHL players in Canada were being lost to the big leagues through hockey scholarships.

And his put-on may actually have some results.

Just a few days after his outburst, a special committee recommended to the U.S. Collegiate Athletic Association that steps be taken to restrict the number of foreign student athletes in intercollegiate hockey.

The committee noted that more than 300 Canadians will be playing hockey for U.S. schools in 1970. It recommended that the number of foreign scholarship athletes attending institutions with hockey teams be restricted to eight per university by 1973.

Jets' Kicker Wants Windy Day

NEW YORK (AP — If Saturday's American Football League semi-final playoff at Shea Stadium develops into a duel between two of the game's best place kickers, New York Jets' Jim Turner figures the winter wind could be his ally—and a formidable foe for Jan Stenerud of Kansas City Chiefs.

"Jan doesn't have to kick in a wind tunnel like this very often. It's the worst park in football for a place kicker," Turner said Wednesday. Turner, who has been battling the tricky Shea wind currents for six years, captured his second successive scoring title this season with 129 points. His toe has made the difference in five of New York's 10 victories.

Stenerud, the Chiefs' Norwegian-born soccer-style specialist, fell 10 points short of Turner's total, but set an all-time professional record of 16 consecutive field goals before missing a 38-yarder at Oakland last Sunday.

The Shea turf was relatively soft Wednesday as the defending Super Bowl champions worked out in 30-degree temperatures. Turner hopes for a firm track Saturday, but he's not counting on it.

All professional football conference and league champion ship games in both the National Football League and the American Football League will go to a sudden-death period if the score is tied after regulation time.

Gaudaur Eyes Als

OTTAWA (CP) — Commissioner Jake Gaudaur of the Canadian Football League said Wednesday he will investigate if assistant coach Bob Ward of Ottawa Rough Riders decides to accept a similar post with Montreal Alouettes.

Ward, whose contract with Riders expires next April, is reported to be considering an offer of $20,000 a year to join the Montreal coaching staff, a considerable hike over his Ottawa salary.

Ottawa club owner David Loeb has telephoned Gaudaur about the matter.

"If I discover there has been tampering or special inducements on the part of the Alouettes, my office will take action," Gaudaur said.

He also said he has talked with Montreal owner Sam Berger and general manager Red O'Quinn. Both formerly were with the Ottawa club executive.

"They agree this was not proper and assured me there would be no further negotiations with Ward," Gaudaur said.

Riders have offered Ward a new contract but he has asked for time to consider offers from the Alouettes.

Sailing Site Takes Shape

The Kiel-Schilksee site of the Olympic sailing centre for the 1972 Munich Games is taking shape after the foundation was laid in October. A 980-foot-long building is to be constructed parallel to the seashore to accommodate sailing competitors, their equipment, and press facilities.

Not Bound by U.S. Ruling

Shorter Whip for Canadian Drivers

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Trotting Association has decided not to go along with the United States Trotting Association on its new controversial whipping rule.

The CTA's board of directors Wednesday night passed a new rule to take effect Jan. 1 which restricts the length of a driver's whip to 30 inches from the present 36.

The USTA permits use of a long whip, but requires drivers to keep a hand on each rein, thereby not allowing the driver to handle the reins in one hand and whip with the other.

The CTA also went against its American counterpart on age rules.

After Nov. 1, 1970, the USTA will allow standardbred foals born in November or December to become a yearling on Jan. 1 after the succeeding year. Or, in other words, a horse officially classified a yearling Jan. 1 could actually be 14 months old.

The CTA board decided to retain the present rule: A yearling must be born after Jan. 1 to be classified a yearling on Jan. 1 of the succeeding year.

Weightlifting needs an indifferent public like most people need a communicable disease.

Need it or not, that's usually what competitors in the sport must be prepared for when they take up the manly art of flirting with hernias.

Not many national champions could complain of performing before an audience of 50. Belleville's Art Wait earned the privilege after setting yet another provincial lifting mark last Saturday at the annual Eastern Ontario Teenage Weightlifting Contest.

(The 50 spectators, incidentally, included the meet's 31 competitors, half a dozen coaches, and three judges.)

At 17, Wait can lift 315 pounds over his head, without the assistance of so much as even a small block and tackle.

This not only makes the 175-pound bristle-topped redhead a Canadian teenage champion, but a good bet for bigger, better, and heavier things.

What haunts Apollo Barbell Club coach Ken Carr-Brainl is the fear that public apathy in the form of non-attendance at weightlifting contests — and governmental apathy in the form of financial non-support of the sport — will convince Wait, as other good prospects in the past, that weightlifting is for dumbbells.

Disgust is an occupational disease of weightlifting, and competitors come by it honestly.

Price Morris, for example, retained comparative anonymity during his five-year reign as Canadian heavyweight weightlifting champion, while Bellevillians were flocking to the rinks or diamonds to see teams win, and often lose.

By its very nature weightlifting does not incite the type of emotional involvement that will prompt a normally placid hockey spectator to scream "Kill him, yabunya" at someone he doesn't even know.

But an honest look at a weightlifting contest leaves anyone with the feeling that he is watching the most testing form of competition — man against himself.

Those who haven't had — or taken — the opportunity to watch it get a chance to go first class in May when the Apollo Club plays host to the trials for the 1970 Edinburgh Commonwealth Games.

Coach Carr-Brainl gives half a dozen local lifters a fighting chance to make the Canadian team, hopefully before an audience that won't be an embarrassment for the importance of the occasion.

Galt Here Friday

Defence Corps Vital to '69 Mo-Hawk Success

With their 'OHA Senior A schedule at the halfway point, it remains to be seen whether Belleville Mo-Hawks have been running at full throttle or just "revving" their engines.

Despite sporting the first plus

WAYNE BROWN

.500 record in the club's four-year history, the Mo-Hawks have not fully convinced playing-coach Davey Jones that they consistently play the brand of hockey of which they are capable.

Add to that the nuisance of key injuries — like that to forward Billy Armour, for example — and the Mo-Hawks loom large as a genuine contender for this year's senior hockey laurels.

LIONEL BOTLY

Tomorrow night's 8 o'clock game at the Memorial Arena should be as good an indication as any. The locals officially enter the second half of their 45-game schedule Friday night by playing host to defending Allan Cup champion Galt Hornets, whom the Mo-Hawks beat 4-3 in overtime in Galt two Saturdays ago.

After their first 20 games last year, the Mo-Hawks had a dismal 5-15 record to show for their Friday and Sunday sorties.

Today, they sit in a fourth-place tie in the eight team senior grouping, and are half a dozen points out of second place with a 10-8-2 record.

If they had nowhere to go but up in their first-half performance, the Mo-Hawks will have to play steady hockey to match last season's home stretch performance that saw them win seven and tie one in their last 10 games.

But that run was for the sixth and final playoff spot. This year the locals are gunning for a higher rung.

The prime importance in this year's new - look Mo-Hawks has been a defensive corps that gives the team's forwards some freedom to fasten their point production.

In particular, the addition of Lou Kazowski, built like Elmer Vasko but who handles the puck like Dave Keon — has been a godsend to the blueline brigade.

An International League all - star as Toledo Blades' playing coach last winter, Kazowski is a good bet to earn similar recognition after the completion of this year's senior schedule.

His 18 points — fourth highest on the club — attest to Kazowski's puck - handling ability.

Being paired with Kazowski has had unexpected effects on Lionel Botly's attacking instincts. Botly, always steady defensively, has a pair of goals and 10 assists to show for his first 19 outings, while he only managed 11 points in 38 games all last season.

GREG MARCHEN

Botly is threatening to smash the three - goal quota he sets himself before each season.

Greg Marchen, one of a handful of original Mo-Hawks still with the club, has played his "policeman" role to the hilt this year to date. His latest preliminary was a three-punch unanimous decision over Woodstock's tough guy Gene McLaren in last Friday night's 5-2 win here.

Veteran Wayne Brown is an ideal puck - carrying mate on the blueline with Marchen, but if the Mo-Hawks can lend another defenceman before the Dec. 31 signing deadline, "Wolner" will in all likelihood move up to give the club some bodily - needed third line strength.

Absent much of the earlier part of the season due to shiftwork, the McFarland regular has been coming on strong and pressing for his first goal of the season.

Main Quebec Working Tongue Should Be French: B-B Report

OTTAWA (CP) — French should become the main working language "at all levels" in private business and industry in Quebec, nine of the 10 royal commissioners on bilingualism and biculturalism said Wednesday.

Commissioner Frank Scott, retired dean of law at McGill University, said this recommendation, while well-intentioned, is impractical and possibly harmful to the Quebec economy.

The royal commission's latest report, a 240,000-word discussion of the "work world" in Canada, was tabled in the Commons Wednesday by Prime Minister Trudeau. It is the third of several reports planned by the commission, led by co-chairmen Davidson Dunton, president of Carleton University, and Jean-Louis Gagnon, Montreal journalist.

Many of its 57 recommendations are aimed at the business community and the commission appeals for co-operation from the private sector of the economy in working out programs that will give French-speaking Canadians career opportunities in their own language.

The only recommendation not unanimous urges that major firms in Quebec designate all management and senior positions as posts that require bilingual executives.

Dean Scott said the recommendation, "though aiming at the proper objective of increasing the use of French as a language of business in Quebec, will strengthen the hands of those—and their numbers are increasing—who think there can be a unilingual Quebec in a bilingual Canada, or an independent Quebec that will not recognize linguistic minority rights."

"It is quite unrealistic, and indeed could be very harmful to the Quebec economy, to suggest that French become the principal language of work at all levels in the private sector, without distinguishing the various types of business in which the rule is to apply.

"How can a firm with a head office in Montreal, one production unit in Quebec with French-speaking employees, and 10 factories in other parts of Canada, make the top-level executives and planning groups use French predominantly?

"Their operations may be 80 per cent outside Quebec. The head office could easily move to another province."

The commission also recommends that throughout the country, head offices of firms doing extensive business in Quebec "develop appropriate bilingual capacities, including French-language units and bilingual senior executives."

The "French-language unit" is the basic proposal.

It means the division of an enterprise or department into different sections, making French the working language in some and English the working language in others.

The advantage the commission sees in this is that a French-speaking person would be able to work his way up the ladder speaking his own language, Mr. Dunton told a news conference Wednesday night.

The commission urges the federal government to adopt the French-language unit as a basic principle in the organization of the federal public service.

"The federal public service should be transformed so that French will become a functioning language of work," the report says.

French Work Units Urged For Federal Departments

OTTAWA (CP) — French-language work units within all federal departments are the answer to English-Canadian prejudices, conventions and assumptions of the public service, says the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism in its third report tabled in the Commons Wednesday.

Creation of such work units is the first and key proposal in a package of 24 recommendations for reform of the federal service proposed by the report.

Admitting that implementation of the proposal will be a major administrative challenge, the report insists that "the imperatives of the political situation demand that the transformation be implemented in a matter of years and months."

The measure, says the report, "is the only way of ensuring the bilingual and basically bicultural character of the federal administration."

Radical Change Urged in 'English-oriented' Canada Force

OTTAWA (CP) — The overwhelmingly English orientation of the Canadian armed forces should be radically transformed, says the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism in its third report to the government.

To this end, recommends the report made public Wednesday, a large formation should be created where French would be the military language of work — including operational, technical and communications language.

The commission makes 17 recommendations affecting the military.

The first is that the National Defence Act should be amended to give official recognition to the equality of French and English.

Another is that a French-language sector be created within Mobile Command in which the day-to-day working language would be French.

French-language units and bases in this sector would be situated in French-speaking areas of the country.

Progressively, French - language units would be established at Canadian forces headquarters here and in commands other than Mobile Command.

The report includes research studies made public through other documents in the last 15 years showing that French-speaking servicemen quit the forces much earlier than their English-language colleagues because there is little or no chance of working in their own tongue.

The report notes recent attempts by Defence Minister Leo Cadieux to afford French-speaking servicemen wider career opportunities. These include creation of French-language land, sea and air units besides Quebec's Royal 22nd Regiment, French-speaking since the First World War.

The commission recommends that all military orders be issued simultaneously in English and French after joint drafting.

"The practice of originating almost all documents in English . . . the lack of a feeling of excitement and intellectual challenge."

But the great majority of Ottawans saw the city as a good place to bring up children, an English-language city, and "they were comfortable with it just that way."

But in the opinion of the commission, it is not an atmosphere conducive to attracting the dynamic and creative people needed for top federal posts.

Ottawa-Hull Deadened by English Atmosphere: Report

OTTAWA (CP) — Even to its residents, the nation's capital is hardly "a centre where stirring political, cultural or social events take place."

In fact, says the third report of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism, even to enthusiastic English-speaking Ottawans the city's main attraction is its proximity to "the great outdoors."

Of Francophone citizens, the commission found in its research that the 22 per cent who are actualy enthusiastic about living in Ottawa or nearby Hull, Que., were those who had grown up there and had many relatives and friends in the community.

Of more concern to the commission is that in Quebec and elsewhere, young French Canadian professionals regard Ottawa as "a foreign country."

The feeling is that Ottawa and Hull have been "deadened by the English atmosphere" and 35 per cent of the Francophones in the area are either unenthusiastic about it or often disdainful.

Even a number of "sensitive Anglophones" find the city dull, however. Their main complaints are that the capital lacks cultural and artistic outlets, architectural imagination and a good municipal library, says the report. A larger number, less concerned about the arts, "often showed scorn for Ottawa's lack of night life and good restaurants."

The report, tabled in the Commons Wednesday, quotes one scientist as being bothered by "the apparent degree of conformity in thought and action that French and English be taught "everywhere."

Prof. Scott called for abolition of the RCMP—"they are the inheritance of the Northwest Territories and we are the Indians of today."

Later Mr. Oliver said of Frank Scott:

"He has challenged the power of prime ministers and company presidents. His satire has never spared the doctrines of politics, business, law and letters.

"If he has sought favors, it has been with fellow scholars, poets and rebels. If he has sought influence, it has been through the power of ideas."

Facts Behind Work World

OTTAWA (CP) — The Work World, the two-volume third report of the royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism which was tabled in the Commons Wednesday, is the product of some of the most intense economic and social research ever conducted in Canada.

It is also thicker and heavier in size than both its predecessors combined, as it takes up 567 pages to document the background to its 37 recommendations for changes in the public service, the armed forces and the private sector of the economy.

Major recommendations from the earlier reports have already been implemented—

From the first, a general review of language situation in Canada which came out Dec. 5, 1967, the government drew the principles behind the Official Languages Act which went through Parliament last summer.

More recently, State Secretary Gerard Pelletier announced in the Commons a plan to provide a $50,000,000 grant next year to the provinces to assist in setting up official language schools for minority groups across Canada. The proposal followed closely the lines set down in the second report, issued Dec. 8, 1968.

The work of the 10-man commission will be completed in the spring following publication of at least two more reports — one on the status of ethnic groups other than French or English, to be published during the winter, and a final report on major political institutions.

By the time it wraps up its work, the commission will have been in existence for nearly seven years and will have spent close to $9,000,000.

Dissenting Voice -- Minority Rights Crusader

MONTREAL (CP) — The dissenting voice in Wednesday's report of the 10-member royal commission on bilingualism and biculturalism is that of Frank R. Scott, a man who has devoted his adult life to defending minority rights.

The 70-year-old former law dean at McGill University has been pre-occupied with human rights and dignity since he began teaching in the 1930s. Much of his efforts were aimed at increasing understanding between the English and French cultures, linked so intimately in Quebec.

He split with his nine colleagues in the commission's latest report over the recommendation that the principal language of work in Quebec should be French.

He said this proposal would strengthen the hand of separatists or those who think there can be a "unilingual" Quebec in a bilingual Canada, a "Quebec that will not recognize linguistic minority rights."

In his early days he aw English-language McGill as having a unique role—providing a meeting point for French civil law and English common law—and hoped its campus could be the future focal point of bicultural research into federalism.

At the French-language University of Montreal's convocation in 1966, Prof. Scott, an expert in constitutional law, told graduates:

"Precisely because so many things are changing in Quebec, it is essential—during this period of transfer—to assure the individual rights of each citizen.

"All concentration of power—whether it be religious, economic or political—constitutes a danger to the rights of man."

On another occasion he said: "McGill must pay special attention to Quebec, its needs and its development.

One famous courtroom triumph resulted in the Supreme Court declaring Quebec's 29 year-old Padlock Act beyond the powers of the legislature and therefore invalid in 1957. It gave the attorney-general authority to have a house padlocked if "Communists"—undefined in the act—used it for meetings.

In 1965, he told the Supreme Court Lady Chatterley's Lover was "no more salacious than the nudes on the ceiling in the Sistine Chapel." Quebecers soon were regaling themselves with D. H. Lawrence's spicy saga.

Stories abound about the satirical wit of the six-foot three-inch son of Archdeacon Frederick G. Scott.

Socialist leaning, he helped write CCF party platforms and drafted the NDP constitution's preamble, but bowed out at the founding convention with these words:

"I've fathered two parties now, and lost my political fertility. This isn't my swan song. It's my stork song."

Soon after his appointment to the commission, he was advocating that French and English

Reporters Criticize Editors

Working Journalists Complain Media Reports Are Inadequate

OTTAWA (CP) — A group of working journalists from Montreal expressed concern to a Senate inquiry Wednesday night that newspapers and broadcasting generally fail to report adequately what is really happening in society.

One result, the journalists told the special Senate committee on mass media, is a loss of faith by the public in today's reporting.

Representatives of the eight-month-old Association of English-Media Journalists of Quebec conceded they are uncertain about how to correct the weaknesses. Tentative ideas include adopting European systems that give working reporters more say in journalistic policy.

The association, organized last April to form a link with a federation of Quebec journalists writing in French, has 68 members—almost two-thirds of the potential—dedicated generally to self improvement.

For the Senate inquiry, the association compiled replies to specific questions about the news industry from 23 respondents. In addition, several discussions were held and the gist of conclusions were reported to the committee in a written brief.

Four association directors answered questions at a three-hour committee session Wednesday night—David Waters, associate editor of the Montreal Star; Joan Fraser, reporter for The Financial Times; Rod Blaker, director of public affairs for radio CJAD, Montreal; and Dick MacDonald, reporter for the Montreal Star.

In the written submission, the association says member responses to specific questions reveal a strong strain of self-criticism.

From talk sessions, the concern emerged that much of today's journalism is irrelevant to what is really going on in society and the public has lost faith in reporting.

"In the view of those at the meetings, journalism was too contingent on the big scoop and all the bang-bang, razzle-dazzle that goes with it.

"The media, they felt, devote too great a proportion of their coverage to riots, fires, routine court cases, Grey Cup games and politicians' speeches."

Good journalism should rather be concerned with shifts of emphasis in society, with such generators of change as the computer, developments in genetics, stresses caused by the explosion of knowledge.

Asked by senators to explain, Mr. Waters said journalism "gets hung up on details and superficialities" of otherwise important issues.

For example, the association panel generally agreed, reports of the arrest in Toronto on dope charges of the son of Prof. Marshall McLuhan probably was given undue prominence. The real story was the dope issue itself.

Because of traditional attitudes to what makes news, there is a tendency to confuse news with what is really reader entertainment—perhaps because of personalities involved.

Delving into causes of weakness in the quality and relevance of news, the association panel cited commercial pressures: the weight of information plied on journalists and the speed with which they must handle it, and the hierarchical structure of news organizations, which gives middle-management editors the real power to mold the news.

The association said two-thirds of their members who responded to questions believe the news is affected by commercial interests.

Most agreed the pressures were no longer as obvious as they used to be—say, spot announcements by a newspaper advertiser to suppress a story—but remained as dangerously subtle and indirect.

The panelists said there is a feeling that the journalist becomes aware of certain taboo subjects or sensitive areas and tends to react over time by tailoring his writing to that awareness "to the detriment of an honest press."

Miss Fraser said publishers are no longer regarded as crass money-makers by many reporters, but there is a recognition that the media themselves are commercial enterprises.

There are still some overt examples of catering to commercial interests, she said, citing an example in her own past on another publication whereby one-quarter of a page was devoted to a small and unimportant company because it had just signed an advertising contract.

At present, she added, "rumor has it that the travel and women's pages are the most vulnerable" to commercial pressures.

Mr. Blaker said the pressure often is exerted within the reporter himself, who becomes aware of where he must tread carefully and is cautious if he is ambitious.

Mr. MacDonald said that more often than not the pressure comes from middle management on a newspaper, the managing and desk editors, who prejudge what they think the top management might want.

The association submission and the panelists stressed that another factor that inhibits honest reporting is the necessity to deal with an avalanche of information in a short time.

Mr. Waters said the news media should be reporting the beginnings of major trends and changes, but often they don't because they do not know about them. They do not know because they lack the time to pause and look for them.

The panelists agreed that the rest of Canada was uninformed about changes in Quebec, the East had not been told enough about the West and vice-versa.

"For too long we've been after the fact," said Mr. MacDonald. "Hindsight is just no good anymore."

Some association members said editors and deskmen in newspapers wield the greatest power in determining what news and information reaches the public.

Mr. Waters said it was felt the editors were insensitive and unaware, partly because they had to handle so much copy crossing their desks. They exercised judgment on a basis that is seldom or never explained to the writer.

One suggestion is to replace the traditional hierarchical structure, whereby the reporter is direct contact with the news is at the bottom of the pyramid, with a more democratic system.

The association cited examples in France and West Germany under which reporters are protected against being forced to write what their conscience does not permit and against undue interference with what they do write. Similarly, they have some say about who will be their editors.

However, the association adds in its submission that more study of problems is required before the right answers to Canadian weaknesses can be provided.

Indians, Eskimos and Metis Ask Better Deal from Press

OTTAWA (CP) — Representatives of Canada's Indians, Eskimos and Metis people appealed Wednesday for a better deal in white-dominated press and broadcasting plus a chance to run their own communications systems.

Three organizations asked the special Senate committee on mass media to recommend government assistance both to improve coverage of native and Metis matters for the population generally and to subsidize establishment of native-language radio stations at the community level and television and newspapers catering directly to Indians, Eskimos and Metis.

Appearing were representatives of the National Indian Brotherhood of Canada, the Indians-Eskimo Association of Canada and the Canadian Metis society. Chief witnesses included Chief Walter Deiter of Regina for the brotherhood, Rev. Adam Cuthand of Winnipeg for the Metis and radio-television announcer Bruce Rogers of Toronto, chairman of the association's communications committee.

The representatives criticized current practices in the mass media which they said present a negative stereotype of the native Canadian in such programs as Western movies, advertisements featuring teepees and feather head-dresses, and emphasis in news on drunkenness, laziness and poverty.

To serve the Indians, Eskimos and Metis, the groups stressed the importance of oral communication, especially radio, as the best method.

They urged government help to establish low-power community radio stations to serve native peoples in their own languages.

Specifically, they asked the government to hand over radio stations at northern military establishments which are being closed instead of dismantling the equipment.

Thomson Newspapers Submit Brief

Group Strength Called Guard to Independence

OTTAWA (CP) — The strength of the Thomson group helps member papers preserve their individual editorial independence, Thomson Newspapers Ltd. says in a brief to the Senate committee on mass media.

"All newspapers are under continual and subtle outside pressures of various kinds to modify, color and even suppress the news, and to modify their comments on it," the Thomson brief said.

"The local newspaper is more subject to such pressures than the regional or metropolitan newspaper because of the smaller size, lesser financial strength and intimate connection with the life of its local community.

"The ability of the newspapers of the Thomson group to resist these pressures is materially enhanced by the financial, managerial and technical strength which the group provides."

Majority owner of Thomson Newspapers is President K. R. Thomson, son of Lord Thomson of Fleet, and the son's family. The Ontario-incorporated company owns 28 small dailies and 14 weeklies in Canada.

The company's dailies, all outside major metropolitan centres, have a total circulation of 363,000. This is 7.8 per cent of total circulation of the country's 112 dailies.

The brief said that while Lord Thomson, the group's founder, remains a director and honorary chairman of the company, he no longer owns any shares and is not involved in day-to-day management. However his "advice and assistance is of great value" to the company.

Also noted in the brief was that the company has arranged for the sale of "certain broadcasting interests" it owns subject to approval by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

"On completion of this sale, neither the company, none of its principal officers or shareholders, nor Lord Thomson of Fleet, will have any interests in broadcasting, magazines, weekend supplements, or other communications media in Canada other than newspapers with the exception of an interest in a cable television system located in an area not served by a Thomson newspaper."

The brief added that the other significant investments of the Thomson family in Canada include control of a medium-sized general insurance company and of a highway trucking concern.

The company's 14 weekly newspapers had been acquired with an eye to making them dailies some day.

All the Thomson dailies are the only ones published in English in the communities they serve.

The brief said it may be theoretically true that one-newspaper communities are disadvantageous to society because only one viewpoint is offered. But in practice, the choice in smaller communities was between a strong, profitable and independent paper and between two weak and dependent ones. Also, no newspaper had a monopoly of information distribution in any local area.

The brief felt that a newspaper "must be a disturbing force" in the community. When the press no longer attracts criticism as a result of this stance, "it will have ceased to perform its proper function in our society."

At the same time, newspapers must be independent and financially strong if they are to maintain the best traditions of Canadian journalism and thus provide "the highest possible standard of service" to their communities.

The Thomson company appearance was scheduled for the afternoon sitting of the committee. Two Thomson-owned newspapers, Prince Albert Herald and Peterborough Examiner, were scheduled for a night hearing. Each also submitted briefs.

J. W. Denhoff, publisher of The Herald, says in his brief he knows of no threat to press freedom in Canada.

Even if it was in peril, legislative measures to protect it could not be devised without at the same time limiting press freedom.

Mr. Denhoff said pressure groups existed but were not a problem to his newspaper. He disagreed with the view that television will produce the death of print media.

William J. Garner, the Examiner publisher, says in his brief that concentration of ownership has greatly improved the vitality and concern in local affairs by many newspapers that join a group.

The Examiner, which recently went through a strike, did not favor a press council to police the industry. Canadian newspapers generally "feel a keen sense of responsibility to the public, which makes a press council unnecessary."

The brief said a press council "is in some respects a form of censorship" which could ultimately infringe on the peoples' right to know.

Ontario Faces 'Election Stew'

TORONTO (CP) — The second session of the 28th Ontario legislature ended Wednesday with at least one cabinet minister convinced the Conservative government enters the 1970s fighting for its 26-year life.

The cabinet member asked that his name not be used.

He has warned his constituents—and his family—that when the house meets again Tuesday, Feb. 24, elected members will open the roughest, meanest campaigning since the Liberal regime of Mitchel Hepburn and the battles over support for separate schools in the province.

"Campaigning for the 1971 general election starts in the spring of 1970," he said in an interview. "There are three political parties convinced they can win and there are issues enough to brew a real whing-ding of an election stew."

Issues certainly did grow out of the first two sessions of the legislature that was elected in 1967, particularly in the second one which at 173 sitting days has been the longest in provincial history.

Since Treasurer Charles MacNaughton presented a 1969-'70 budget of $3,000,000,000 with an optimistic forecast of Ontario's first planned surplus in 25 years, the government has found itself facing increasing criticism from large segments of the population.

It has been 13 months filled with dogs and cats, landlords and tenants, polluted rivers and dirty air, angry farmers and angrier Indians, protesting students and frustrated taxpayers, debt-ridden school boards, doctors wrapped in insurance red tape and patients bound in over-billings.

But the opposition members admit that Premier John Robarts has begun to fight back with a legislative program designed to reach its peak late next year.

Mr. Robarts, showing no signs of the wear of eight years in office, Wednesday demonstrated for the legislature the fight opposition parties can expect.

Scorning the Liberal party and ridiculing the NDP, the premier ended debate in the house by promising: "I know where the enemy is and I will fight."

With that rejection of rumors he is planning to retire, Mr. Robarts said those who expect the defeat of the government should not "hold your breath, don't bet on it."

The Conservatives efforts in the 1970s may have appeal, but parts of the 1969 program have hurt elements of the voters, and the government must show in 1970 that the pain has its benefits.

Creation of district school boards, formation of regional governments, provincial takeover of assessments and equalization of the assessment on all taxable property has each, in turn, raised a storm and must now be shown to have a value.

But the controversy created by steps toward provincial reform has not yet matched the anger aroused by two independent pieces of legislation—the Ontario Health Services Insurance Plan and the bill to provide dogs and cats from municipal pounds for medical and scientific research.

Medical care insurance probably forced the retirement of former health minister Matthew Dymond, and threatens the political future of his successor, Thomas Wells. It helped the NDP win Middlesex South and is being exploited to damage the government.

The so-called dog and cat bill, brought before the house by Agriculture Minister William Stewart, although there had been no detectable pressure for it expect from university research personnel, was debated in and out of the legislature for three months, rewritten once and amended a dozen times before it became law.

School Payments on Fixed Date

TORONTO (CP) — Legislation which requires municipalities to pay divisional school boards the money raised for school purposes four times a year is largely a confirmation of existing practices, Deputy Education Minister J. R. McCarthy said Wednesday.

Amendments to the Secondary Schools and Boards of Education Act, introduced in the Ontario legislature earlier this month and approved as the house session ended, provide for municipal payments to school divisions at the end of March, June, September and December.

If there is non-payment of instalments, the municipality will pay the school board interest from the date of default at the minimum lending rate of the majority of chartered banks.

If instalments are paid in advance, the school board will allow the municipality a discount at the same rate.

If the majority of municipalities in a school division, representing two-thirds of the equalized assessment, agree with the board to make additional payments they may do so.

Some rural municipalities have complained that the change in legislation upsets their tax procedures.

Dr. McCarthy said in an interview the amendment "really changes very little."

Most of the population already pays its tax in four instalments, and only some rural municipalities retain the once-a-year payment system, he said.

School boards always have had the authority to call for payment of the money raised for them on demand.

"Now they cannot demand payment any old time. Instead it is legally due four times a year."

When a school board in the past called for a payment on demand, the municipality was forced to borrow from a bank until its tax collections were complete, Dr. McCarthy said.

Thoughts at Large:

When an official blames "outside agitators" for whatever disturbance is churning up the community, chances are excellent that he ignored the complaints of "inside" agitators until it was too late.

More charitable contributions are prompted by pride than by generosity or gratitude; and one wonders how many hospital buildings would be endowed if the donor's name were not engraved above the portals.

The fellow who lets you do all the talking may not be a good listener — he may just be waiting for the right moment to sell you something, while you are flushed with intoxication by your own verbosity.

Contrary to what most students want and expect, a teacher is not a bridegroom; he can open the door to truth, but he cannot carry you across the threshhold and deposit you safely on the other side.

Speaking of the truth, one of the reasons the world makes such dismayingly slow progress was succinctly put by La Rochefoucauld, when he observed: "Truth does not do as much good in the world as its counterfeits do evil."

Any act of wanton cruelty can be rationalized by a warring nation; whether it is Nigeria against Biafra, or the U.S. against Vietnam, such governments all sound like Hitler weeping over the ruins of Warsaw after it had been demolished by the Luftwaffe: "How wicked these people must have been," he sobbed, "to make me do this to them!"

Much of what we dignify as "motives" is really "impulse"; we may be motivated to shop for groceries, but it is impulse that makes us buy far more than we had intended and tell ourselves we always meant to.

As long as most people continue to value men by their external success or their fortune, no political or social system can succeed in fully humanizing itself, no matter what ideology it professes.

How can two countries empathize with each other, when in one most of the adults are starving, and in the other most of the adults are reducing?

When Thoreau said "It's healthy to be sick sometimes" he was anticipating the modern psycho-medical knowledge that the person who never lets go is more likely to be felled suddenly, like a tree too stubborn to bend, which is broken in two by a windstorm.

Two-city Rivalry Old Hat

By GEORGE H. CARVER

Should the gods of hockey's Mount Olympus see fit to toss a tasty morsel to the former drooling senior aficionados of this area, they could manipulate their puppet strings so that the Belleville Mo-Hawks and Kingston Aces will touch sticks in the final jousting for the senior "A" championship.

The Limestone Lassie (fifty miles east of here) and the Old Lady of the Moira (100 yards north of Zwick's Island) have been, sportswise, at each other's throats since Champlain caught the first muskie off Fort York, and later sank a treasure ship in Quinte waters off Prince Edward County.

Hockey, baseball, softball, you name it, this pair of Eastern Ontario virago have been in each other's hair in always keen and oftimes bitter rivalry.

As one wag quipped, "the only time they get together came when both cities placed representatives on the "Pen Saints" softball squad. Even in this, Kingston claimed the advantage, placing five men on the squad to Belleville's four.

Baseball - wise, the latter city rivalry raged hot and heavy during the post-war baseball fever pitch in the Golden Twenties and Roarin' Thirties when the late Wish Egan, one of his Grand Trunks and Nationals against Kingston's Joe Ujda and his fiery Frontenacs for many a hard - fought Central Ontario League battle.

Somewhere along the line in the Fancy Forties came a moment of baseball triumph for Kingston and the pangs of humiliation for Belleville when as the result of a friendly wager the current mayor of Belleville led a horse, upon which was mounted a proud, smiling Kingston girl resplendent in, down Princess Street while the Limestone City fans cheered themselves hoarse along.

"Them were the days, m'friends" when the miasma of rivalry seeped across the frozen hockey cushion and diamond to the confines of the various press boxes.

The right hon. Michael J. Rodden, the dean of Canadian sportswriters who fired his salvos and snipery from the sports editor's desk of the Whig Standard, took up the cudgels for his beloved Limestoners, aided and abetted at times by Dent Mayor Jackson before he swapped a typewriter for a microphone.

"You" wrote Don Miguel in a fiery column aimed at fifty if mile range at this delicate if not sparse - land occupant of the Moira sports throne, "are nothing but a non-imaginative imposter who is possessed of the idea that anything that reeks of Belleville is the cream of the sports world's milk. That gang of sod - busters you call a hockey team up there in that McAnnamy Street rabbit hutch couldn't lick a team of crippled cockroaches."

The typewriter war was on. However it was all in fun and I'm told it didn't hurt the box office in either city. Factually both Milin and this agent received letters warning us not to put in an appearance in rival arenas.

However, Kingston won the three - way fight for the Hockey Hall of Fame claiming the game originated there while representatives of McGill and Halifax laid singular claims.

The hockey wars surged onward and upward through the forties, fifties and to the sixties. Kingston, it must be admitted, won more than one senior "B" title and similarities backed up Wren Blair's Whitby Dunlops bid to form an Eastern Ontario senior "A" group.

In the following hectic seasons the Rodden - spoked team was the best attraction here and vice versa, although in the latter years other clubs drew well.

Interest in senior hockey waned after 1961, the last time a Canadian national team won the world's amateur title. But in recent years it has picked up. The calibre is improving to the point where a season or two ago a Kingston team won the Allan Cup and toured overseas.

National honors have been fairly even between Belleville and Kingston. The Limestoners have their Hockey Hall of Fame. Belleville hasn't. But the Old Gal of the Moira can boast something that few cities in Canada can talk about and that's four seasonal meetings, ship banners, Eastern Ontario Senior "A"; all-Ontario; the Allan Cup and the world championship twice at Prague in 1959.

It seems a shame they are being allowed to droop and perhaps fade away in their lofty perches in the north end of the McAnnamy street arena.

Perhaps they may perk up with the breeze of nostalgia if Davey Jones and his up-and-coming Mo-Hawks can eliminate the "enemy" from east and west of here and go on to, who knows, another Allan Cup triumph for the Old Lady of the Moira (nee Myer's Creek).

Wise to Follow Yule Fire Tips

By BARRY GREEN
Staff Reporter

With Christmas Day and the culmination of Yuletide festivities only a week away, Christmas trees are a part of every household.

Belleville Fire Department is again cautioning Belleville citizens in the use of natural and artificial trees in their homes.

In a news release to The Intelligencer, the department outlined some tips about the use of Christmas trees.

The safest tree is a fresh tree, stored outdoors until needed, then set up with the butt in water after removal of one or two inches diagonally from the butt with a saw. Water should be replenished regularly.

Even a tree at maximum moisture content will burn if flame is applied all around the base. Discarded wrappings should be cleared away from the base of the tree and cigarettes, candles, cigars and matches should be kept at a distance.

Some plastic trees, made from styrene materials may burn violently. Metallic trees conduct electricity and must not be decorated with strings of electric lights. Use flood-lights instead.

Christmas fire safety calls for care in setting up the tree. It should be kept away from sources of heat such as fireplaces, radiators or even television sets. Flammable decorations or candles should never be used on a tree.

In addition, Christmas trees should not be set up where they will obstruct access to doors or windows in an emergency.

A tree whose moisture content has dropped to a critical point before immersion will not recover, but will continue to dry out, even when standing in water.

The tree should be rechecked for flexibility 24 hours after erecting. If there is any sign of loosening of flexibility in needles or twigs, the tree should be removed.

Says Teachers Should Study Mind Function

Separate school trustees Wednesday night heard a plea for an in-service teachers' training program on the functioning of the human mind.

Mrs. Alice Tobin, a registered nurse who was hired in September as a special education aide at Georges Vanier Secondary School, outlined her duties for the trustees.

"Here is the most precious thing in the world, the mind," she said. "Yet too few of us know how it functions. A course is needed, not particularly for teachers at Vanier, but for all those in the system. But then I would be out of a job."

As well as counselling pupils and parents, Mrs. Tobin assists in observing the emotionally and perceptually handicapped and giving motor and visual co-ordination and audio-visual perception training to selected children.

"Teaching them to love themselves," was the way she defined her work.

"You have no idea of the effort involved in maintaining a lad in an emotional blow without stripping him of his dignity," she said. "Through a few acts of simple kindness a child will start to blossom out before you and become whole and beautiful."

She told of how one child's "total emotional collapse" was cured within two days by giving extra food at recess to raise his blood sugar. The child's behaviour improved and the problem disappeared.

The physically handicapped are easy to work with, the nurse told the trustees.

"But the perceptually and emotionally handicapped are harder, because we know so little about the problems."

Trustee Questions Davis' Powers

First local reaction to the bill giving Education Minister William Davis the power to govern estimates and expenditures of Ontario school boards was expressed by separate school trustees Wednesday night.

They decided to seek legal counsel and advice from the separate school trustees' council and report back to the agency on the matter.

Superintendent F. B. Allen said the bill, passed without opposition Dec. 2, "gives the minister more power over boards than he had in the original act" setting up county-wide boards.

However, both he and James Lesage of Tweed noted that the new act gives the minister "no more power than he previously had under regulations."

"He has just put it into an act," they commented.

"We ought to kill that," said Gerald Walsh of Picton.

"The minister may be more careful about using his power if we protest strongly from the start," commented J. R. Kroese of Trenton.

Herod Was Shaken with Alarm As Magi Hunted New-born King

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

In a slow, steady rhythm, the slaves swung the long fans of peacock feathers above King Herod's head, keeping off the flies. He sat propped on pillows, paring an apple, mouthing it off the blade.

His hands shook. His breath came in short gasps.

His red-lined eyes shifted warily about the reception hall, scrutinizing the Syrian cooks with their laden platters, the bodyguards, spears at their sides, the hounds sprawling on the floor.

A sentry stepped through the doorway drapes in announce the presence of the travellers who had stirred up the city with their inquiries.

Herod, the knife still in his hand, motioned for their admission. They came forward, a stately-looking delegation in robes, salaaming before him in the Oriental manner.

So these were the Magi, the sages of the hoary metaphysical books and celestial signs, the strangers who had been asking about a new born king.

A "wonderful counsellor," a "Prince of Peace," who would reveal "the glory of the Lord" and whose government would have no end.

To Herod it was sheer treason.

They had reached Jerusalem after a long overland journey, apparently from Persia, looking for the illustrious child, a manifestation of the Omnipotent, foretold in their recondite tomes and signalled by a phenomenon in the stars.

Herod, disease-ridden, often delirious, obsessed with phobias about plots against him, raised himself stiffly on the cushions.

"The king greets thee," he said, coughing. He leaned forward, forcing a tone of congratulatory solicitude into his voice.

"Say on now, when didst thou behold this marvel in the firmament? It is a subject of our most eager desire."

The bearded chief Magus elited the day and hour, along with details about a series of planetary conjunctions in 7 BC, climaxed by a triple conjunction of Jupiter, Saturn and Mars.

"The cycle is complete," he said firmly. "It was the supreme fravashi!"

It had been several months before, likely more than a year, with the intervening period required for their trip.

Herod previously had interrogated Judaism's scholars, learning of their own scripture, all allusions to a coming deliverer, a "light to the nations" of the earth.

And the prophet Micah, 600 years past, had written that the mighty one would be born in Bethlehem.

Herod, after eliciting the time interval since the Magi saw their "star," directed them to the village south of the capital, adding: "Go and search diligently for the child, and when you have found him bring me word, that I too may come and worship him."

He seized back in his seat, his thumb stroking the knife edge, as they disappeared through the curtains. The child would be less than two years old.

Herod gorged himself on food, trying to soothe his ulcers. He also suffered from dropsy, which puffed his tissue with excess fluids, from fevers, convulsions, fierce head pains, a burning body and rash and festering tumors on his abdomen and feet.

He had difficulty breathing, and there was an odor about him, a foulness of breath. His mind reeled with guilts, horrors and illusions, imagining his own sons swooping down on him, swords in hand, his murdered wife Marianne wailing in the night, his guards abandoning him, the hounds at his throat.

His unabated investigations and enveloping espionage system kept whetting rumors of treachery by his two sons of Marianne, Alexander and Aristobulus. At one point, Herod put them on trial before Caesar Augustus in Beirut. The emperor effected a reconciliation.

But a rival son, Antipater, by a wife of Idumean rather than Jewish stock, revived suspicions against the two. And Herod's barber, Tryphy, whispered to him that an old soldier had urged the barber to Alexander's behalf to slit the king's throat while trimming his beard.

Herod had Alexander and Aristobulus bound and taken to his fortified palace in Sebaste and strangled to death there, the place where other members of the Hasmonean dynasty had been executed.

That was the last of them, as the deranged Herod counted it, the end of the royal Jewish clan that had beset and badgered him, threatened and fought him.

He had exterminated them all, his challengers, his comrades, his cherished Marianne, his own sons and heirs.

However, a still nobler prince, of David's line, now tested in that realm.

Then his sister, Salome, warned him of further danger.

Had it not been Antipater, an older son of an early Idumean wife, Doris, who had first lodged the information against Mariamne's sons? Salome now had evidence that the case had been fabricated by deceit, forged confessions and bribed accusers in a criminal alliance with Antipater. He croaked the command to seize Antipater.

Shortly, he also received word that the Magi, those alien fomenters of treason about a new descendant of David to take the throne of the world, had tricked him. They had left the country secretly, without leading him to the child.

Herod went bellowing through the palace, alternately raging, weeping and calling madly for the dead Mariamne.

At one point, he grabbed a knife and tried to stab himself, but a guard stopped him. He seemed not to notice it, or care. When Antipater was brought before him, he pointed a wavering finger, bawling piteously.

"He would kill the king! Yet thou, O Antipater, was the informer against my slain sons."

He decreed death for Antipater also. He ordered troops to imprison all of the principal men of Jerusalem in the Hippodrome just outside the city walls. He directed that every soldier be paid two months bonus. And he dispatched a robert of them to slay all male children under two in Bethlehem.

Tomorrow: Holocaust and hope.

Parents Disagree On Sex Education

According to some readers, you open up a Pandora's Box when you subject children to sex education in the schools. But others disagree. They believe that parents are inadequate in transmitting the fundamentals of this problem to their youngsters. For example:

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I read your recent column about the need for realism in the approach to sex education of our youngsters. Children do need sex education but I don't believe it should be given in mixed groups when they are very young. It's like trying to jump the Grand Canyon.

* * *

You have to bridge the gap first. Most parents won't or can't talk about it to their children. Therefore, someone else trained to do so should do the job.

As parents have a false modesty and children have an innate shyness, I believe the school is the best place for the information. If taught in conjunction with hygiene classes and physical education the children would take it in stride.

I don't see why some parents disagree. Often the same ones who don't teach their own children will be loudest in disagreement that the schools should take over.

I think a child would be less shy asking a teacher a question about sex than trying to get an answer from a parent. If sex education was begun in junior high, by the time the pupil reached high school, he would be ready for being taught in mixed classes.

Sex between two people in love is a beautiful and wonderful thing. With this in mind, no one should object to sex education in the school: neither parent, nor the Church. So why don't we try it and get the job done? Instead of just talking about it while the children learn the hard way. — A loving mother

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am recuperating from a heart attack I had three months ago. In the hospital they told me it was a coronary occlusion. On my bill the doctor wrote "acute myocardial infarction." Can you explain? — Mrs. L.

Comment: The terms are often used interchangeably. When a clot occurs in a coronary artery, the blood circulation is cut off to a portion of the heart muscle. This part of the myocardium (heart muscle) becomes "infarcted" and useless.

Occasionally, however, myocardial infarction can occur without any evidence of coronary occlusion. (But I'd better quit right now, before I confuse you.)

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have recently read that honey not only will prevent colds and flu, but is one of the best heart stimulants known. I never heard any other doctor make this statement. Will you? — Mr. S.

Comment: You still haven't heard any other doctor make this statement.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I recently heard that when elderly people (65 and older) started sleeping up to 10 hours a night, it was a sign of impending heart trouble, hardening of the arteries, etc. We usually retire around midnight and sometimes can sleep until 9:30 a.m. or later. Your comments will be appreciated. — Mr. R.

Comment: I've read about it lately, but do not believe there is sufficient scientific evidence so I do not give credence to it. Be thankful that you can sleep so well and so long—and are not bothered by the insomnia so many elderly people complain about.

Lennon Plans Mosport Peace Rally Next July

TORONTO (CP) — John Lennon and his wife Yoko Ono are planning a peace festival at Mosport Park northeast of Toronto next July, and the singer-poet says he'll ask his fellow Beatles and everyone who's anyone" to entertain.

Lennon and Ono arrived in Toronto Tuesday night for a week long stay, and held a news conference Wednesday to talk about their campaign for peace.

Asked to define peace, the Beatle said:

"You—no violence and everybody groovin', if you don't mind the word."

The July peace festival performers and the promoters will be paid for their efforts and the profits will go to a peace fund.

He hopes the other Beatles—George Harrison, Ringo Starr and Paul McCartney—will come to Mosport, a park 30 mile from Toronto noted for Grand Prix car racing.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For December 19

Your birthday today: There is not a great deal you can do to change the main limitations of the existing pattern of your life for the next several months. Inner adjustment should be the most progress. Be patient, avoiding impulsive responses to any frustration while things work themselves out.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): If you have anything to do with mechanical or electrical devices take your time and be safe. Arguments with fellow workers are pointless and avoidable.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): The main hindrance to effective work today is the impatience of people who do not have enough to do themselves. Quiet explanations smooth matters. Take no risks with your cash or future earnings.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You may find that you have much competition for the time and attention of those you want to reach. Family matters become noisy where there is too much emphasis on everybody doing the same things together.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Things in general make for a pleasant, normal sort of a day. Any what you do and the incidents that happen.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Leave the major contacts, larger bids for another time when more planning is finished. Tidy up the relatively small details.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): You are likely correct in your assessment of family or group problems but certain to be stopped if you try doing anything about them today. Think in terms of more time for persuasion and additional phases.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Your own row stand by you well while more affluent outsiders and groups offer opposition or competition. Where conflict has actually begun, passive resistance succeeds.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Business matters take up more of your time and attention than anticipated, so that your personal pursuits are hindered. Then his sister, Salome, warned him of further danger.

Had it not been Antipater, an older son of an early Idumean wife, Doris, who had first lodged the information against Mariamne's sons? Salome now had evidence that the case had been fabricated by deceit, forged confessions and bribed accusers in a criminal alliance with Antipater. He croaked the command to seize Antipater.

Herod went bellowing through the palace, alternately raging, weeping and calling madly for the dead Mariamne.

At one point, he grabbed a knife and tried to stab himself, but a guard stopped him. He seemed not to notice it, or care. When Antipater was brought before him, he pointed a wavering finger, bawling piteously.

"He would kill the king! Yet thou, O Antipater, was the informer against my slain sons."

He decreed death for Antipater also. He ordered troops to imprison all of the principal men of Jerusalem in the Hippodrome just outside the city walls. He directed that every soldier be paid two months bonus. And he dispatched a robert of them to slay all male children under two in Bethlehem.

Tomorrow: Holocaust and hope.

Policy Hasn't Worked

Urban Renewal Grants Sliced

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government has largely abandoned the urban renewal policies it set out in legislation in 1964.

The Commons was told Thursday by Robert Andras, minister without portfolio in charge of housing, that implementation of all the urban renewal schemes across Canada that are ready to go ahead would cost Ottawa as much as $400,000,000 in grants alone.

At the same time, he said, the urban renewal program set out in the 1964 amendments to the National Housing Act is too rigid, torturously protracted and has resulted in fewer, rather than more, low-income housing units.

Consequently, the minister said, the federal contribution to municipal projects between 1970 and 1974 will be held at $25,000,000 annually.

The statement was denounced in the House by Conservative urban affairs critic Lincoln Alexander (Hamilton West) as "a slap in the face of our cities."

"The planning of our major urban centres has been disrupted and their needs ignored. . . . The cities have been given every reason to expect that support would be forthcoming from the federal government."

Mr. Alexander called the government's whole urban policy bankrupt.

John Gilbert (NDP—Toronto Broadview) said it had resulted in "a Berlin wall of frustration."

Under the NHA amendments, Ottawa was to put up 50 per cent of the cost of planning and implementing urban renewal projects. Through Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. it could also be called on to provide loans to the provinces and municipalities to replace low-income housing destroyed in the process.

Even with the new ceiling set on grants, Mr. Andras told the House, the government would be paying more for urban renewal than in the last three years. The contribution was $7,500,000 in 1967, $12,500,000 in 1968 and $22,000,000 this year.

The new policy will permit negotiations to continue with the provinces on six projects exempted from the general freeze on federal participation in urban renewal announced last August, he said.

"You're forgotten your bullet-proof vest!"

Tobacco Board Head Protests

TILLSONBURG, Ont. (CP) — The chairman of the Ontario Flue-Cured Tobacco Marketing Board directorate said Thursday that the Commons health committee which recommends all cigarette promotion be eliminated "has chosen completely to ignore the tobacco industry's proposals."

George Demeyere said in an interview that the industry and growers asked the committee to spend money on research to prove cigarette smoking causes cancer and not to rely solely on statistics.

Health Inquiry Report Tabled

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons health committee Thursday recommended the progressive elimination of all cigarette advertising and promotion.

The committee's report, the fruit of two years of inquiry, was tabled in the House by Dr. Gaston Isabelle (L-Hull), committee chairman.

Avoiding smoking is the most effective way to prevent most cases of lung cancer, chronic bronchitis and emphysema and probably the best way to reduce the risk of heart disease, it says.

The report, published in a smoke-grey volume with a picture of a burning cigarette in an ashtray, says legislative action to stop cigarette promotion should be followed by action to prevent economic disruption in the multi-million-dollar tobacco industry.

A timetable for the elimination of promotion of cigarettes, suggested by the committee, lists premium and coupon schemes and broadcast advertising as the first to go.

"The committee believes that undue hardships should not be imposed on networks and stations by removal of cigarette advertising."

It suggests a complete end to all promotion within four years.

Among other recommendations:

—Banning of free distribution of cigarettes.

—A prohibition against increasing current spending on cigarette advertising in all communications media to prevent a shift from broadcast to other types of advertising.

—Limitation of the remaining advertising to the identification of the brand only.

—After one year, a requirement that any advertising or promotional material, cigarette packages, cartons and vending machines carry a health-hazard warning.

An immediate call for early action on the committee's report was issued by Barry Mather (NDP—Surrey) whose 10-year campaign against cigarette

After a four-inch snowfall last night, all of Belleville was a study in white. The snow hasn't fallen too soon as far as the children are concerned — they are crossing their fingers hoping for even more to fall on Christmas Eve.

Air Controllers' Vote On Pact Likely Close

OTTAWA (CP) — The results of a nation-wide vote by air traffic controllers on a government contract offer will be known late tonight or early Saturday morning, John David Lyon, president of the 1,000-member Canadian Air Traffic Control Association said Thursday.

Mr. Lyon said it appeared the vote on the contract settlement worked out by union and treasury board negotiators Wednesday would be close "one way or the other."

An original strike date of noon today was postponed to noon Sunday to give the membership in 22 locals across the country time to vote on the offer.

Mr. Lyon said the reaction of Toronto controllers indicated they would vote to reject the offer.

"We may also lose in Vancouver and Montreal but we expect the other locals to carry it."

He said reports Thursday night that Vancouver members had voted heavily to reject the settlement were just rumors. Vancouver members were voting Thursday night and again this morning and the ballot boxes were sealed.

The controllers contract expired June 30. A Christmas holiday tie-up of air traffic appeared imminent when both union and treasury board rejected a conciliation board report and the union was legally allowed to strike any time after noon today.

The 11th hour settlement came when the treasury board agreed to accept the conciliation report's recommendation for a 13 per cent wage increase over 27 months. The union had asked 14 per cent over 24 months and the government had offered 12 per cent over 30 months.

Salaries for air traffic controllers range from less than $5,000 a year for trainees to more than $12,000 for experienced men.

Israel Reports Raid Across Suez Canal

From AP-Reuters

Israel said it sent its commandos across the Suez canal to attack an Egyptian army camp during the night but the Egyptians categorically denied that such a raid happened.

The Israeli military command said today that Israeli commandos launched a rocket attack on the Egyptian camp near Salihiye, about 20 miles west of El Ballah, where at least three Egyptians and one Israeli were killed in two Egyptian attempts to penetrate Israeli lines Wednesday night.

All the raiders returned safely to the east side of the waterway, a spokesman said.

It was the first Israeli ground incursion into Egypt since Oct. 28, when an amphibious force hit Egyptian targets on the Gulf of Suez.

Israeli planes also attacked the west side of the canal for three hours during the night, but the military command did not say whether this coincided with the commando raid.

An Egyptian military spokesman denied that Israeli commandos attacked Salihiye.

MONTREAL (CP) — Pierre Vallieres, an admitted member of the terrorist front de Liberation Quebecois, began serving a 20-year sentence Thursday for the 1966 bombing death of Therese Morin at an east-end shoe factory. ## Reserve Armed Forces to Be Cut

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's reserve armed forces will be reduced by about 4,000 men in the next year, Defence Minister Leo Cadieux announced today.

Mr. Cadieux also told the Commons that at least 41 armories will be closed.

The reduction will bring the strength of the reserves down to about 22,200.

Almost the entire cut will be borne by the militia, which at present has a strength of 23,500.

There will be no significant changes in the naval and air reserves, Mr. Cadieux told the House. The naval reserve has a current strength of 2,900 and the air reserve 800.

The number of major militia units will be reduced to 87 from 96 and the number of minor units to 78 from 138.

The changes will reflect Canada's "redefined military roles and defence budget restrictions," Mr. Cadieux said. They will save the defence department an estimated $15,000,000 a year.

At the same time, Mr. Cadieux announced a major reorganization of the reserves.

"To complement and more closely support regular force operational roles, most militia units will be placed under mobile command April 1, 1970."

An exception will be 11 signal units across Canada, which will be placed under the regular force communication system.

Until now, the militia has come directly under defence headquarters' directorate of militia.

Mr. Cadieux in his announcement expressed confidence that the revised organization will give Canada effective reserve forces.

"They will be well organized, vigorously led and a vital part of the combined regular-reserve force team."

Most of the units being removed from the active militia list are detached sub-units costly to maintain, he said.

All armored and infantry regiments will be retained but with reduced establishments. In some cases sub-units will be closed.

The cuts are not as great as had been anticipated. There were reports in recent weeks that the militia would be slashed by 35 to 40 per cent. Earlier reports said the chop might go as high as 50 per cent.

As announced, the reduction will only be about 17 per cent. Defence department sources attributed this to strong representations made to the defence department in recent months by the Conference of Defence Associations, representing reserve units.

Rail Move Inhuman, Grills Tells Commons

By HARRY HULBALL
Staff Reporter

A CNR proposal to transfer 17 employees from Belleville to a centralized billing department in Montreal is inhuman, says Hastings MP Lee Grills.

Mr. Grills' statement in the Commons last night was the latest development in an issue that has stirred controversy among Belleville railroad employees.

Mr. Grills warned that the workers involved, some of them with the CNR for more than 18 years, are fearful of the move to Montreal because they don't speak French.

They are also worried about getting English-language schooling for their children, he said.

The Belleville MP was told by Gerard Loiselle, parliamentary secretary to Transport Minister Don Jamieson, that his comments would be passed on to railroad officials.

Mr. Loiselle added, however, that the CNR is a Crown corporation and makes its own decisions.

JP-Belleville today, Herb Polster, president of Local 128, Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers' Union, said there have been no significant changes in the local in the past week.

A meeting between union and railroad officials scheduled for Montreal this week was canceled, he said.

It likely will not be held until early in the new year, he believed.

The fight to retain the employees in Belleville — headquarters of the CNR's Rideau area — is being headed by a special committee of Local 128 officials led by Mr. Polster.

Last Friday the committee brought M. K. Carson, the Brotherhood's national presidential assistant, to a meeting with Mayor Russell Scott.

The committee also has sent the 300 members of Local 128 the outline of a letter it suggests be forwarded to Quinte-area MPs.

Surgeon Praises BGH

Belleville General Hospital earned laurels from a British surgeon who toured North America in the fall.

Peter Ring, FRCS, who performed two hip implant operations here in September, was impressed by the hospital during his visit.

Commenting on hospital facilities he had seen on his tour, Mr. Ring said in Seattle, Wash., "In a small city in Canada — Belleville — they had the most efficient and effective arrangements I have seen so far."

Response Lifts Exchange Within Pennies of Goal

By LINDA GELDART
(Staff Reporter)

For the more than 300 families registered with the Christmas Exchange, Dec. 25 will be a happy day.

The Exchange, which assists needy families with food hampers or cheques, has almost reached its goal of $4,400. To date, donations stand near the $4,000 mark.

The response by the citizens of Belleville has been phenomenal, with everyone, young and old, giving a dollar or two.

Belleville Real Estate Board donated $100 and the Unemployment Insurance Commission $200 to the Exchange.

Support has been particularly enthusiastic from the young people in the city — who have done everything from assisting families, to donating proceeds of their special programs entirely to the Exchange.

Centennial Secondary is sponsoring 32 families, while groups in several other high schools in Belleville are also assisting families in conjunction with the Exchange.

By "sponsoring" these families personally, the students will deliver their Christmas hampers themselves, as well as taking care of any other needs those particular families may have.

Two high schools in the city are assisting the Exchange with their program efforts.

Moira Secondary held a music and drama night Wednesday, with all proceeds — $320 — going to the Exchange.

Principal L. D. Read explained this through a voluntary collection taken in the school this morning. Moira Secondary students will be able to present a cheque for $400 to Mrs. Jane Haslett, director of the Christmas Exchange.

Quinte Secondary is holding a Christmas Carnival today, with admission to be used as a gift for a needy family. It is the first time that Quinte Secondary has attempted such a Christmas project in place of an assembly.

Each of the elementary schools in the city has contributed toys in the firefighters' association for distribution to the more than 1,100 underprivileged children in Belleville.

Harry J. Clarke School put forth a special effort when they knitted and donated 100 Christmas stockings to the Exchange. The art students decided they would like to do something constructive to give children less fortunate than themselves a lift at Christmas.

"The young people have been the keenest donors from the beginning", said Mrs. Haslett.

The enthusiasm of the young people has been one of the most important elements of the Exchange.

"Without the wholehearted support of both the children and teen - agers of Belleville, it would have been impossible for the Exchange to assist the number of families we have".

"Without their help", she continued, "we couldn't have met our objective, there would have been many people who would not have had a Christmas." Donations can be mailed to the Christmas Exchange, Box 815, or 224 John St., Belleville.

Old Switcheroo

Cars are beginning to look more and more alike these days, as a Belleville man and woman learned yesterday afternoon, police report.

A car theft report to the Belleville City Police actually was just a case of mistaken "cardentity."

According to Chief Douglas Crosbie, Mrs. R. B. Niles of Plaza Square drove downtown yesterday afternoon between 3 and 4 p.m. and parked her car on Pinnacle Street.

At approximately the same time, with the mild thickening, Clarence Hunt, an engineer at the Belleville General Hospital, was at work-er, Stewart Hay, downtown. Mr. Hay drove Mr. Hunt's car.

Mr. Hay parked the car near Mrs. Niles' car and when he returned, he mistakenly took the wrong vehicle. The cars were identical and Mrs. Niles had left the keys in the ignition. Both cars are green 1960 Chevs.

As a result, police received a report of a stolen car and the mistaken switch in automobiles was not discovered until 10:40 p.m. last night.

Ice in Rink By Holidays — Hopefully

DESERONTO — J. A. Layfield, chairman of the Community Centre Board, is hopeful that there will be ice in the rink for the Christmas holidays. "We'd like to keep the kids off the Bay for safety's sake", he stated Monday.

Given the right kind of weather, the rink could be flooded at any time, but the building isn't yet ready. A volunteer who offered to do the wiring there has not yet found time to carry through, although all the supplies are here.

Meanwhile, other volunteers who wish to complete the work still to be done on the inside must wait until the electric heaters can warm things up.

Cigarette

rette smoking was instrumental in launching the Bureau.

Health Minister John Munro said he will have to study the report carefully before making recommendations to cabinet. It would be late spring or next fall before legislative action could be taken.

He said he sees constitutional jurisdictional problems which might prove troublesome.

The committee recommends that the federal departments of regional economic expansion, agriculture, manpower and immigration, industry, trade and commerce and national health and welfare co-ordinate efforts to help the tobacco growers and workers in the industry to adjust to the major changes which will develop.

Trenton Hospital Board Chairman Dies

TRENTON (Staff) — Sherman O. Graham, chairman of the board of governors of Trenton Memorial Hospital, died last night of a heart attack in Trenton after a board meeting.

Mr. Graham, 67, was chairman of the board since hospital expansion commenced earlier this fall.

His interest in the Trenton hospital goes back to the 1940s when he was an active member of the group initiating the project.

He was a real estate salesman for Barry and Percival, in addition to his post as chairman of the board.

A board spokesman termed Mr. Graham's death a shock, and said "he will be truly missed in the community. He had high principles, and was a good businessman. Whenever he made a decision, he had the interests of the people of Trenton at heart."

Mr. Graham suffered the attack while at a meeting of the hospital board, and was rushed to hospital, where he later died.

Council Honors Retiring Reeve

WOOLER (Staff) — Murray Township Council tied up the loose ends Thursday evening at the final 1969 session and expressed appreciation to retiring Reeve Gerald Ross, a 16-year veteran of council.

At the conclusion of the regular council session, Councillor James Quinn presented a wrist watch to Reeve Ross on behalf of the council and township staff.

Reeve Ross thanked the council members and said: "I'm glad I'm stepping down and leaving council in good hands."

The retiring reeve, who has also served as councillor and deputy-reeve, spoke encouragingly of Murray Township's past accomplishments and its present situation, noting that he was particularly pleased with the condition of the township's roads" which he said were as good as any in Durham - Northumberland County.

Then Reeve Ross sat down behind two lighted candles and joined the council members in a midnight meal of fried chicken and fish and chips.

On Jan. 5, 1970, the recently-elected Murray Township council will be inaugurated at the council chambers. The ceremony begins at 1:30 p.m. and will be followed by the initial meeting of the new council, which will serve a three-year term.

Metro Trio Face Charges In Picton

PICTON (Staff) — Three Toronto youths, charged with car theft, willful damage and possession of a stolen car were returned to Picton by police Wednesday to face charges.

Court, George Wright, Picton police and Const. William Chard, Picton OPP Detachment, arrested Joseph Parrent, 16, William Cleverdon, 17 and John O'Malley, 16, in Toronto.

The three are charged with possession of a stolen car, abandoned Nov. 23 at Demille's service station on the Bloomfield Road. The second charge of theft, involved a car taken from the sales lot of Picton auto dealers Bowerman and Shantz, on Nov. 23.

Charges of willful damage arose from an incident in which the top of a convertible owned by Frank McKee of Picton was slashed. The car was parked at Demille's service station.

The youths will make their first appearance in provincial court here Jan. 7 with the exception of William Cleverdon, who will appear next Wednesday.

'Bubbly' Believed Bogus

By BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

Three door-to-door salesmen here, offering champagne at $2 a bottle, are causing concern to city police.

According to Chief Douglas Crosbie, the men are selling Cresta Blanca flavored apple cider.

Chief Crosbie said the label on the apple cider bottle reads "serve like champagne" with the "serve like" in small print and the "champagne" in large print.

This, said the chief, confuses residents approached by the "salesmen".

However, police can do nothing until they can prove the men are selling the cider as champagne.

They (Belleville residents) are either being taken or breaking the law themselves," Chief Crosbie explained.

Any drinks containing alcohol can only be sold legally in wine stores, the Brewers' Retail and the Liquor Control Board. Any sale outside of these premises is bootlegging.

"You just don't buy anything at the door with an alcoholic content," Chief Crosbie said. "You don't get bargains like that."

'Conflicting Events' Fair Board Concern

Directors of Belleville's Quinte Exhibition are concerned over the increasing number of activities sponsored by clubs and other organizations which conflict with fair dates.

In a letter to city council this week, Exhibition president Cameron Bunnett suggested that city hall set up a "directory of events headquarters" for all public functions within the municipality.

No legislative control is proposed, but it is suggested city hall could act as an advisory agency to help overcome the problem of conflicting events.

Mr. Bunnett said the agricultural society regularly sees promotional campaigns, circuses, rallies, craft shows and other activities scheduled immediately adjacent to the annual exhibition.

It is felt that these events are not planned as competition to the fair but are happening due to lack of co-ordination.

Besides the limited dollars available, Mr. Bunnett suggested that such splinter events cannot hope to be successful when similar functions are held immediately adjacent to each other.

Second Break-in

For the second time in the last few weeks, Amplifone Canada Ltd., on Dundek Street was broken into last night, Police reported this morning.

The break-in was discovered by policemen on patrol at approximately 4:30 a.m.

Thieves apparently entered the building through a rear window and burglarized the soft drink machine. A time clock in the building was also damaged.

It is not known yet how much the thieves escaped with.

'B and B' Again

If anyone had thought the work of the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism was long since done they would have been wrong. The B and B body is still going strong, as its third report just tabled in the Commons indicates.

And the interesting thing about this report is its conclusion that in Quebec the average income of males of British origin is no less than 40 points above the provincial average, and ten points above the national average.

In Canada as a whole, the report notes, bilingual persons generally receive the highest annual income, followed by unilingual English-speaking people. In Quebec, however, unilingual English-speaking people topped those who are bilingual as well as those who are French-speaking only, in income.

Relate this comparison to the kind of activity that permeates Quebec society — and Montreal in particular. This city's crime rate is one of the highest on the continent, its under-world largely French-speaking.

Bank robberies are almost a daily occurence in Montreal, the latest on Wednesday, at a credit union where one of two Brinks' Express men employed as supplementary guards was shot and killed.

There is a close link between this bent for violence and a lack of education that would give Quebec's youth a chance to earn an honest living.

This link between crime and educational attainment becomes even clearer from the B and B Commission's finding that Canadians of French origin were found to be consistently below most others on all education levels.

In the circumstances the emphasis on greater power for Quebec as a province, and the insistence even at the federal level on bilingualism seems oddly out of place. Meanwhile, where the underworld is concerned it would appear that in that realm there is more bravado than brains, with such tragic results as have been noted above.

Busy Post Office

Public criticism notwithstanding, the Post Office here in Belleville and across Canada performs a notable service, and particularly at this time when mail assumes such formidable proportions.

It is a difficult and thankless enough task for mailmen and office staff, yet for the most part it is performed cheerfully and with efficiency.

The public for their part, when they have a complaint, in many instances are authors of their own misfortune. For one thing it is about time everyone knew that post offices now close at 5.45 p.m. It may be inconvenient, but there it is.

The post office, moreover, makes far fewer mistakes than its customers do. That is the word from P. G. Cosgrey, who handles complaints at the post office's quality control department in Toronto. This is not surprising; if there is a short cut the public will take it, then they moan when something goes astray.

As Mr. Cosgrey put it: "You would be surprised how many people neglect to put a return address on a parcel or envelope. Sometimes they will write 'Town' or 'City' instead of 'Toronto.'

The same sort of lethargy prevents people from dignifying the name of a province by its full title and instead write for example 'BC' instead of British Columbia and 'Me.' for Maine.

Too many think the post office people are mind readers — and indeed they do acquire certain skills in this direction; otherwise there would be more mail going astray than actually does get lost. We do ourselves a favor by addressing mail correctly, not forgetting to include a return address, and by wrapping parcels securely.

Wheat for Russia

Russia's purchase of 128,000,000 bushels of Canadian wheat is certainly welcome but it is really only a drop in the ocean of stockpiled grain out west. The situation there is still serious as the latest reports confirm. Farmers are defying the law by moving grain across provincial boundaries for sale to feed companies or cattle producers, and judges are being lenient with those farmers who get caught. The farmers' sense of desperation is understandable.

France's Pompidou Has Tight Rein on National Policy

By CY FOX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Georges Pompidou, proudly reviewing his record since becoming president of France 12 months ago' has bluntly asserted himself as the man rightfully in charge of the country's affairs.

In doing so, Pompidou was staking his claim to the credit for what he termed the solid successes scored by France in the first stages of its current fight against economic and social problems, potentially ruinous in scope.

These were part of the legacy inherited by the present chief of state from his predecessor, Charles de Gaulle.

In his speech this week, Pompidou made only one reference to de Gaulle.

But the entire address was couched in terms vividly reminiscent of the general's style—although the United States was carefully given privacy over the Soviet Union in references to foreign policy.

Promotion of co-operation by France with the French-speaking countries of Africa and the world, in line with a favorite de Gaulle maxim, was high on the list of achievements selected by Pompidou for special mention.

Even in recalling that France under his presidency has not voiced the likes of British solicitation in the European Common Market, Pompidou reiterated that London must prove itself to be "turning towards Europe."

Yet Pompidou, a master of deft phrase-making, managed to combine this hint of continued toughness—little noticed by British commentators—with a suggestion of unbridled enthusiasm that left London happy.

He was far less oblique, however, in affirming his position as France's top man.

"I have conducted the affairs of France with the co-operation of the prime minister and the government I appointed," he said.

From this, observers were quick to conclude that Pompidou means to follow de Gaulle in using the presidential office as that of a chief executive rather than in the manner of a "national arbitrator" content to have policy decisions made at cabinet level.

But also he showed how the current president has given himself room for manoeuvre within the frame of reference imposed by his loyalties to Gaullism.

One Gaullist suspicious of this flexible approach complained that Pompidou's speech actually guarantees that an expanded Common Market would be anything except a branch of the North Atlantic Alliance.

At the same time, Pompidou's remarks were interpreted elsewhere as making clear that he does not agree fully with some policy statements made by Prime Minister Chaban-Delmas.

The prime minister has talked much about a liberal-accessing vision—labelled the "New Society"—which he has of the future France.

Pompidou made no reference to this concept in his speech, and also appeared less committed than Chaban-Delmas to reform of France's much-criticized broadcasting system.

The address, in fact, left some listeners with the impression that the prime minister, and possibly other officials as well, had been put firmly in their places.

"I'm afraid the guaranteed wage plan is still in the verbal stages!"

Bible Still World's Best Seller

Regina Leader - Post

When paperback books came into the bookstores of the world it was a great boon to the world's readers. Now it was possible for even those on s i l m budgets to buy books of their choice, since even some of the world's greatest literature is now reproduced in this economical form together with the popular and current works of today's authors. It may surprise quite a few skeptics that the paperback New Testament, entitled "Today's English Version" has had a sale of 12,000,000 in two years. To date its record has been unexcelled and it has outsold all other individual paperbacks.

In spite of the emphasis on the "here" and "now" and on scientific and material aspects in the printed word the demand for the Bible is today at its greatest peak in history. As the people of the world become more literate the demand for the Bible, translated in their own language, becomes greater. Thanks to the concerted efforts and finances of the 35 national Bible societies in the world this challenge is being met. The Scriptures have now been translated into 1,250 languages. They are appearing in a new language roughly every two weeks. This entails the monumental task of at least 3,000 translators and work is being done on 800 different languages at present.

Translations, even to the skill ed and informed, have their own share of pitfalls. Some of them are amusing. A recent release from the Canadian Bible Society recounts an amusing incident during the course of a translator working among the Eskimos. He could not come up with a word in the language for "joy." One day, seeing a Husky enjoying himself immensely with a bone, he asked a native for the appropriate word or words to describe the dog's apparent pleasure. As a result chapter 15 verse seven of Luke duly appears in that particular Eskimo dialect as follows: "There shall be tailwagging in the presence of the angels over one sinner that repenteth."

Needless to say a revision of that early translation is now in the process of being prepared.

Quebec Stand on Social Security

Montreal Le Devoir: As was predicted . . . the fourth federal-provincial conference on constitutional reform was marked by a clash between Quebec and Ottawa, indeed between Quebec and the rest of the country, on the particular problem of social security.

Let's not be afraid to call a spade a spade. The positions taken by both sides are hardly reconcilable. It will be necessary to have one side or the other eventually retreat if we want to get down to writing a new constitution capable of keeping all parts of Confederation together.

Quebec, through the mouth of Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand, repeated that social security should be clearly defined as a provincial responsibility and, consequently, left to the competence of the provinces. The provinces, he said, are closer to the citizens and thus more aware of their needs and how to meet them in an adequate way. . . .

The trench separating Quebec from the rest of the country isn't narrow. It's still, as Mr. Bertrand said, the problem of two solitudes. . . .

If we want to revise our constitution it is necessary to examine with the same care points of disagreement as well as points of agreement. The fact that there was no immediate criteria on one point does not indicate that all hope of compromise has been lost.

'Clean' Engine Research

Windsor Star

Ford Motor Company's $91,000,000 war on pollution is a welcome proof that the industrial giants of this continent are awake to the mounting dangers of killing our environment.

The program, announced by Henry Ford II, will treat pollution as the international problem that it is. Ford will attack pollution on both sides of the border, both by cleaning up present industrial pollution and by developing motor vehicle engines with a minimum pollution rate.

In the end it is the consumer who will pay the cost of reducing pollution from automotive engines. Developing "clean" engines, while technically possible, will be a long and costly business. Older engines will have to be removed from the road before the full effects of "clean" engines can be felt. Both processes will be reflected in added costs to the owners of automobiles.

But one of the major reasons for proposing the Crown Corporation formula is to permit better, more realistic relations with the 48,000 post office employees.

The troubles of the last few years in the post office have stemmed directly from the seeming lack of personnel policy.

Some 70 per cent of the post office budget goes to salaries. As it is now, the guidelines for personnel policy are set by the Treasury Board, and this must end.

Postal employees deserve to get the same attention, to work in the same atmosphere as other Crown Corporation employees such as those at the CN or Air Canada.

For the next few months, there should be some action on the consultants' report. It is clear that making the Post Office a Crown corporation is the first step to modernizing it, and assuring that in the 1970's and 1980's, Canada will have one of the best postal services in the world.

Post Office as A Crown Corporation

Montreal Gazette

The consultants' report that the Canadian Post Office should be turned into a Crown Corporation is hardly a surprising recommendation. The idea has been suggested for many years. But the fact that an independent group of analysts made it their main recommendation after lengthy and detailed study, and made it forcefully with the reasons to back it up should provide the impetus for action.

The study warns rather ominously that the Post Office defi cit could mount to a staggering $500,000,000 by 1980 if there is no attempt to reorganize and update the methods. The deficit last year was $88,000,000.

The report proposes that the Post Office decentralize its operations, is make a four region postal system of the four Western provinces, Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes. As it is now, district directors must refer purchases of more than $10 for such items as first aid to the central office.

Dennison Back Toronto—More of the Same

Peterborough Examiner

The re-election of Mayor William Dennison in Toronto, the overwhelming defeat of municipal Liberals and strong showing by incumbents and independents do not speak well for the future of Liberals and the future of cities in general:

This is not to say that if the young Stephen Clarkson and his Liberal colleagues had been swept into power in Toronto, the problems of the city would have been as good as solved. On the contrary, Mr. Clarkson and his team were inexperienced and might have found more problems in office than they even imagine exist.

But a strong showing by party politicians — Liberals or New Democrats — would have indicated some recognition on the part of the electorate that present city administration and administration procedures have largely failed.

Rural municipalities and smaller urban centres have done such an unsatisfactory administrative job over the years that many major powers have been transferred to the provincial municipal affairs department. East York Mayor True Davidson, at last summer's convention of the Association of Ontario Mayors and Reeves, blamed the increasing takeover of municipal affairs by the provincial government on ambitious provincial and federal civil servants but it is probably true to say that it was the local municipalities that went to the senior governments for help, mostly money.

They were afraid of the unpopular move of demanding enough taxes from local residents to pay for local services and preferred to go to other politicians for the money. Now they reap the results.

And Toronto electors have indicated that the way things have gone in the past is the way they should go in the future.

Mr. Dennison, in an interview after his victory had been claimed, said that he would continue to push for a strong and growing Toronto until it was established as the country's greatest cosmopolitan area.

The mayor evidently missed the point.

Toronto is a major "cosmopolitan" centre and has enjoyed extravagant growth over the past few decades. But with that growth in size and numbers, problems have grown at an even faster rate and Mr. Dennison continues to prescribe the medicine that causes the ill.

The sad fact is that Toronto voters have also missed the point.

World Population

Kingston Whig-Standard

The United Nations is vitally concerned about a world-wide people boom.

According to a recent report on population, the total world population will increase by 50 per cent in 20 years, from 3.2 billion in 1963 to 4.8 billion in 1985. At the present time there is a general increase in life expectancy and a population explosion in urban centres throughout the world. In addition, the report shows that the population of poor nations is increasing at twice the rate of that of wealthy nations. This, of course, is the unfortunate aspect of the population boom.

At the beginning of the century nearly half of the world's population was contained in Europe. But today Europe will account for less than one-fifth of the world's urban population. Meanwhile, while the figures show that "cities of historically unprecedented size are emerging" and becoming even more numerous," they also imply that the rate of urban growth in less developed countries, which started with smaller urban populations, has been much faster. "In large regional cities, where the report says. In 1960, however, one-third of all human beings lived in the cities.

Today in History

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Adolf Hitler became commander-in-chief of the German army 33 years ago today—in 1941—after ousting Field Marshal Von Brauchitsch. Hitler took over after Nazi forces suffered setbacks in the Caucasus and the failure of his attack on Moscow had denied his promise of a "pitcantic operation" that would destroy the Soviets. His decision was also planned as a morale boost to the German people on the entry of the United States into the Second World War.

1945—Canada, Britain and the United States agreed on standardization of military arms and fighting methods.

Picton Housing Completion Stalled

Low rental housing development in Picton nears completion. Originally, target date for completion was December 15, but now has been extended to January 15. Applications for occupancy are now being accepted by the OHC.

Ex-Deseronto, Toronto Policeman Appointed Trenton's Deputy-chief

TRENTON — David Edward Saunders, a former detective-sergeant and officer-in-charge of the missing persons bureau of Metro Toronto Police, has been appointed as Trenton's deputy-chief of police as of January 15.

Mr. Saunders first commenced his police career in 1951 and has performed all motorcycle traffic patrolman, and plain-clothes detective work.

He is a graduate of Metro Police College and has furthered his studies of police work through courses with the Institute of Applied Science in Chicago in criminal and civil investigations, Ketring Laboratories, University of Cincinnati, an extension department of the University of Toronto.

While with the Metro Police he lectured at the Metro Police College on homicide investigation and missing persons.

During the last year Mr. Saunders has been chief-of-police of Deseronto. He was asked by Deseronto council to take over and re-organize the police department there.

Mr. Saunders, his wife, Margaret, and two sons, Gordon 13, and Bruce 16, will soon move to Trenton. A daughter Susan, is married and lives in Toronto.

The decision to appoint a deputy-chief was made after consultation with the Ontario Police Commission and on the recommendation of Chief R. J. Rutherford, who pointed out that the Trenton force has been without a senior officer under the chief since Chief Jack Taylor resigned from the force some years ago.

Housing Finish Delayed

PICTON (Staff) — Target date for the completion of Picton's 30 low rental housing units has been advanced to mid-January.

The attractive homes, under construction by the Ontario Housing Corporation, are located on Maple Avenue and Disraeli Street. Two units also have been built on Barker Street.

Applications for occupancy of the housing units are now being accepted by the OHC with rentals geared to income.

Included in the 30 family units are two, three and four bedroom homes.

To be eligible, applicants must reside in Picton and have at least one child. It is also specified that applicants must have a gross family income that does not permit them to pay current market rates.

Separate School Board Purchases 'Home Office'

Separate school officials will have a new home by February.

The Hastings and Prince Edward separate school board has bought a house at 158 George St. for an office and board room.

The house will provide 4,000 square feet of office space and a board room. Only minor renovations are needed and these are under way. Officials of the board expect to move into the new headquarters in February.

The board now occupies an office building at 135 Dundas St. East. Plans to build administrative offices in connection with the proposed Michael Brennan school at the west end of the city had to be scrapped when the provincial austerity program on capital spending for schools vetoed the construction.

PUC Sees No Power Problems As Yule Lighting Peak Nears

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

While most Belleville households are marking Christmas by getting "well lit" — with hydro — city utilities officials don't anticipate any power problems.

Moreover, confirms a spokesman of Ontario Hydro's Eastern Region offices here, new generating resources have come into operation since last Christmas.

As yet, it's uncertain just when the demand for more power will peak.

Traditionally, say Hydro officials, the Monday immediately preceding Christmas Day power demands reach a maximum.

Last year, however, the demand pulled a switch. It occurred between Christmas and New Year's.

Ontario Hydro does not discourage power demands at Christmas, says Belleville utilities commission manager E. L. Burnham.

"Hydro has always been good about this — they use every service they can to supply the load," he said.

Mr. Burnham also quashed any speculation on a recent decision by the commission not to stage its annual Christmas lighting contest this year.

The decision had nothing to do with reducing use of hydro within the city, he said.

Contestants last year were required to signify their interest by clipping an advertisement coupon and forwarding it to the commission.

With several thousand homes likely eligible, this was a hopeful move to reduce the chore set the contest's judges.

However, said Mr. Burnham only "a couple dozen" coupons were received.

Hence, the commission "came to the conclusion" that very few people are interested in winning a prize for their Christmas lighting.

Education Subsidy Approved

The province will pay a subsidy of $437,160 to the Hastings and Prince Edward Separate School Board this year.

The subsidy is the share the province promised to pay last spring to assist school boards faced with rising costs and a limit on increased taxation of one equalized mil.

The subsidy goes only to those boards that kept their 1969 budgets at 115 per cent of their 1968 budgets or less.

The total budget for the separate school system in Prince Edward and Hastings and the district of Nipissing is $2,131,446.

Students Knitted Yule Stockings For Needy Tots

Stockings will hang in every Belleville home Christmas Eve, thanks to the efforts of a group of Harry J. Clarke pupils.

Concerned that some children might not have a bright, decorated stocking to hang out for Santa to fill, the Grade 8 pupils put their hearts and their needles to work on the problem.

The result — 100 gay red and green felt stockings, turned over Thursday to the fire-fighters' underprivileged children's project.

The firefighters are the Santa Claus in this case — they will stuff the stockings before Christmas delivery.

Mrs. Dorothy Armstrong was the teacher who directed the stocking making operation. Someone brought a sewing machine to school to speed up the sewing, but the whimsical decorations were applied with love and hand work.

Tenders to be Called in April For Nursing School Residence

A building housing a residence and classroom facilities for the Edith Cavell Regional School of Nursing in Belleville will go to tender about April 1, 1970.

In making the announcement, John Deacon, chairman of the regional school of nursing, said plans for the building were abruptly halted a year ago because of the federal and provincial governments's austerity program.

"The project now has the green light and authority to tender has now been given," Mr. Deacon said Thursday.

The Edith Cavell school is called a regional school because it is also affiliated with Trenton, Picton and Campbellford hospitals. Student nurses are transported there for some of their clinical training.

"When the building is completed, the school of nursing will enroll 70 students a year," Mr. Deacon said. "It will offer a three year course, subsidized almost entirely by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission.

"The nursing school has always been an important adjunct to Belleville General Hospital," added the chairman. "With the new and improved facilities and the quality of instruction being offered, it will graduate nurses of the highest competence."

Other construction schedules for spring is a new laundry and stores department, to be followed by the administration building.

Agriculturists' Annual Meeting January 14

Belleville Agricultural Society will hold its annual general meeting at city hall Jan. 14 at 8 p.m.

Fair committee reports for this year will be received along with suggestions for next year's Quinte Exhibition program. Fair dates for 1970 have been set for Aug. 18 through Aug. 22.

Scouting Activities

Three lads, Eric Maw, Rick Scout and Paul Moorman of the 11th Belleville troop will be the final local recipients of the coveted Queen's Scout badge.

Having passed their final pathfinder's test, the Scouts just made the time limit. The Queen's Scout award was part of the old program which goes out of existence at the end of the year.

The local association is sponsoring a walkathon scheduled for May 2. The route will probably be from Belleville to Camp Sagonaska near Thomasburg. A number of courses are in various stages of completion. Twenty - nine lads passed their exam of a first aid course which ended last Tuesday, Dec. 9th. Scouter Basil Kirby ran this course in St. Thomas Church Hall for a number of weeks. Fifty-seven scouts have turned out for a gun safety class conducted with the co - operation of the local police department. A ski course at Oak Hill for boys of all ages is planned for every Saturday in January, and a the annual swim course will begin on Jan. 3rd at the local YMCA. Lewis Andrews will be in charge of this program.

The public is invited to attend the annual scout rally on Feb. 28th in the Belleville Armory at 7 p.m. Scouters and firends of scouting will stage the annual get-together at the Masonic Hall on Feb. 10th. A dinner - dance is planned.

The ladies' auxiliary is collecting used postage stamps to help retarded children. Donations may be sent to the Auxiliary in care of Bridge St. United Church.

There is still much outdoor activity in Scouting. The Thunderbird patrol of 11th Belleville "B" company recently went on an overnight hike near Foxboro and sighted many kinds of wildlife including a deer. The Second Belleville Venturer Company held a very successful weekend camp at Sagonaska. The boys ran their own program and showed great resourcefulness in camperaft.

Snowy 4-Inch Blanket

It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas in the Quinte district.

A four-inch snow fall during the 24-hour period from 6 a.m. Thursday to 6 a.m. Friday covered the district with a white Yuletide blanket.

The damp snow turned streets slushy and slippery Thursday evening, but no accidents were reported as motorists exercised pre-Christmas caution.

Snowplows rolled out early this morning to clear county roads and highways. No drifting or blocking of roads was reported in Prince Edward or Hastings counties.

Snow cover was a uniform four inches in depth throughout the Quinte area, but Kingston was reported to have received a higher fall — about six inches.

Seasonal weather, with a few snow flurries, is expected for today and Saturday, with cloudy skies Saturday and temperatures ranging between 20 and 28 degrees.

House Sales Win Winter Fun

Robert Lambert, Superintendent of Charles W. Lambert Ltd., local construction firm, turns over the keys for a snowmobile to Cecil Garrett and family.

Mr. Garrett, representative of Gerald Joyce Realty Ltd., won the snowmobile as a prize in a sales contest which represented the greatest number of new home sales in 1969.

Educational Gadgets Abound

Non-Violent Space Toys Replace Guns and War Games

MONTREAL (CP) — Manufacturers say it's not easy to come up new gimmicks for youngsters to play with, but the current revulsion against violence has been a definite motivation—especially in Montreal.

Parents who are looking for guns and rifles find the toy departments rather bereft this year.

But those who want educational gadgets have a whole new assortment to choose from.

Lou Frank, president of Funcraft Toys, said the transition from war to adventure and discovery toys was initiated by the manufacturers. Now parents are jumping on the bandwagon.

"Space and educational toys, both of which demand quite a lot of intelligence and creative thinking on the part of the child, are the best sellers now," he said.

Just five years ago, war toys were at their popularity peak.

"More than three-quarters of our production then could be called war toys," Mr. Frank said. Free publicity helped sell them like hot cakes.

"They used to line them up on TV shows, pointing out how bad such play things were because they promoted violence. Everytime we were the subject of such criticism, our sales went up, not down.

"However, toys go in cycles and as far as we are concerned, non-violent space has replaced war."

A spokesman for Mattel, a manufacturer based in Toronto, concurred. "We even dropped guns completely and we only had one."

Besides, age levels are being upgraded.

"Because of TV," Mr. Frank said, "youngsters of four are sufficiently advanced for toys we made for six-year-olds a few years ago."

Sheldon Klein, vice-president of Hasbro Industries, said he felt parents supported the abandonment of war toys.

"Parents don't want to buy them. No one now wants a macabre toy."

Stadium to Go

CNE Plans Revision of Facilities

TORONTO (CP) — The board of directors of the Canadian National Exhibition Thursday approved a preliminary plan to improve exhibition facilities, convert them to year-round use and make them more available and attractive to the public.

The plan suggests demolition of eight existing buildings and the gradual elimination of the CNE sports stadium. These would be replaced by two pavilions, a sports development, an aquarium and extension of other buildings.

The CNE sports stadium would be phased out as other facilities become available in Metro Toronto beyond Exhibition Park. Metro Planning Commissioner Wojciech Wronski and Metro Parks Commissioner Thomas Thompson, who headed a task force of CNE and civic officials that prepared the concept, agreed that it was inconceivable...that a major league sport stadium of adequate seating capacity could be located within the CNE grounds.

Also proposed are a rapid transportation system connecting Exhibition Park with downtown Union Station, an internal transportation system changes in area streets, parking garages and transit system terminals.

The plan was drawn up at the request of CNE directors by a group headed by W. M. Wronski, planning commissioner for Metropolitan Toronto.

No cost figures were given for implementation of the plan, expected to be in the final design stage by the end of 1970.

Oakah L. Jones, CNE president, said Exhibition Park may be integrated with Ontario Place, an offshore pavilion in Lake Ontario scheduled to be opened by the province in May, 1971.

The plan proposes that the one-mile, east-west dimension of the CNE grounds be shortened, with development concentrated on a north-south axis to integrate the grounds with Ontario Place and the lakefront.

It suggests that a 24-acre section at the western end of the grounds be turned into a community park for area residents, and that the existing Province of Ontario building be used as a neighborhood community centre.

Arabs Hold Summit Meeting

RABAT (AP) — Arab leaders headed for Morocco today for their first summit meeting in two years. Their goal was a new unified war strategy against Israel.

The meeting, called by President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt, is intended to lead the Arab world out of the present impasse in which they seem neither able to go forward and conquer Israel nor willing to retreat into a peace agreement which they see as a surrender.

The first session will be held Saturday.

The summit conference is the first since the Khartoum meeting of August, 1967.

Las Vegas Takeover

Casino Investors Said Bilked

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new owners of the glittering Dunes Hotel and Casino in Las Vegas defrauded stockholders in the proxy statement it issued offering to buy the posh gambling spot, the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission has charged.

In a five-count complaint filed Thursday in federal district court in New York, the SEC accused Continental Connector Corp., which bought the hotel last May, and M. and R. Investment Co., the Dunes' former owner, of employing "devices, schemes and artifices to defraud" and making "materially false and misleading" financial statements to investors and the public.

The American Stock Exchange halted trading in Continental stock hours before the suit was filed. It closed at $27.38 a share, a drop of 13 cents.

The SEC asked the court for an injunction forbidding Continental, manufacturers of precision electronic connectors based in Woodside, N.Y., to complete its planned purchase of the Golden Nugget, an older downtown Las Vegas Casino, until stockholders are sent accurate financial information.

It also asked the court to order Continental and M. and R. to change the proxy statements used in the Dunes merger to bring them into line with commission rules.

Continental Connector got Nevada state approval last February to buy the Dunes for $59,000,000, and stockholders of both Continental and the Golden Nugget have approved its sale for $20,000,000. Both transactions are in stock.

However, a Golden Nugget stockholder, Frank Simmons, had tried unsuccessfully to have the merger delayed until an SEC investigation was completed.

In the Dunes purchase, the SEC said, the proxy statement Continental filed was misleading because its financial information was based on a "totally inadequate study," of the casino and hotel which was certified as accurate in violation of SEC rules.

Reverse snobbery

In the past Brights fine Canadian wines had no snob appeal. The self-styled neighbourhood "wine expert" would gush over a wine with an imported label, automatically sneer at any wine with a Canadian label.
Lately an interesting new phenomenon has arisen: reverse snobbery. The same "wine expert" has suddenly discovered Brights fine Canadian wines! He will tell you now, readily, that "there is something to be said for them". They may be "pretentious" but they're "very palatable".
Welcome to the Club!

A "cellar" with a newly-developed snob appeal:
President Champagne - Canada's prize Champagne
President Burgundy • A great dry red table wine
President Sauterne • A delicate light white wine
President Sherry • Ideal before lunch or dinner
President Extra Dry • A dry white wine of quality
President Port • A distinguished dessert wine.

For "people who have everything"? A gift of a President wine "cellar" will open their eyes to what they may have been missing.

Americans Told Their Choice End Poverty or Suffer Strife

A presidential commission last week completed an 18-month investigation of violence in the United States. The following story summarizes its findings.

By JOHN S. LANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — Millions of them cache arms. They play, study, worship under guard, fleeing the streets at nightfall. Some cry revolution, others mobilize vigilante-like patrols.

These are Americans witnessing the wane of one of the bloodiest decades of their history.

Such is the picture of America in the final report of the National Commission on the Causes and Prevention of Violence.

The commission warns:

Suffer the violence, Americans, or free all citizens from poverty and social privation.

This is a decade which encompassed the assassination of a president, a senator and a Negro Nobel Prize winner. In its latter half ghetto riots involved more than 2,000,000 persons resulting in 191 deaths.

It is a time wherein [illegible] is every 150 Americans yearly commit violent crimes, a time in which half the country's 60,000,000 households possess at least one firearm.

"Violence," says the commission, "is like a fever in the body politic . . . disfiguring our society . . . making fortresses of portions of our cities . . . dividing our people into armed camps . . . jeopardizing some of our most previous institutions . . . poisoning the spirit of trust and co-operation that is essential."

The commission, which issued its final report a week ago, was created by President Johnson, following the assassination of Senator Robert F. Kennedy, to determine the causes of violence in the United States and to recommend methods of prevention.

Headed by Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower, its members included persons of many political stripes, ranging from conservative Senator Roman Hruska to nonconformist-philosopher Eric Hoffer.

In its 18 months of investigation the commission found that, among modern, stable democracies, the United States is the clear leader in rates of homicide, assault, rape, robbery and among the highest in group violence and assassination.

Commission surveys showed half the women and one-fifth of the country's men fear to walk outdoors at night. Nearly one-third of American householders wish to move because of high rates of crime—and many have done so. Vigilante-like groups have organized.

Fear of crime, the commission reported, is destroying some of the basic human freedoms which any society is supposed to safeguard—freedom of movement, freedom from harm and freedom from fear itself.

In this decade, the national rate of criminal homicide increased 36 per cent, the rate of forcible rape 85 per cent, of aggravated assault 67 per cent and robbery 119 per cent.

Despite these statistics, a citizen is five times more likely to die in an auto accident than to be criminally slain and 100 times more likely to be injured in a home accident than in a serious assault.

Though fear of violence gnaws at the vitals of the country, the commission decided the single most serious problem of the American city today is the poverty and social isolation of minority groups in central cities.

Police protection and community relations are poorest in the high crime slum neighborhoods where they should be best, the commission said.

In an indictment of law enforcement programs, it reported:

"Police lawlessness, degrading prison conditions and other deficiencies in criminal justice damage the goal of an orderly society by making the law seem unworthy of obedience. . . .

"Policemen who systematically ignore many crimes committed in the ghetto, who handle ghetto citizens roughly, who abuse the rights of these citizens, contribute substantially to disaffection with governments and disrespect for law."

With a loss of confidence in the law, with a glorification of guns in American culture and television and movie displays of guns by heroes, the commission found the United States to have the highest gun-to-population ratio in the world.

Lending impetus to the arms buildup, are the exhortations of extremist groups, black and white, whose members are urged to buy firearms and be prepared to use them against "the enemy."

"A new wave of American vigilantism could result from these activities," the commission said.

Negro Buys Rifle 'To Get Me Dudes'

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — "I'm going to get me three or four dudes and I don't care what happens to me."

With that, witnesses said, a Negro man about 30 left a pawnshop where he had bought a rifle for $90 and started shooting at passersby Thursday.

A pedestrian, Richard Vargas, 21, was killed. Another shot pierced a car and shattered both knees of the driver, Jules Jobin, 42.

Then, police said, the man fired at least four shots into a shop window before taking his own life with a shot in the head.

Donald Zobrak, manager of the pawnshop, said the man selected a Mauser rifle, paid for it, and as he left made the remark about "getting three or four dudes."

Victorian Christmas Week Held At Allan Macpherson House

NAPANEE — At least 1,200 people visited the Allan Macpherson house during its Victorian Christmas week. Many of these were school children, but there were many adults, also.

Visiting hours were to have been from two o'clock to five each weekday, and in the evening only on Sunday, the opening day. However, there were many 'phone calls asking permission to visit in the evening during the week. School children sometimes arrived soon after one o'clock.

Mrs. Hutchison, president of the County Historical Society, was largely responsible for planning the Victorian Christmas week.

Each weekday there were ten guides to look after the crowds, explaining and answering questions. Six school children made the old-time Christmas decorations in the basement. In the dining room two women served cider and Christmas cookies.

But it was the big kitchen which created most interest. Here a different crew of women each day made mince-meat and plum puddings and baked bread in the brick oven, heated first by having a fire built in it.

Only the old methods were used in preparing the mince-meat and plum puddings, and both were cooked in iron kettles suspended from cranes in the huge fireplace.

A ham and two fillches of bacon were being smoked in the smoke chamber of the kitchen all during the week, but were not ready for use. These will eventually be filleted and sold, also.

Visiting the House during the week were nine classes from the Prince Charles School, one from the H. H. Langford, four from Centerdale, all four classes from Eastview, four from Sand hurst, and two each from Odessa, Glenburnie, Links Mills and the Lord Strathcona School in Kingston, Friday. 45 came from various classes in Kaladar.

Suggestions have been coming in that this be made an annual event, preferably for two weeks.

Proceeds from the project will be used to finance last-minute renovation of the oven and smoke chamber and other things needed.

Quinte Gem and Mineral Club Holds Annual Christmas Party

The Quinte Gem and Mineral Club held its annual Christmas party on Wednesday, December 18. President Bob Calnan chaired the meeting for the event.

The Christmas tree was donated and decorated by Max and Velma Wallbridge with assistance from some of the children. The tree was laden with an abundance of gift wrapped mineral specimens that each member deposited as he entered the room.

When the presents were later opened, there was excitement from everyone as a good selection of specimens from the local calcites and pyrites to the polished geodes and some well preserved fossil specimens had been put under the tree. Some films were shown by Mac Rowell.

Both contests proved to be exciting and the first one kept everyone thinking as to what mineral word they could make from the jumbled letters before their eyes. Dick Brown was the most successful participant in the contest.

The mineral identification contest presented by Gordon Alyea was difficult and, although the samples were of good size, many members had difficulty in identifying more than half of them. The tin ore

Cassiterite seemed to stump almost everyone.

About 40 members were at the meeting. Others were attending night classes at Marmora during the same week and chose not to miss any of the six mineralogical classes that were being given by the Ontario Department of Mines.

The adult winners of the evening were Bill Broderick, Jean Reid, Rose Irwin and the child winners were Ken Shaw, Rob Johnston, Timothy May, Mark Powell, Christine Montgomery and Elizabeth Rose.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Lew Andrews and Mrs. Murray May.

The show and tell period included specimens of Meteorites and Exhibits shown by Mr. Broderick. Many specimens were shown by Dick Brown from the California area.

Afterwards, Dick Brown handed all those who had assisted.

Outlook Grim For the Elderly

PARIS (CP) — Of France's 8,000,000 aged persons in pensions, an estimated 2,400,000 try to get by on a meagre 4,000 francs—only $325—a year.

And according to a white paper by Marie-Madeleine Dienesch, minister without portfolio in charge of social action and readjustment, the outlook is grim.

In the next 10 years, the number of person over the age of 65 will increase by 19 per cent and those past 75 by 34 per cent.

"The social problem of the aged is as serious as that of the young," she says, "but it's not evident to the uninitiated, consequently, doesn't get as much publicity. The old are forgotten."

It's difficult to augment resources for this poverty group because of the low popular support compared with other European countries.

Then there are the usual—and they're somewhat accentuated here — hardships of forms to fill, procedures to administrative red tape.

Mlle. Dienesch estimates that social action should not take the form of material aid, but should seek to "improve living conditions, fight against the desert of solitude that stretches before many of the aged who need reasons to live."

Many old people—the non-invalids—should also have some sort of partial employment, something to do to earn some money and have a sense of still being useful.

"Old age is a stage in life like others," says Mlle. Dienesch. "All society should be aware of that."

"We must end this segregation between generations and make a grandparent-grandchild solidarity, bearing in mind that some day we may have needs, too. . . ."

What's also important is to reduce the spective of old peoples' institutions by assisting people capable of earning a living independently that they can stay at home.

But there must also be better institutions to house old people, increased research into old age and its diseases and more centres of information to help old people solve their daily problems.

Local Senior Citizens Entertained

On behalf of the club, the president Mrs. Doyle presented a plaque to Mrs. Vickers who was selected as the most worthy member of the club during the past year.

The door prize was won by Mr. J. Mason and the evening concluded with the president wishing everyone the compliments of the season.

Friendly Neighbors' Club Of Rylstone Disbands

RYLSTONE — Another era of history at Rylstone, has passed into oblivion, by the closing of the Friendly Neighbors' Club.

Originally a church group, it was first known as the Missionary Society of Rylstone Presbyterian Church. With the advent of Church Union in 1925, Rylstone United became a United Church and the women's group was later known as the Women's Association in 1938.

This was again changed in the 1960s to United Church Women. When the church was closed in 1968, the women formed a non-denominational group, called Friendly Neighbors' Club and included Rylstone women from different churches. Their only income was from silver collections at the meetings and this was used to send cards and gifts to neighbors in hospital and also for home calls and cards and gifts to new babies and community brides.

The main reason for ending the association was lack of members, and members willing to accept office.

Mrs. Robert Spencer entertained the Friendly Neighbors' Club at her home on Wednesday. Nine were present.

Mrs. Clarence Thomson, president was in charge of the devotions, based on the Christmas theme.

The business of disbanding was discussed and voted on with the majority feeling it was better to disband.

To clear out existing funds, it was decided to make donations to Campbellford Memorial Hospital, Merrywvale School for Retarded Children in Campbellford and the Sunday school of a local church.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Clarence Thomson for her leadership during the past year and to Mrs. John Spencer for her assistance as secretary-treasurer. Mrs. Eli Jones is the only one who was a continuous member since the days of the Missionary Society, except for a few years when she lived away from the community.

Small gifts for senior citizens were distributed for delivery to the recipients.

Refreshments were served by the hostess.

PARENTS WITHOUT PARTNERS

A Discussion Group was held on Wednesday night, December 10, at the home of Selma McCulloch. The topic for discussion was 'The Value of PWP to our Lives. There was a full attendance. The discussion was lead by Muriel Wilson. She asked each member to give their opinion of the topic. The general feeling was that we are cut off from all activities by being without a partner, more or less made to feel that we are outcasts of married groups.

By being a single parent we do not have anything in common with old friends and jealousy is noticeable when we do meet. Parent children activities have helped the children to re-adjust, by girls coming in contact with a father image and the boys have a mother image. All members mentioned they enjoyed the adult conversation, a lot of it being educational. They, also noted that being with the children all day they felt as if life just revolved around the home and by getting out, with the group they understand and enjoy their children more.

The meeting concluded with the hostess serving lunch.

Ann Landers

Hearing Problem Should Be Revealed

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am 28, gainfully employed, fairly attractive, and single — but not by choice. I should tell you, Ann, I have a slight hearing problem but not many people are aware of it. I have a hi and am good at lip reading. The man I am going with at present is attractive, intelligent, and soft spoken. That's my problem. He is too soft spoken. He has perfected the executive whisper and I often lose part of what he says. Last night at dinner I thought I heard him ask me to marry him, but I'm not sure. I was too stunned to ask him to repeat. Now, of course, I wish I had.

ANN LANDERS

What should I do about this embarrassing situation? — PLEASE PLAY IT AGAIN, SAM.

DEAR FRIEND: If Mr. Executive Whisper wants you to be his wife, he'll ask again — but by all means tell him about your problem. And get your hearing checked, Chicken. Lord knows what else you're missing.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Several months ago I married a divorced man who had custody of his three children. (They are all under nine years of age.) Ted's ex-wife has since remarried. She hasn't missed a visiting day in two years. The kids are always thrilled to see her. These youngsters are badly spoiled and I can't handle them. I don't feel about them as a mother should. Even though I'm a great actress, I'm afraid one day I will betray myself and the truth will be known.

How can I suggest to Ted that he let his ex-wife have the children? They seem very fond of her new husband and he seems to enjoy them tremendously. When Ted and I discussed marriage he asked if I could love and care for his children. I said yes, but I didn't know what I was getting into. Hurry your advice, Ann. The situation grows more tense every day. — THE SUBSTITUTE.

* * *

DEAR SUB: The prime consideration should be the welfare of the children. Judging from your letter, they would probably be better off with their mother and stepfather. If my arithmetic is correct, you are facing at least a dozen years of unwilling servitude. Children know when they are not loved. A stepmother who feels as you do cannot conceal it, no matter how good an actress she is. Level with your husband and let's hope he understands.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I do not agree with your advice to "The Lady Next Door." What on earth is a friend for if not to confide in? Every woman needs a shoulder to cry on — someone with whom she can discuss intimate problems. I concede that a person should use discretion and not blab to just anybody. But a close friend can be a godsend when a woman is having trouble with her husband and needs to tell someone.

Now and then you change your advice. I hope you will do so this time. — PRO-FRIENDSHIP.

DEAR PRO: Too many women are unable to distinguish between a friend and an acquaintance. I agree, a friend can be supportive in time of trouble, but when it comes to unloading marital problems, I draw the line. The best person with whom to discuss marital problems is the person with whom you are having the problem. The second best candidate is a counselor, clergyman or physician — someone who can be professional, objective and silent.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "I can't stand the mess little Becky makes when she tries to feed herself, so I don't let her have a spoon. There would be food all over the floor before she was through."

Mother: "I'll put these newspapers under the high chair so Becky can feed herself. She's as eager to try and does pretty well with a spoon and with lots of finger food."

A child learns by doing and even a 1-year-old will be amazingly capable of feeding herself part of the meal if you're there to lend a helping hand when it's needed.

Anxiety Tends to Create Dumb Look

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: I cannot keep a straight face. What I mean to say is I have a dumb look on my face when I'm doing something, etc. When I talk I don't have a natural expression and some words and letters I can't make come out the way I want them to. What can I do?

I'd also like to know how I can improve my personality. I want to know how to think of clever things to say and just be pleasant and be able to fool around and have fun. — Dumb Look

Dear Dumb: Diagnosis: An overdose of anxiety. You are far too worried about the impression you are making to be thinking about what you are saying. Hence the dumb look.

Do you feel people look at you critically? On the contrary People are kind; and if you only knew it, some of the ones who look the cleverest are mixed composed are themselves quaking in their boots.

In the mail is going my leaflet, "Don't be Shy", which will give you some ways of getting on the ball with people. (This leaflet is available to readers for 10 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Dear Doris: A few days ago I wrote you asking for help concerning my teen-age daughter who I thought was pregnant.

I have found out different now; this is not true, thank heavens. Thought I would let you know, and thanks for your reply to my letter. — Ever Grateful.

Dear Mrs. E. G.: What a relief!

Perhaps having looked this fear in the face will cause your daughter to face her own behavior more realistically and more maturely. If so, the experience won't have been all bad.

* * *

Dear Doris: Since your letter there seems have gone by. Your advice was not only sound, but true. Some people have nothing within themselves to occupy their minds so find a great need for gossip, especially elderly, retired pensioners in a place like this.

I have been following your advice practically to the letter and have so far been able to steer a middle course by being pleasant to all and trying to do some errand, but not intruding, nor allowing myself to be intruded on.

I shall certainly bear in mind what you said regarding very personal affairs (and that I can turn aside imperitent questions). But one does become annoyed at times. — No Privacy

Dear Mrs. P.: Good for you. It is not easy to change the habits of years; but we do have to keep on making friends all our lives. Thank you for your second letter.

* * *

Please make letters as brief as possible — not more than two pages. And remember that stamped envelope.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

MELROSE W. I.

On December 10 the Melrose Women's Institute held its annual Christmas party at the Gilead Community Centre with 27 members and one guest, Mrs. A. Gardiner, Bellerille, present.

The season's decorations about the hall and the colorful table arrangement made an attractive setting for the evening meal served by the Gilead women.

Following the dinner, the chairman of the entertainment committee, Mrs. Betty Summers, announced that three games of bingo would be played. Prize winners were Ruth English, Genevieve McLaren and Jean Poe.

The W.I. president and secretary took their places at the piano and a business period began with the financial report which showed a balance on hand amounting to $474.57. It was announced that Mrs. G. McLaren and Mrs. E. Badgley would lead the girls' club for the spring project, "Focus on Fitness".

The entertainment program continued with a sacred solo by Mrs. Betty Gardiner with her mother as accompanist.

The next number was a fashion show. First lady, Val Badgley was the "cleaner model" when almost everything in the line of cleaning utensils was displayed. Ruth Goeddinger gave an interesting commentary.

Mrs. Gardiner led in community singing while the group prepared for the fashion show. Members took part in contests and games.

The president thanked all for taking part and special thanks were extended to the program committee for a fun-filled evening.

Mrs. Gardiner concluded with a solo and the exchange of gifts brought an enjoyable evening to a close.

Kitchen Tested Recipes

Unbaked Cookie-confections

By MARY MOORE

LETTER: . . . I am enclosing a favorite of my family and friends — which I reserve for Christmas and Trounseau Teas. I am not sure where the recipe did originate — but stores very well and easy to make. Thanks so much for such a wonderful column. — M. M. K.

ANSWER: My secretary Betty has three children. That statistic and your note "easy to make" sparked me to hand her your recipe for Christmas Balls. She made them while her dog ate clothing and waiting for crumbs and right now we are nibbling them with a cup of tea.

One 6-oz. pkge. (1 cup) semi-sweet chocolate morsels

Sugar — preferably red and green tinted

In top of double boiler over hot (not boiling) water melt chocolate morsels. Remove from water. Stir in sugar and corn syrup. Blend in water. Combine wafer crumbs and nuts and add them and extract to chocolate mixture mixing well. Between palms shape into 1" balls. Roll in sugar — red, green and some white. Let ripen at least 24 hrs. in tightly covered container.

(NOTE: Mrs. M.M.K. says these Christmas Balls will keep for three or four weeks in tightly covered container — "in fact will improve flavor")

QUESTION: My family loves baked custard. I have a gallon of maple syrup and would like to use it in them . . . L. N.

Complaints Will Cost Nothing

Assessment Offices Will Have Toll-free Telephones

TORONTO (CP) — Property owners will be able to register complaints by toll-free long-distance telephone when Ontario assumes responsibility for assessments Jan. 1 and begins the five-year process of reassessing all property at true market value.

Special telephone connections are being made by the department of municipal affairs to the 32 regional assessment offices now being established in seven areas of the province.

The government hopes that higher property values reflected in the reassessment will be matched by similar decreases in the municipal tax rate, so that the actual amount of money paid out will be the same. But it is aware there will be distress when owners first see statements showing that property values on which taxes are set have increased from three to five times.

Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough said in a statement Thursday that "reassessment at market value means some property owners will find their tax bills will increase, some will decrease and some will remain unchanged."

He said the increases should occur only where property has been taxed at an unfairly low rate in the past.

Ontario decided to take over the assessment function from municipalities as part of its long-range plan for reform of the provincial taxation system.

Reassessment at market value is designed to achieve uniformity of valuations as a step in achieving property taxation equity.

Market-value assessment also will give the province an equitable basis on which to make its unconditional grants to municipalities.

Reassessment in most of the province will begin in 1971. The province will first complete those reassessments already begun by municipalities.

Mr. McKeough said about 2,000 assessors and assessment staff will be absorbed by the province Jan. 2. He has promised that none will lose a job or be paid less than earnings from municipalities.

The seven assessment district offices are to be located in Belleville, Bramalea, Brantford, London, Metropolitan Toronto, Perth and Sudbury.

Regional offices, which will accept long-distance phone calls, will be in Brantford, Cayuga, Galt, Perth, Hamilton, Goelph, Niagara Falls, St. Catharines, Simcoe, Welland, Chatham, Goderich, London, Owen Sound, Sarnia, Walkerton, Windsor, Stratford, Barrie, Bracebridge, Brampton, Newmarket, Orkville, Oshawa, Cobourg, Kingston, Lindsay, Peterborough, Trenton, Brockville, Cornwall, L'Original, Ottawa, Pembroke, Dryden, Kapuskasing, Kenora, Kirkland Lake, Little Current, North Bay, Parry Sound, Sault Ste. Marie, Sudbury, Sundridge, Thunder Bay and Timmins.

Judgment Reserved

Dead Man Said Not 'A Person'

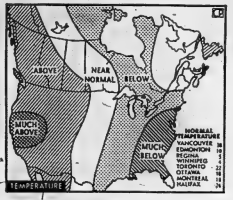
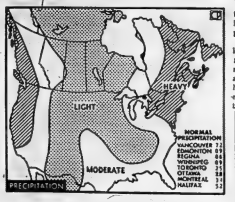
LONDON, Ont. (CP) — A lawyer argued in provincial court Thursday that because his client may have run over a man who was already dead the victim was not a person at the time of the accident and therefore his client could not be charged with leaving the scene.



Stuart Register made his submission before Provincial Judge C. G. Marshman at the conclusion of the trial of Herman Garnet Henry, 31, of Windsor, Ont., who is charged with criminal negligence and leaving the scene of an accident.



Henry pleaded not guilty to the charges which stated his car passed over Theodore Arnold French, 41, of Muncey last June 22 on a sideroad near his home.

Under a section of the Criminal Code those involved in the accident are referred to as "persons." Mr. Brister argued, and because the victim might have been dead before being struck he in reality was not a person.

Dr. Douglas Mills, a pathologist, testified at the trial that French's body was badly mutilated but that it was "conceivable" he had been dead before he suffered the injuries found in the post-mortem examination.

Judge Marshman reserved his decision to Jan. 30.

White Christmas?

The prospects for a white Christmas for most parts of Canada look good, with moderate to heavy precipitation during the next 30 days. According to the 30-day outlook of the United States weather bureau, only Saskatchewan, Manitoba and northwestern Ontario will have light precipitation. Temperatures will be above normal for much of western Canada and Newfoundland, below normal in Ontario and near normal elsewhere. The outlook is not a specific forecast and changes may occur.

Black Christmas Plan Outlined for Negroes

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The poster shows a black man behind bars and says: "Don't give your family this for Christmas."

Another says: "Stop stealing to celebrate Christmas."

More than 5,000 of the posters are being distributed in the Negro community by a civil rights group called ACTION.

The posters are part of ACTION's "Black Christmas Plan" which also urges Negroes to stay out of debt by avoiding purchases they cannot afford.

"Many good people have gotten addicted to this commercialized Christmas," an ACTION pamphlet says.

"Some are willing to take all kinds of senseless chances to gain materialistically. When a man caught in a robbery now is asked the motives for his act, his reply in most cases is 'to get enough money to buy Christmas toys and new clothing for my family,' or 'to celebrate Christmas.'"

"I'm not against Christmas," said ACTION leader Percy Green, 34, "but human values should take precedence over material values . . . We're saying to the black man 'don't put your life on the line for the sake of one day. It's better to sacrifice it and spend the day at home with the kids. Just be thankful for being with them.'"

U.S. Senate and House Agree on Income Tax Relief Measures

WASHINGTON (AP) — A conference of members of the Senate and House of Representatives reached tentative agreement early today on tax relief measures that would increase the personal income tax exemption to $750 from $600.

Conference chairman Representative Wilbur D. Mills said there was no doubt action would be completed today.

It was understood the relief package decided on as the compromise between the widely differing House and Senate versions provided:

—An increase in the exemption to $650 starting next July. This would be coupled with a $1,100 low income allowance to help poor families and an increase in the standard deduction from the present 10 per cent with a $1,000 ceiling to 13 per cent with a $1,400 ceiling.

—A $650 personal exemption for all of 1971, with a $1,050 low-income allowance, and a standard deduction of 14 per cent and a $1,700 ceiling.

—For 1972 and thereafter, a $750 personal exemption, with a $1,050 low income allowance and a standard deduction of 15 per cent with a $2,000 ceiling.

vidual which that measure also

The conferees also were reported to have agreed to accept the across-the-board 15-per-cent increase in social security benefits of the Senate bill.

But they did not go along with the $100 minimum monthly payment instead of $55 for an individual.

President Nixon had objected to the 15-per-cent boost. But the House voted for it unanimously Monday in a separate bill.

Real Estate Boards Probed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice department has launched an investigation to determine if U.S. real estate boards are conspiring to fix commission rates on property sales.

Attorney-General John N. Mitchell announced the investigation Thursday and said the justice department is checking to determine if recent commission rate increases in various parts of the United States violate anti-trust laws.

Canairelief Continues Biafran Night Flights

TORONTO (CP) — Canairelief will continue to make regular nightly flights into Biafra despite Wednesday night's bombing of one of its planes, the organization's executive secretary said Thursday.

Michael Barkley said in a statement it "is essential to keep up a regular flow of goods and medicine" to Biafra.

He expressed his sorrow at the deaths of five Biafran relief workers who were unloading the plane at Uli airstrip in Biafra.

But Mr. Barkley said morale at Sao Tome, where the flights originate, is good. The crew of the bombed plane returned safely to Sao Tome Wednesday night.

Canairelief averages four flights a night into Biafra, carrying about 80 tons of food and medicine.

Death Penalty Ends in Britain

LONDON (AP) — The death penalty for murder in Britain was abolished Thursday after four tense days of arguments in both houses of Parliament.

The House of Lords—which delayed this decision for 20 years—dealt the knockout to the hangman.

Approval of a Labor government motion to abolish the gallows came as an anticlimax, without a formal vote, after a delaying amendment failed. The amendment, which would have extended abolition of hanging only to 1973, was defeated 220 to 174.

Cheering broke out in the chamber, jammed with a crowd that included 18 bishops. Prominent members of the House of Commons looked on. The Commons voted to abolish capital punishment Tuesday night, 343 to 185.

As two days of debate neared a climax in the House of Lords, peers who favored hanging appeared to be gaining ground, perhaps enough to pass a delaying amendment.

Then Lord Gardiner, lord chancellor of the Labor government, began a final speech.

"I think," he said, "that human begins who are not infallible ought not to choose a form of punishment which is irreparable. I don't think it right to employ other people to do a thing which you would in no circumstances do yourself."

The controversy cut across party lines. Labor and Conservative leaders called the question a matter of conscience. Voting in both chambers was free, without party pressure from the whips.

The lobby for the return of the hangman to discourage growing violence in a country where even police do not carry guns threatened in both houses to make the question an issue in the general elections which must come before May, 1971.

The Labor government, which Lord Shackleton said was "overwhelmingly abolitionist in outlook," wanted to avoid mixing the issue with the election. Public opinion polls have shown a swing up to 85 per cent in favor of the return of the hangman.

Plot to Restore Sukarno Foiled

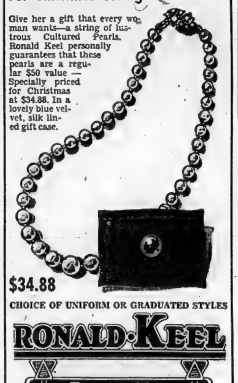
JAKARTA (Reuters) — The Indonesian army has smashed a plot of senior officers wishing to restore deposed President Sukarno to power, army sources said today.



The officers ranged from colonels to major-generals who had attempted to spread Sukarno's influence within the army, the sources said.

The plotters have been rounded up, they added. One of them was named as Maj.-Gen. Mursid, former Indonesian ambassador to the Philippines and onetime deputy army chief.

Mursid was arrested last week for allegedly having secret links with Sukarno, the sources said.

Ideal Venders Holds First Staff Party

DESERONTO — Ideal Venders held its first staff party recently in the hall of Branch 280 of the Royal Canadian Legion. Ideal Venders manufactures vending machines for soft drinks and is the Deseronto division of the Eddy Match Company, Ltd.

The event took the form of a dinner-dance party, including a cocktail hour, a hot turkey dinner prepared and served by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Branch, after-dinner speeches, and dancing to the music of the Picton Playboys Band.

Following the dinner, an actual "office" prize was presented to the general manager, Charles Gray, by his employees. It was the door of his office on which they had installed an engraved plate with his name and specifying his office in the company. In his brief speech Mr. Gray thanked the employees for their gift and gave a short history of the growth of the division. He then introduced Mr. Alex Lawrance, vice president of the Eddy Match Co., Ltd., who had come from head office in Toronto for the occasion. Mr. Lawrason also spoke of the changes which had taken place, praising the employees for their work and paying tribute to Mr. Gray.

At least 175 people attended, including staff members and their wives or husbands, and unmarried employees with their escorts.

At the close of the evening the door prize, a Red Christmas table centre, was presented to Walter Kramer and prizes for said dances to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Creighton, John McCaugherty, Mrs. Wilma Tinney, Mr. and Mrs. La Rue Burley, and Mr. and Mrs. James Stuart.

Midway through the dance women of the staff served snacks to the dancers. Members of the committee responsible for arrangements for this event were: Clarence Ziegman, Wayne Coulter, John De Long, Douglas Stevens, Gail McFarlane, Mrs. Wilma Tinney, Mrs. Joyce Van Vlack, and Brian Marsay.

PICTORIAL HISTORY

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — The New Brunswick Museum is searching for photographs to document the province's history, says museum director Robert Hulman. He said in the last 100 years, photography has been used to document everything from major events to ordinary daily life. He said the museum's first request for pictures brought an excellent response, and among pictures received were harbor scenes, rivers, trails and exhibitions, wagons, bridges and street scenes.

Six-foot-four-inch Roman Gabriel, voted the National Football League's Most Valuable Player for 1969, does one of his favorite warming-up exercises, a slow-motion sit-up, at the Los Angeles Rams' training field in Long Beach, Calif. Gabriel, in his eighth year as an NFL quarterback, received 21 of 48 first place votes. (AP Wirephoto)

Rams, Cowboys Bask in All-star Glory

NEW YORK (AP) — Los Angeles Rams and Dallas Cowboys dominate the National Football League all-star teams selected for The Associated Press by a 48-man panel of sports writers and sportscasters from the 11 league cities.

The voting was so close for the two wide receiver posts—with Garry Collins of Cleveland just a whisker ahead of Dan Abramowicz of New Orleans and Roy Jefferson of Pittsburgh, who tied for second—that all three were included on the 12-man offensive unit.

Roman Gabriel, the quarterback who sparked the Rams to 11 straight victories before they were upended by Minnesota, heads the Los Angeles contingent. Tackle Bob Brown is the other Ram on the offensive unit.

Deacon Jones at end, Merlin Olsen at tackle and Eddie Meador at safety round out the five-man Ram contingent on the first teams.

Dallas also put five on the first teams with rookie Calvin Hill at running back, Ralph Neely at tackle and John Niland at guard on offence and Bob Lilly at tackle and Chuck Howley at corner linebacker on defence.

Gabriel heads up a backfield that includes Hill, the flashy rookie from Yale, and Gale Sayers of Chicago Bears as his running backs. Jerry Smith of Washington is the tight end. Collins got 17 votes and Jefferson and Abramowicz each 16 for wide receiver.

The interior offensive line is manned by Neely and Brown at tackle, Niland and the veteran Gene Hickerson of Cleveland at guard and Mick Tingelhoff of Minnesota at centre.

The defensive unit has nine repeaters from the 1968 team.

The front four is the same with Carl Eller of Minnesota and Deacon Jones of Los Angeles at end and Merlin Olsen of the Rams and Bob Lilly of the Cowboys at tackle.

Once again it is Dick Butkus of Chicago Bears as the middle linebacker with Howley at one corner and Dave Robinson of Green Bay at the other.

Lem Barney of Detroit repeats at corner back. He is joined by Herb Adderley of Green Bay. The safeties are Eddie Meador of Los Angeles and Larry Wilson of St. Louis Cardinals.

All expect Robinson and Adderley are repeaters.

Overdue Nats Beat Soviets at Own Game

WINNIPEG (CP) — "We challenged them and beat them at their own game," said assistant coach Gary Aldcorn of Canada's national hockey team after a long-overdue 4-3 win over Russia Thursday night.

Beating the Russians at their own game, said Aldcorn, was to lay back, stay with positional play, let the Soviets make the first move and make a mistake or two.

"I know the crowd doesn't like such strategy and the fans were getting on us a bit early in the game. . . .

"Staying close to them with those early goals was something else in our favor and getting the lead in the second and third periods was even better."

What Aldcorn was saying was the Canadians skated with the Russians from the start to the end, with the exception of a brief time in the second period when the Russians got two goals. Period scores were 1-1 and 3-3.

It was a sweet victory for Canada after going almost three years without beating the Russians. The last time Canada came out on top was Jan. 10, 1967, in Toronto just after the Nationals had won the invitational tournament in Winnipeg.

In the first of an eight-game Canadian exhibition tour Wednesday night, the Russians defeated Canada 5-3.

Thursday night's contest was more of a heavy - hitting affair with both sides throwing stiff body checks.

But the difference in Canada's win was the team's ability to nullify the potent Russian power play.

The Soviets didn't get one power-play goal Thursday while in the opener they got three.

Bob Murdock, a defenceman who calls Kirkland Lake, Ont., his home, got the winning goal in the third period with Bill Heinl, Steve King and another defenceman, Tery O'Malley, getting the others.

Alexander Maltsev, with his second in two games, Yuri Ljapkin and Anatoli Firsov scored for Russia. Firsov, one of the veterans on the Soviet team, sat out the opening game.

Mum on Strategy

WINNIPEG (CP) — The stand Canada will take on rules concerning use of professionals in the 1970 world hockey tournament may not be known until it is presented to the International Ice Hockey Federation next month.

"We don't want to declare our hand until we sit down at the table," Douglas Fisher of Toronto, a governor of Hockey Canada, said Thursday night.

He was referring to meetings being held by Hockey Canada officials, government representatives and officers of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Hockey Canada operates Canada's national team which Thursday night defeated Russia 4-3 in an exhibition game here.

An initial meeting is to be held possibly next week, Fisher said.

He said the meetings are for informal discussions on the matter of professionals and Olympic eligibility which might affect amateur teams that play against pros.

The IIHF approved at a meeting in Switzerland this year a regulation which would allow any country in the world tournament the use of nine professionals.

Buck Houle, general manager of Canada's national team, says his interpretation of the rule is that Canada can use nine professionals as long as they players. He classifies those players who have just been called up from minor leagues for one or two games on an emergency basis as non-NHL players.

But others interpret the rule to mean that only players who have not played in the NHL during the 1969-70 season can be picked up by the Nationals.

Canadian coach Jack McLeod savored the victory and offered a little analysis of the game.

"I thought we skated better than Wednesday," he said. "We killed penalties better too, which is always a big thing if you can choke off their power play."

Coach Anatoli Tarasov didn't attend the post-game news conference but second-in-command, Arkady Chernyshev, showed up.

He said the Russians will continue to shuffle their lineup and make use of all players brought along on the trip.

The two teams meet again in Vancouver Saturday and in Victoria Sunday.

'No Hard Feelings'

Flyers Give Poile Axe

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Norman R. (Bud) Poile has been dismissed as general manager of Philadelphia Flyers in the National Hockey League.

The announcement was made Thursday night by Ed Snider, chairman of the board of the club.

Snider said the action came after a series of meetings with club executives and was felt to be "in the best interests of the Flyers organization."

"There are no hard feelings involved," Snider said. "I wish Bud the best of success wherever he goes."

Poile, 45, was general manager of the Flyers since the club began in 1966. He came to Philadelphia from the old San Francisco Seals of the Western Hockey League.

Flyers' assistant general manager, Keith Allen, will handle the duties of the general manager's job until a decision is made on the successor.

Allen, 46, moved up to assistant general manager prior to this season after coaching the Flyers in the team's first two years in the National Hockey League.

There was no immediate decision on replacements at the Flyers' top farm club in the American Hockey League, the Quebec Aces, where Poile held positions as general manager and governor.

Snider said the remainder of Poile's contract which runs until the end of next season will be honored in full.

Under Poile's management, the Flyers were West Division champions in their first season, but dropped to third spot last season. After 27 games this season, they are in fourth place, two points behind Pittsburgh Penguins.

The Fort William, Ont., native started his NHL career as a centre for Toronto Maple Leafs in the 1942-43 season. He was traded to Chicago Black Hawks in the 1947-48 season and three more quick deals saw him play briefly with Detroit Red Wings, New York Rangers and Boston Bruins.

He scored 107 goals and 122 assists in his six NHL seasons before spending another four seasons in the minors.

Next he became coach of Edmonton Flyers in the Western Hockey League and then moved to San Francisco where he was both coach and general manager in the four years prior to the NHL expansion.

Under his leadership, the Seals won the WHL title in 1963-64 and 1964-65.

Hornets Gave Mo-Hawks Night to Remember

By MAURICE SWITZER
Sports Editor

Exactly 364 nights ago, Belleville Mo-Hawks learned what Allan Cup champions are made of.

It was Friday night, Dec. 20, and Galt Hornets were providing the opposition for Senior Hockey Night in Belleville.

To the amazement of 4508 spectators — not to mention coach Davey Jones — the Mo-Hawks found themselves bestring the league - leading Hornets 4-3 with 10 seconds to go in the game.

One second later, after losing the puck following a face-off in their own end, the Mo-Hawks found themselves tied 4-4 with the league - leading Hornets with nine seconds to go in the game.

About four minutes later, the Mo-Hawks found themselves beaten 5-4 in overtime by the league-leading Hornets with nothing left to go in the game.

Tonight, a year and an Allan Cup later, the Hornets are in Belleville for another 9 o'

Oshawa Tests Twice

The same team will test the mettle of both Quinte District entries in the Eastern Ontario Junior B league this weekend.

Tonight the potent Oshawa Crushmen provide new Trenton Golden Hawk coach Roger Drake with an impressive first assignment in Trenton's Community Gardens.

Saturday night, Floyd Crawford takes his Ellis Juniors into Oshawa for an attempt to get some breathing room in the six - team league's fourth and final playoff position.

The second - place Crushmen have lost only three times in 13 outings to date, and boast three players — Jim Robson (13-13-26), Wayne Blanchard (12-14-26), and Ron Webb (14-7-21) — in the league's top ten scorers.

Tonight's 8.30 Trenton game is a "must" for the Hawks, who are stuck in the league basement with seven points after a strong season start.

Tomorrow night's Belleville trip to the Shark City is equally vital for the young Ellis club, who dropped a 7-6 home decision last Sunday to Trenton after three wins in a row boosted them from last to fourth place.

The Belleville B's have a couple of point producers to brag about, themselves, Terry Meagher (10-16-26) and John McConnell (10-14-24) are within striking distance of Kingston's Colin Loudon's 29-point leagueleading total.

This is an example of what can happen when the gymnastic club puts on an acrobatic display. Rolls, dives, balancing routines and mid air flips were all part of the action as these Grade 7 boys, students of St. Michael's Academy, showed an assembly of their fellow-students what precision timing can mean.

Hawks Boast Best Defensive Record

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

When the team with the best goals-against record meets the second-poorest scoring squad, the defensive masters should hold the edge—such as when Chicago Black Hawks meet Oakland Seals tonight.

The Black Hawks have only 68 goals against them in 28 National Hockey League games, tops in both divisions, while the Seals have scored only 81. Only Los Angeles Kings, with 57, have scored fewer goals.

The Seals, however have the advantage of home ice in the night's only scheduled game.

In one game Thursday night, Boston Bruins and St. Louis Blues battled to a 3-3 tie.

The Black Hawks, fifth in the East Division, also have had their troubles scoring goals this season. Their total of 76 is lowest in the East and rates above only the four low clubs in the West Division.

The absence of scoring ace Bobby Hull for the first 11 games and the loss of Kenny Wharram due to a heart ailment could account for much of the Hawks loss of goal-gitting power.

But their defensive tactics, highlighted by the goaltending of Tord Esposito has taken up the slack to keep Chicago close to fourth spot, currently held by Detroit Red Wings.

Esposito held the best goals-against average in the league for a stretch but has since dropped behind Roger Crozier of Detroit and Jacques Plante of St. Louis.

However, the Hawks stimulate still is shutout leader with four, two of which came against the Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens.

Chicago's success at killing penalties has also contributed to their goals-against record. The Hawks went through a stretch of 20 games without allowing a power-play goal until Boston scored with a man advantage in a game two weeks ago. The Black Hawks 10 goals allowed on power plays is still tops in the league with the East-Division-leading New York Rangers second on 14 goals against.

Esposito's big brother Phil, last season's scoring champion, failed to pick up a point Thursday night for the Bruins and remains in a four-way tie 10 points back of the leaders.

Boston's Bobby Orr and Phil Goyette of the Blues each picked up an assist to stay tied for the lead on 42 points each.

Goyette's assist came on a goal by Frank St. Marseille that tied the game at 6:53 of the third period.

The Bruins took a 2-0 lead in the first period on goals by Jim Lorentz and Fred Stanfield, but Red Berenson and Ab McDonald each scored their 16th goal of the season in the second period to put the Blues back in contention.

Lorentz scored his second of the night just 19 seconds before St. Marseille's tying effort.

NHL Leaders

Bobby Orr and Phil Goyette each earned an assist Thursday night to remain tied for the National Hockey League scoring lead with 42 points each.

Orr, Boston Bruins defenceman, has eight goals and 34 assists while the St. Louis Blues centre has 15 goals and 27 assists after their teams' tied 3-3 in the only game Thursday.

No Long Delay for Green Case

OTTAWA (CP) — Judge Livio Sherwood refused Thursday to grant a three-week court remand for Ted Green and Wayne Maki, charged with assault after a stick-swinging duel in a National Hockey League exhibition game here Sept. 21 between Boston Bruins and St. Louis Blues.

Neither Green, of Boston, recovering from head injuries at Winnipeg, nor Maki, now with Buffalo Bisons of the American Hockey League, appeared in court.

Counsel for the players sought a three-week remand. Judge Sherwood said he could not adjourn the case more than seven days without risking losing jurisdiction. He then remanded the case to next Wednesday.

Counsel said the players did not appear on their lawyers' advice. The judge said a bench warrant is normally issued when an accused does not show up for a court appearance but the warrant is not executed. This allows a court to retain jurisdiction.

NHL President Clarence Campbell suspended Maki for 30 days after the altercation and Green for 13 league games after he is declared fit to play again.

Sinden Selling Helmets

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Boston Bruins coach Harry Sinden, whose team has recommended helmets for all National Hockey League players, said Thursday "there is nothing helmets would take away from the game."

Sinden, speaking at a luncheon, said he bases his support of the helmets on "the injury aspect—that flying puck, the waving stick' and the iron goalposts."

He conceded that helmets "would take away identity of the players," but added: "That is no argument compared to a player getting hurt."

Boston filed a motion this week with the NHL's rules committee to require the wearing of helmets beginning Jan. 15.

The motion arose from a nearly-fatal injury suffered by Bruins' defenceman Ted Green in a pre-season stick fight with Wayne Maki of St. Louis Blues.

'Semi' Saturday

Chiefs Favored To Oust Jets

NEW YORK (AP) — Kansas City Chiefs are set to unwrap their offensive package at Shea Stadium Saturday, but New York Jets figure they can handle any special deliveries coach Hank Stram sends their way.

Kansas City, runner up to Oakland Raiders in the Western Division, is a 2½-point choice to oust the Eastern Division champion Jets in the sudden-death American Football League semi-final.

Houston Oilers, second in the East during the regular season, play the raiders at Oakland Sunday, with the survivors meeting in the Jan. 4 AFL championship game.

"We'll go for broke in this one," Stram said Thursday, after admitting he's kept the Chiefs attack under wraps in their 10-6 loss to Oakland last Sunday that decided the Western title. Quarterback Len Dawson threw only six passes, completing two, as Kansas City ran at the Raiders from start to finish.

"You've got to go with balance in one like this," Stram continued. "This is completely different from the Oakland game. We wanted to win it, of course, but after all is said and done, it was a nothing game.

"Our objective is to win the championship—nothing else."

Dawson, who has played most of the season with torn ligaments in his right knee, bombed the Jets 34-16 last month at New York, firing three touchdown passes as Gus Taylor, completing 23 of 38 pass attempts for 327 yards.

The Chiefs recovered a fumble on the first play from scrimmage and scored on the next of a variation of their normal Slot-I formation. The new twist caught the New York secondary napping and set the tone for the game.

If Jets Coach Weeb Ewbank anticipates further surprises from the inventive Stram Saturday, he isn't outwardly concerned. "I don't know what any team can use that we haven't been somewhere along the line this year," he said.

The Jets, buoyed by the progress shown by injured receiver Don Maynard in mid-week workouts and the results of their first team meeting of the year, expect to be better prepared mentally for the elimination bout than for any game since the Super Bowl last January.

"These have been the best practices we've had all season," said assistant coach Buddy Ryan Thursday. "There's a complete dedication to winning this game. There's a different attitude. They're getting ready to play. You can sense it.

"We're ready to hit people."

Five 'Dozey'

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — William Rowe, director of racing at Windsor Raceway, announced Thursday night that five horses were in a tranquillized state before the 10th race Dec. 13.

The race was cancelled after judges said some of the eight starters looked "dozey." An investigating team under Dave Rivers, a harness-racing trouble shooter for the Ontario Racing Commission has been working on the case since.

Two urine samples from each horse in the race were sent to Vancouver for analysis and Rowe said Thursday five of the eight had been tranquillized. He would not say what drug was used.

Rowe said no owner, trainer, driver or groom at the raceway is suspected of being involved. But he said the pattern resembles one followed by a group responsible for doping at tracks in Michigan and other states.

Rowe said the investigation will continue and as a precaution against further doping the commission has provided the track with extra veterinarians to carry out pre-race examinations on all horses.

'Crisis of Credibility' Charged by Templeton

OTTAWA (CP) — Charles Templeton, Toronto broadcaster and former editor, told a Senate inquiry Thursday serious weaknesses in the news systems of Canada have helped produce a social crisis.

In testimony before the special Senate committee on mass media, Mr. Templeton cited "indirect and unspoken" control of news—within the media, economic pressures, inadequate professional standards for journalists and, sometimes, lack of competition.

He said there is "a crisis of credibility" among the public about the news provided.

The role of newspapers and broadcasting has major importance in a democracy, because citizens receive almost all the information on which they base decisions through them, he said.

"We speak a great deal about the right to know, but the right is meaningless unless we are able to know. And our ability to know is essentially in the hands of those who own and run the news media.

"If they do not do their job well, we are ill-informed or misinformed. . . . Willy-nilly, it is in their hands."

Mr. Templeton, a former editor of the Toronto Star and editor of Maclean's magazine until he resigned three months ago in protest against what he called management interference, said Canadians are well served by news.

Generally, Canadian journalists seek to report the news accurately, fairly and without bias.

"In my experience, the great majority of the people who own or control media respect the news and do not try to fashion it to serve their philosophical, political or personal ends."

However, he said, much control of news is exerted in an indirect and unspoken way at the middle-management level of news organizations, among editors.

"Statements of publishers that they do not interfere with editors by telling them what to write should not be too readily accepted as the whole truth on editorial freedom," he said.

The publisher's views are well known to his editors and they will sometimes try to interpret those views in the handling of news.

For example, he said, at the Toronto Star it was well known to editors and staff that the publisher had a great interest in anything dealing with foreign capital moving into Canada. The publisher regarded the views of Walter Gordon, former Liberal finance minister who tried to limit foreign ownership, as extremely important.

Thus, Mr. Templeton said, the man making up the front page of the newspaper would be likely to use there prominently the report of a speech by Mr. Gordon.

For good or ill, he said, there are factors other than straight editorial judgment that impinge on editorial decisions. Most often those exti-, factors were knowledge of the boss's views,

Fear of Bias Cited In Strike News Lack

OTTAWA (CP) — In a post-mortem on the Peterborough Examiner newspaper strike, publisher W. J. Garner told a Senate inquiry Thursday fear of bias kept most news of the dispute out of the paper.

Under questioning by the Senate committee on mass media, Mr. Garner said the Thomson-owned newspaper would have been open to a charge of bias if it printed stories containing only its side of the dispute.

If it carried stories which included other-side information from the American Newspaper Guild, the striking union could again claim bias if their copy was edited. As a result, the paper carried next to nothing on the strike.

The strike, which began Nov. 2, 1968, ended last April in defeat for the union which failed to win a contract for editorial employees.

Senator Keith Davey (L—Ontario), the committee chairman, said surely it was possible to write an objective story of what the guild was after acceptable to both sides. It was the biggest local story at the time.

Mr. Garner stuck to his point. The decision was against any real coverage at all in the paper, which kept publishing during the strike, because of "the possibility of bias.".

Asked if he would handle the coverage in the same way again if faced with a strike, Mr. Garner said:

"I think I would. It is fraught with problems if you tried to cover both sides in circumstances like that."

Newsman's Daughter Safe After Abduction

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Rosalyn Newhouse, 18, daughter of the general manager of the Springfield newspapers, was abducted by two men early today, police said. She was released a short time later in nearby Agawam.

Her sister Jo, 18, said police told the family the girl was in good condition.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. Newhouse, went to Springfield Hospital, where the girl was taken after she was found.

Newhouse is a cousin of S. I. Newhouse, founder of the newspaper group.

Police said the girl was returning from work at the Springfield Union, one of the three Newhouse newspapers in Springfield, when her car was forced off the road near her home and she was driven away in a blue and white car.

Police said she apparently was thrown from her captors' car in Agawam and walked to a nearby home and called her mother.

A Column Without Smoking

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It is really quite easy to write a column without smoking a cigarette — even if, like me, you have been a three-pack-a-day man for more than 30 years.

You just sit in front of the typewriter and think good thoughts, sweet thoughts healthy thoughts. Birds in trees. Bees in clover. Sand and surf in summer. Ski tracks in winter.

Life can be beautiful. Freedom is better than slavery. A stitch in time saves nine. 'Tis far better to have loved and lost.

What we need here is a little concentration, and then ideas will come. Concentrate on the keys. One says "Clear." One says "Set." One says "M-R". There are 25 symbols that are not letters. I have never used the plus and minus signs.

Did Smith ever know Corona? Corona is also a cigar. Watch it, boy. Maybe the ribbon needs changing: that would give you something to do. Can't write a bright column with a faded ribbon, old sport. And how about testing the "Total Tab Clear" to see if it works. I've never used a "Total Tab Clear" in my whole typing life.

(Jesus never smoked. Socrates never smoked. Nobody at all smoked until the mid-16th century and never missed it.)

When in the course of events it becomes necessary for one nation to . . . No man is an island . . . Ein' feste Burg ist unser Gott . . . I have nothing to declare but my genius . . . The lyf so short, the craft so long to lerne . . . O never say that I was false of heart . . .

One must free the conscious mind from its fetters, and then thoughts and associations drift up from the unconscious, forming their own shapes and patterns. The thing is to relax, don't force it, keep the pipes loose and the juices flowing.

Think about the girls in their summer dresses, the taste of ripe apples just fallen from the tree, the odor of wood burning . . . no, not that. No evil can come to a good man, and it is far better to suffer an injury than to inflict one.

My body is a tabernacle. My throat is a furnace. My lungs are an incinerator. My breath is tainted, my teeth are stained, my fingers are yellow, my pulse is fast, my cough is shallow.

Nothing is stronger than an idea whose time has come. Nothing is weaker than a resolution whose time has not come. But it is not hard to write a column without smoking a cigarette. As you see, I just made it . . . made it . . . made it . . . made it.

Press Control Deplorable, McCabe Tells Senators

OTTAWA (CP) — Any government attempt to produce special legislation for the press would be deplorable, a Thomson Newspapers Ltd. executive told the Senate committee on mass media Thursday.

St. Clair McCabe, executive vice-president and managing director, said special press legislation as opposed to legislation for industry in general "would strike at the whole principle" of a press free from legislative and administrative interference.

In his opening statement to the committee, he said special press legislation would give the government of the day the right to interfere with press organization in the public interest. That would have inherent dangers for freedom of thought.

Replying to questions, Mr. McCabe added that he is opposed to a press council to police the industry. Suggestions for one may come from people "with a guilty conscience."

There was an open door in the community by publishers of Thomson newspapers to hear complaints. In the small communities where Thomson papers operate the press does not slant news.

He read a letter from the publisher of the Thomson paper published in Orillia, which called the British Press Council a face-saving device for an industry which had some bad press.

John Tory, general counsel for Thomson Newspapers Ltd., said the major factor in the organization's current shedding of its broadcasting interests is the prospect of increasing government interference and control in broadcasting.

Under questioning by Senator Keith Davey (L—Ontario), the committee chairman, he agreed there had to be government control in broadcasting because of the limited number of frequencies and channels. The prospect was for more controls in the field, not less.

Senator Harper Prowse (L—Alberta) suggested that the withdrawal from broadcasting resulted from a fear that controls would impinge on the newspaper industry, He got no direct reply.

Mr. Tory, in his presentation, read a letter from G. J. Rowland, publisher of the Thomson-owned Penticton, B.C., Herald. Mr. Rowland said the paper to the Thomson group in 1956.

The unsolicited letter, sent to the committee, said Mr. Rowland received no criticism that the Thomson group is cheap.

Mr. Rowland said that after the paper was sold, the new owners built up the paper, making no profits and sustaining some losses in the first seven years and made only a modest net gain after 1964 on the operation.

Mr. Rowland said he made more money his last year as owner than the Thomson group made in their total time of ownership. He accomplished this partly by overworking and underpaying the staff.

Mr. Tory, a director of the Canadian newspaper group and other Thomson companies, appeared at the hearing as a representative of K. R. Thomson, the majority owner of Thomson Newspapers Ltd.

The lawyer said Mr. Thomson, son of Lord Thomson of Fleet, now lives in England where the family has other extensive newspaper holdings "but I believe ultimately he intends to return to Canada."

No Yule For Cubans

HAVANA (Reuters) — Christmas will be just another day this year for the Cuban people.

The island's sugar mills, grinding relentlessly toward a record target of 10,000,000 tons, will not even pause for Christmas Day—usually a quiet family holiday for Cubans.

For the first time under Premier Fidel Castro's government there will be no extra rations of rum, roast pork and black beans, normally made available for the traditional Christmas Eve dinner.

THE FALL OF ROME
ALMOST KILLED IT!

Boxing was quite popular with the ancient Greeks, and Romans had died out after the fall of Rome in 476 A.D. The sport was revived by European kings who enjoyed watching it — as millions do today!

Boxing has lost popularity since World War II and there may be some unused equipment around your house. Sell it fast . . . with an Intelligencer Want Ad. Dialing 962-2241 will get the job done, and ask for Classified Ads.

U.S. May Trade With China

TOKYO (AP) — The U.S. government will ease its restrictions on trade with Communist China, Kyodo news service reported today.
Quoting a Japanese government source, Kyodo said relaxation of the restrictions was reported to the Japanese government in advance and Washington will announce it Saturday.
The report could not be confirmed by Japanese government officials.
Kyodo said the main points of the planned relaxation are:
—A certificate of origin for Chinese goods showing they did not originate in Communist China no longer will be required if the goods are bought in another nation.
—American travellers will be allowed to bring home an unlimited amount of Communist Chinese goods for their personal use. All such imports were banned until this year; then the Nixon administration decreed that a traveller could bring home $100 worth.
—The United States will allow indirect trade between U.S. firms and Communist China while retaining the ban on direct trade with mainland China.
Kyodo said the sale to China of strategic goods and goods on a defeyred payment basis will will be prohibited.

Those regulations provide that advertisers may deduct advertising expenditures for tax purposes as normal business expenses only when the publication carrying the advertising is at least 75 per cent Canadian owned.
Mr. Bassett says he agrees with the aim of safeguarding Canadian ownership, but he believes the objective includes maintaining diversified owners

Publications. Already, almost 44 per cent of total daily-newspaper circulation in Canada is represented by the three big groups.
Mr. Bassett says estate taxes when an owner-publisher dies tend to force sale of an independent newspaper to one often to one of the groups. In that case, identification is diffused and the press as a whole is not as strong as it could be.
"My proposal is, therefore, that this concept be recognized that shares of a single newspaper, passed on at death, be exempt from estate tax."
Legislation could provide for recapture of estate tax should the company sell his ownership in his lifetime.
Mr. Bassett says his plea is not on personal grounds, because he has arranged to pass ownership to his three sons through a trust.

Telegram Publisher Asks Tax Concessions for Small Newspapers

OTTAWA (CP) — John W. H. Bassett, a bachelor and publisher of the Toronto Telegram, called today for special tax concessions designed to help preserve independent, locally-owned newspapers from falling to publishing chains.
In a prepared brief, he urges the special Senate committee on mass media to recommend exemption of individually-owned newspapers from estate tax. He says the government also should grant tax benefits to newsprint paper manufacturers to reduce the cost of their product.
Special treatment for the newspaper publishing business would set no precedent, he says, because the federal government introduced special tax measures in 1966 to safeguard Canadian ownership of publications.

Herod's Slaughter of Babes Nothing New in His World

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

The riders swung out of Jerusalem's Fountain Gate at daybreak and took the road toward Bethlehem.

A tribune in plume-crested helmet rode at the head of a company of cavalry, followed by three chariots and 600 foot soldiers, equipped for combat.

There were muttered oaths and grumbling among the men. They were on a vile mission—to massacre the male infants of a legend-steeped Jewish town south of the Judean capital.

The tribune knew the object of King Herod's fury—an unidentified toddler under two who was rumored as a promised divine champion of mankind, an emancipator of the fallen, the broken and the lost.

The king, a truckling cat's paw of Augustus Caesar, wished to eliminate this unknown child his whispered saviour of the world.

It was a messy business, this hard disciplining of the oppressed in order to uphold the Pax Romana.

The detachment was part of the 12th Legion, garrisoned at Fort Antony, hard by the Jewish Temple. It was one of 28 legions of 168,000 men, mostly mercenaries, that policed the empire's 30 provinces from Spain to the Arabian Sea.

Herod had four Roman legions of 24,000 men, largely Germans, Gauls, Thracians and Samaritans, to keep this insurgent Judean territory under control.

The natives turned their backs and spat whenever a legionnaire went by.

They were an unsubmissive lot, these Jews, refusing to venerate the Roman ensign or the imperial gods, resenting the law that permitted any Roman soldier to impress them into portage duty on any occasion. But refusal meant death or torture.

It was about 50 stadia (six miles) from Jerusalem to Bethlehem, situated on a rise just off the main highway leading to Hebron farther to the south.

The tribune's orders simply were to exterminate the male youngsters, and he would limit it to that. It wouldn't make much of a splash in the chronicles of Roman triumphs.

No historian likely would even mention it. There were more spectacular blood-letterings to record in this recalcitrant province, particularly under the ruthless Herod.

Bethlehem, a town of about 1,000, stood on a ridge, 2,350 feet above sea level. In Jewish lore, it was the place where the Mohabite girl, Ruth, pledged her loyalty to her native husband, Boaz, where the shepherd, David, tended his sheep, and where Samuel anointed him king.

It was a history-laden place for these sons of David. They were a peculiar people, overrun and dominated successively by Assyrians, Babylonians, Egyptians, Macedonians and now Romans, yet still, with an implacable passion for liberty and their comprehension of God as justice, they remained stubbornly convinced that the righteous would at length inherit the earth.

The tribune summoned his officers and gave them their final orders.

The cohort would split into three sections, these centuries in each, moving in from three sides of the town, spearmen in advance. The cavalry and charioteers would remain in reserve.

The mission was specific—to destroy only males under two. The men must judge the ages themselves. But let none escape. Heed no pleas or tears.

There will be no spoils, no looting. Attend only to the limited objective—speedily, decisively, professionally—for the glory of Caesar.

"Shall we decapitate them or dash them to pieces?" a centurion asked.

"Whichever is most expedient, or simply run them through. That should be sufficient. But make certain they're dead. If you encounter troublesome opposition, have a bowman put up a fireball. I'll be there." The tribune pointed to a nearby hilltop.

The three wings closed in on the town. Then faint, desperate screams were borne on the breeze, swelling to a steady, piercing wail.

When it was finished, and the blood-smeared troops returned, they brought word of a couple that fled the town the night before for Egypt, a carpenter and his wife, with a small child named "Yeshua" or "Jesus," meaning the "Salvation of God."

The information was relayed to the dying Herod, rapidly disintegrating now from ravaging intestinal ulcers, the edema drowning his flesh in purulent matter, and suffering his maniacal delusions of persecution.

"I shall die without being lamented," he groaned. "The Jews will make a festival upon my death. As if I have the power to compel them to mourn at it, on whatever account, as befits a king."

To ensure it, he ordered the city's chief Jewish noblemen, already confined in the Hippodrome, slain by arrows from archers stationed around the arena immediately upon notice of his death, and also that his legions kill one member of each native family.

"Then all Judea, and every family of them, will weep at my death, whether they will or not," he said, panting for breath.

Herod died, screaming, in 4 BC at the age of 70 at his winter palace in Jericho.

A man he was of great barbarity to all men equally," wrote the historian Flavius Josphus. "He stole into the throne like a fox, ruled like a tiger and died like a dog."

His will bestowed 10,000,000 drachmae and vessels of gold and silver on Augustus Caesar, and divided his kingdom among three sons, Antipas, Philip and Archelaus, survivors among the 10 sons and five daughters of his 10 wives. He had slain five sons, including those of his only love, Marianne, whom he also killed.

His body, arrayed in purple, the diadem on his head, his sceptre in his hand, was laid on a golden bier, embroidered with precious stones, and borne 30 miles from Jericho, through Jerusalem, to his fortified citadel, Herodium, overlooking Bethlehem, for his burial. The procession included 500 slaves, his Galatian bodyguards and a Roman cohort in battle regalia.

But his final orders for further carnage were ignored. He was not even mourned by Augustus, who once called him "confederate and friend," but who in the end remarked, "Better to have been Herod's hogs than his sons."

The king, the empire, the far-spread domain of mighty legions and the glorious and unending onslaughts against it.

And Bethlehem, the place where Herod the Great first tried in vain to extinguish that Christmas light, marks his own grave.

Tomorrow: The stretching shadows.

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Several months ago I read in your column a letter from a reader stating that she had been nervous and irritable for years until she discovered a thyroid condition.

Well, as soon as I read that column, I wondered if I had the same thing. I had gone to a doctor several times for physicals and he found no real trouble except "nerves." Later I went to an internist who checked on my thyroid. He discovered, after many tests, that I had a borderline thyroid condition. He sent me to a surgeon for consultation. But he did not want to operate because it is "borderline". Will you explain? Thank you. — Mrs. G.

Comment: One word I do not use in diagnosis is "borderline". A condition is or is not.

For example, when a man comes in complaining of chest pains, the diagnosis must be either angina pectoris or no angina. Not "borderline angina".

If there is question of an ulcer, it is or is not present. "Borderline ulcer" does not mean anything except not having resolved suspicions one way or another.

Some doctors may not agree, but I call it hedging on a diagnosis. Not being sure. Sometimes we are stumped and must say, "I don't know." But that's not hedging. Just a statement of fact. However, saying one has a "borderline" this or that gets us (and the patient) nowhere.

So I suggest you ask for a consultation, Mrs. G., to find out whether or not you have an underactive or an overactive thyroid. Either might cause nervousness and irritability. We have tests which will help make this diagnosis, one way or the other. Your trouble may be due to "nerves" or to something else but not necessarily to a "borderline thyroid condition.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have had an attack of Bell's palsy. Can you give me any idea of the outlook? — Mr. Y.

Comment: In the Review of Modern Medicine I have been reading a report of a paper written by W. B. Matthews, DM, of England, which originally appeared in the British Medical Journal:

"Recovery is complete in only about two-thirds of patients with Bell's palsy seen within six days of onset. Findings for 136 patients indicate a relatively good prognosis if palsy is partial, no matter when the patient is first seen; if the patient is less than 40 years of age; and if herpes zoster (shingles) is not associated. Failure of voluntary movement to return within the first four weeks is the only absolutely unfavorable prognostic sign."

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I do not crave yeast but every once in a while, about two or three times within six months, I get a taste for it. And just half a cake satisfies me. Is there any harm in it? — Mrs. R.

Comment: No harm.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I have been hearing lately that because of sanitation in the processing, drinking instant coffee causes hardening of the arteries. Is this true? Or false? — Mrs. H.

Comment: False.

• • •

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My doctor told me I have kidney stones and put me on a low calcium and oxalate diet. Will this dissolve the stones? — Mrs. B.

Comment: Such a diet is (hopefully) prescribed to prevent further stone-formation. It will not dissolve stones already present.

'Borderline' Barred From Diagnoses

W. Riddell Dies at 70

OTTAWA (CP) — Wing Cmdr. William L. Riddell, former commanding officer of the Rockcliffe air force base, died of a heart attack here Thursday. He was 70.

A native of Alameda, Sask., he joined the forces at the age of 16 in the First World War. During the 1930s he travelled across Canada with Sinkins Flight, the RCAF aerobatic team. He was nicknamed "war horse of the clouds" and was rated one of the three best aerobatic flyers in the world.

He commanded the Rockcliffe base near Ottawa in 1940 and 1941.

A military funeral will be held in Cobourg, Ont., on Saturday.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For December 20

Your birthday today: Your year ahead involves a lengthy contest between the necessity of staying put to settle existing issues, finish current jobs, and the growing urge for ventures elsewhere, domestic new starts and perhaps a switch in career. Eventually you must make a definite transition move.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Everything goes more easily. Be sure you have facts straight, then take a break and just loaf. Inspiration may come, but in no readily applicable form.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): You now attract petty discrepancies, misunderstandings which grow worse if you answer them in kind. Think big, proceed with your accustomed routines.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Again, you have things calculated far ahead, but nothing can move until others arrive at conclusions near enough to yours for harmony. Find something else to do, some pleasant diversion while everybody comes to terms. Serious study this evening brings immediately useful know-how.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Everybody around wants to help but much of what must be done is so personal you can't delegate it. Travel, romantic ventures begun today are plagued with delays and hindrances.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Start early and put in a solid day of diligent effort. Cut evening social activities short, or skip them altogether. Retire early for needed rest.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): The day goes well but should be left intact, not taken apart in shop talk during the evening.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Pay special attention to the way you are caring for yours elf. Take time out, apropos of nothing, and just lounge about.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): You can have your way in most matters by simply being persistent. Keep your figures straight and your remarks directly to the point.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): There is nothing for the mildly spoiled sportsman of today but to pitch in and be as effective as you can manage.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan 19): Your affairs thrive better if you keep your own counsel as to what you are doing and how it is going. The evening is not for firm resolutions or serious conversations. Seek light entertainment, or retire for extra rest.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Everybody has a different theory about how to live today. Your patience may run out before you've heard all the details.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Watch what comes of the decisions taken now, and be happy later that you didn't insist on having your way. Expect your best laid plans to be diverted in the evening; take it in good humor.

First Christmas at Home

Back-bencher Protests

OTTAWA (CP) — Ralph W. Stewart (L-Cochrane) protested in the Commons Thursday that back-bench members of the House are given an inadequate opportunity to participate in its business.

As an example, he said he rose on a question of privilege, the finance department now has suggested design changes in Canada's paper money — almost a year after he introduced a bill calling for similar changes. The bill has never been debated, because of "the silly method" of dealing with private members' business.

Commons Ready for Christmas

MPs Drop Debate in Favors of Carols

OTTAWA (CP) —Christmas carols replaced rhetoric briefly Thursday night before the Commons gave third and final reading to a bill extending the three-per-cent surcharge on personal and corporation incomes to the end of 1970.

MPs sang Silent Night and O Come All Ye Faithful as they waited for members to assemble for a vote on an NDP amendment that would have killed the bill.

The motion was easily defeated 90 to 50; third reading was given on a voice vote.

Standing in the 264-seat Commons: Liberal 153, Conservative 72, NDP 22, Creditiste 14, Independent 2, vacant 1.

The singing reflected the light-hearted mood of the Commons awaiting the Christmas adjournment, scheduled for today.

The tax, imposed in 1968, was to expire at the end of this year. But an extension is essential, said Herb Gray, minister without portfolio, to curb inflation "which is still with us."

Mr. Gray told the Commons the government does not need the $155,000,000 revenue the tax will raise to balance the budget this year.

"It is part of the government's over-all attack on inflation."

Theogene Ricard (PC—St. Hyacinthe) said the bill will "perpetuate the high cost of living."

It would hurt low- and middle-income taxpayers most and would likely become a permanent tax with the government instituting it for only short periods in the beginning.

Rod Thomson (NDP—Battleford-Kindersley) said the government claim the measure is needed to cool inflation is false.

"In Western Canada we have a depression which the tax will do nothing to help," he said.

Henri Latulippe (Creditiste—Compton) said it is irrational for the government "to unbalance the budgets of all Canadians in order to balance its own."

John Burton (NDP—Regina East) said the bill should have been withdrawn as "something of a Christmas present to Canadians."

The government's white paper on taxation also came up for discussion Thursday night as MPs continued debate on a government motion to send it to a Commons committee for detailed study.

Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) said the white paper proposals would discourage saving.

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) said the measures would place a disproportionate share of the tax load on the professional class, forcing them to move out of Canada.

The motion did not come to a vote and will be debated later.

The Senate gave second reading Thursday to a bill authorizing the appointment of a financial controller over the Company of Young Canadians.

The bill was expected to get final approval today.

Under the bill, the company would not be permitted to spend any money or enter contracts without the controller's approval.

Measures on financing of Canadian National Railways, assistance to children of veterans, taxes on airline fares and assistance to wheat farmers were also passed by the Senate.

The bills, already passed by the Commons, are scheduled to receive royal assent today to become law.

Much of the NDP opposition to the surcharge bill centred on the surplus the government expects in the 1969-70 fiscal year. They said it would be much greater than the $250,000,000 originally estimated.

One NDP estimate was that the surplus will reach $650,000,000.

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) said the surplus will increase unemployment, curb economic growth and take money out of the economy.

Gerald W. Baldwin, Conservative House leader, asked whether the surplus would lead to a decrease in general interest rates because the government would not be borrowing to a normal extent.

Mr. Gray said the reduction in borrowing "couldn't help but have a good effect" on interest rates.

Most Parliamentarians Plan Christmas at Home

OTTAWA (CP) — Home is where most of the 264 members of Parliament plan to spend Christmas and that seems to include Prime Minister Trudeau.

Prime ministerial aides many as close-mouthed as ever about Mr. Trudeau's plans for his private life, but it is allowed that he has in mind at least a few days in Montreal with his mother and other family members.

The Commons was to break today for three weeks. Some will take vacations and many more set about visiting constituents.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield and his wife will be at home with family Christmas day but then are bound for a vacation Dec. 27-Jan. 10 on the Caribbean island of Guadaloupe.

NDP Leader T. C. Douglas and Creditiste chief Real Caouette will also spend the holidays with their families.

Mr. Douglas will visit his grandchildren in St. Catharines on Christmas day and then possibly travel to Los Angeles to visit his daughter.

Mr. Caouette will return to Rouyn, Que. for Christmas and then plans to spend some time snowmobiling in northern Quebec.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis is the only cabinet member who will leave Canada over the holiday. He and his family are to depart for Spain Christmas Eve.

Otto Lang, minister without portfolio, will spend Christmas in Ottawa with his family and then return to his Saskatoon riding to visit constituents. Justice Minister John Turner's plans are indefinite, he says, but don't intend much past his Ottawa home and riding.

Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien will leave his Shawinigan, Que., home on New Year's Eve to open officially the Northwest Territories centennial that begins in Yellowknife the next day.

Walter Carter (PC—St. John's West) plans a two-week rest back home, but then he's plunging into a campaign for the Newfoundland provincial Conservative leadership.

Governor General and Mrs. Michener will be in Ottawa with their grandchildren.

I wish to express my thanks to all those who encouraged and supported my re-election on December 1.

I shall continue to serve to the best of my ability the citizens of this city.

May the peace and hope of Christmas brighten the coming year for all.

Direct Phones Solution To Airport Taxi Dispute

MONTREAL (CP) — Direct-line telephones linking the passenger terminal at Montreal International Airport and taxi dispatchers "would eliminate 85 per cent of the problem" of ground transportation at the airport, says the suburban City of Dorval.

The "problem" arises from the sometimes-violent opposition of Montreal taxi drivers to the exclusive franchise of Murray Hill Limousine Service Ltd. to await passengers at the airport in Dorval.

The drivers want permission to pick up passengers. At present, they are prohibited from doing so unless called to the airport by passengers.

Maurice Marcotte, Dorval legal adviser, told the House of Commons standing committee on transportation and communications Thursday that direct-line telephones could be installed at the airport without amending existing Dorval or provincial transportation legislations.

He said Dorval could not amend its bylaws to permit taxis to wait at the airport for passengers unless the provincial government changed its transportation laws.

North Vietnamese Infiltration Grows

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top White House official says a continuation of recent North Vietnamese infiltration into South Vietnam during the next seven weeks would be considered disturbing and could signal an early-1970 offensive.

The source, who could not be identified by name or quoted directly under ground rules laid down by the White House, pictured the period between now and early February as one in which Washington will be testing and assessing Communist intentions.

An authority in the foreign policy area, the official was made available to about 50 reporters for an 85-minute briefing Thursday. Under the rules, his remarks could not be reported until today. All his statements were made in response to questions.

The sources said that if North Vietnam continues infiltration during the next seven weeks at the average rate of the last seven, the Nixon administration will conclude it is augmenting its forces in the South rather than replacing losses. He said that could be the prelude to an offensive.

If an offensive develops, however, he said it could not reach the 1968 Tet level which saw the Communists invade Saigon and occupy temporarily such provincial capitals as Hue. He said the North Vietnamese could do no more than cause an increase in U.S. casualties through stepped up shellings and a series of coordinated attacks.

Some reverses are inevitable as the war continues, he said.

Girl Claims 300 Murdered

PARIS (Reuters) — A 21-year-old South Vietnamese girl Friday night accused United States troops of murdering and mutilating 300 civilians in the coastal village of Ba Ling Am last Jan. 13.

Pham Ti Lien, speaking in an even voice but with tears often running down her face, told a news conference chaired by philosopher Jean-Paul Sairc that she had lost 18 near relatives, including her mother, in the massacre.

Miss Lien said U.S. troops reached the village, in Quang Ngai province, in tanks and helicopters at dawn on Jan. 13 after an artillery bombardment. The population sought refuge in underground shelters.

"I heard a lot of shooting and after a while I stuck my head out of the shelter and saw American soldiers rounding people up and forcing them up in their tanks," Miss Lien said.

"They fired machine-gun bursts as beggards, who fell one on top of another," she added.

"I remember an old man who did not understand what was wanted of him. An American soldier stuck his bayonet through his body, then finished him off with rifle shots and pushed his body away. . . .

"Finally, at nightfall, the noise of the shooting and the rumbling of tanks was over. We discovered a heap of bodies, but they were all disfigured. The arms and legs were severed. It was impossible to recognize anyone."

Arabs Kidnap Diplomat

GENEVA (Reuters) — Swiss police today were hunting for two armed men claiming to be Palestinian Arab-guerrillas who held the Portuguese consul here prisoner for 18 hours before making off with a ransom of 1,000,000 Swiss francs (about $240,000).

The consul, Salvador Hassan, 48, said that he and seven other persons were tied up and threatened with pistols by the two men, but were not mistreated otherwise.

They summoned his brother, who owns a small Geneva private bank, Friday morning and also tied him up. They ordered the brothers to telephone their bank and ask for 3,000,000 Swiss francs (about $720,000) to be brought to the villa.

A bank employee, suspecting something was amiss, went to the villa with an empty briefcase. He was promptly tied up.

A second bank employee, summoned to the villa in turn, brought 670,000 Swiss francs and (100,000 U.S.).

He was tied up with the others in the drawing room of the villa and the men drove off in Hassan's car.

About two hours later the victims freed themselves and called the police.

American Firms Abroad May Trade with China

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States took further steps Friday to ease its trade embargo of almost two decades against Communist China in a bid to improve relations with the Peking regime.

The state department announced a three-phase relaxation of regulations to go into effect Monday.

The most important change will permit American-owned subsidiaries of U.S. firms in Canada, Europe, Japan and elsewhere to engage in non-strategic trade with mainland China on the same basis as their foreign competitors.

Direct U.S. trade with China, however, remains forbidden.

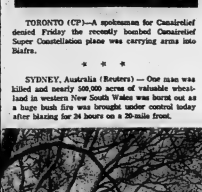
Secondly, present restrictions are eliminated on U.S. business participation in third-country trade in Chinese Communist goods. This permits American firms to buy and ship to third countries commodities presumed to be of Chinese origin that third country firms now are able to send to the United States under procedures that require certificates of origin.

Such certificates will no longer be required for shipments to third countries. But the certificates still will be required for goods shipped into the United States.

The state department said this change "is responsive to urgent requests of foreign branches of U.S. firms, and it is expected to improve the competitive position of American business concerns overseas."

In Ottawa, an external affairs department spokesman said divisions within the department are studying the implications for Canada of freer trade by U.S. subsidiaries in this country.

In the past Canada has encouraged freer trade among all countries, both Communist and non-Communist. Its own trade with Cuba and Communist China, for example, has been far less restricted than that of the U.S.



The spokesman said the department would respond to the U.S. moves early next week.

Syria Ground U.S., Australian Racers

LONDON (Reuters) — Syrian authorities today grounded all aircraft to pass through Syria.

Meanwhile, one of two planes feared missing in the 12,000 mile race, today was reported to have landed safely in Italy.

The tiny aircraft, a Siai Marchetti SF-260, was brought down safely in Grantanisso, Italy, by its two British pilots to refuel, race officials said.

But there was still no word of an Aero Strike Commander piloted by two Australians which left here Thursday and was last heard of over France early Friday morning.

About 45 of the 79 planes in the race, which began Thursday, were reported to have checked in at the first control point in Athens and to have flown on. Aircraft from 16 countries are taking part for prizes worth £50,000 ($120,000).

The race is being held to commemorate the 200th anniversary of the discovery of Australia by the explorer Captain Cook.

He said he was not surprised by the attack, but gave no further details of the shooting.

Merry Christmas Is Forbidden By Britain's Ancient Statutes

LONDON (AP) — Christmas in Britain could be a pretty unmerry affair if everybody obeyed the law.

Under ancient statutes, carollers can be hailed and a family can be hauled into court for eating too much plum pudding.

The Highway Act of 1835 forbids anyone from "obstructing the highway or the footpath with . . . lanterns, bassoons or other instruments." Not many carollers these days, bring along bassoons, but many a footpath is obstructed by singers with lanterns and other instruments.

As for singing in the streets, London's urban regulations state with a touch of Scrooge that "any constable may require said singers to desist."

A determined caroller violating the silent night could get a fine of £4 ($10).

The Puritan Parliament of 1644 passed a law saying that on Christmas "no man shall partake at dinner of more than three courses . . . nor shall the olde habit of eating and making plumme puddings and pies be followed, for these heathenish things are abominable."

Violators in those days spent the rest of the festive season in a dungeon. The law still exists, but nobody seems to care.

Truck Traffic Climbs

SAIGON (AP) — The number of North Vietnamese trucks moving supplies south along the Ho Chi Minh trail has increased eight-fold since October, official United States sources said today.

In October, reconnaissance planes sighted about 250 trucks a week moving through eastern Laos, the sources said, but the number jumped to about 1,000 a week in November when the monsoon season ended and roads became more passable.

In the last two weeks, however, more than 2,000 trucks a week have been sighted shuttling supplies south for a possible enemy offensive early next year.

"We are not saying the enemy is already committed to an offensive," one source said. "Historically, this is the time of the year he has built up to give himself the option of launching an offensive."

Reports say there also has been a significant increase in troop infiltration since the end of the monsoon season.

The U.S. command has stepped up air strikes against the Ho Chi Minh road network, using fighter-bombers and B-52s.

In Saigon, American troops were warned to stay off the streets this weekend in anticipation of possible attacks.

Captured Viet Cong documents called for increased attacks this weekend to mark the 23rd anniversary of the opening of the Viet Minh's war against the French and the ninth birthday of the National Liberation Front, political organization of the Viet Cong. In addition, Viet Cong forces have often launched heavy attacks just before holiday truce periods.

Despite a ban on street demonstrations, several hundred persons marched on the National Assembly building Friday to demand action against three assemblymen accused of being Viet Cong sympathizers.

Round and Round They Rolled

Belleville's newest organized sport is roller-skating — with free sessions organized for the city's recreation department. The season's program opened last night at Ben Bleecker Auditorium and drew about 80 participants to test the sport's recreation potential.

New Twirl Added to Skaters Waltz

Rollerskating is back in Belleville as an organized sport — after more than 70 years.

The pastime was launched by the city's recreation department last night and Bellevillians will have the weekend to fully decide its benefits.

Free skating continues today and Sunday at the Ben Bleecker Auditorium where the department has made 200 pairs of skates available.

Recreation officials last night described themselves as "satisfied" to the initial response as more than 80, Bellevillians — mostly teenagers — turned out to test the sport for the first time.

Starting Monday, there will be skating sessions each day from one p.m. to four p.m. throughout the Christmas holidays except Christmas Day, Boxing Day and New Year's Day.

It's not the first time the sport has been in Belleville — although most residents will not recall its original hey-day.

Senior citizens recollect the city once boasted a skating arena at the corners of Pinnacle Street and Victoria Avenue. It closed down, they say, before the turn of the century.

Current skating styles at the Ben Bleecker see replacement of metal skates with wheels made of a nylon fibre, durable but less nasty and damaging to floor surface.

Free skating is scheduled today by sessions from one p.m. to four p.m. and Sunday for adults from two p.m. to five p.m.

Guns Stolen From Trailer

GLEN ROSS — Provincial police are investigating the theft of firearms from a summer residence on an island in the Trent River here.

Police say thieves recently broke into a trailer owned by Georgs Doucetie, Toronto, and stole a .22 - calibre rifle, and two shotguns.

Two in City Hold Sweepstake Tickets

Glittering prospects for the biggest Christmas gifts ever known in the Quinte area today were held out to two Bellevillians.

Both are the anonymous holders of tickets on the Christmas-week Irish Hospital Sweepstakes.

The Dec. 27 running of the Sweeps Hurdle carries a first prize of about $52,000, a second prize of about $26,000. The Bellevillians are assured at least of a prize by having their tickets drawn.

The Belleville ticket holders, identified only by the name of the horses, tickes number and nom-de-plume, are:

Firm Favorite, NBE 80474; Third Hit, and Private Room, PRB 74615, Sandy.

Hey! New Year's Eve Just Around Corner

New Year's is just around the corner and the city's area night spots are already in preparation for the big event.

However, after a survey of the local party scene, it would seem a lot of house parties will be the order of the day this New Year's.

- The Red Lion in Trenton will hold a dance and after-midnight buffet, with music provided by the Playboys (Picton).
- The Cave (Glen Miller) will have its annual dance and costume design by Lindsay Hallam, costume and set designer of the successful Dark of the Moon, is well in motion.

Mr. Higgins added that he felt The Lark could be one of the best plays of the season for the Belleville Theatre Guild.

Joan of Arc. Already, production work has begun. Labor of set design by Stuart and costume design by Lindsay Hallam, costume and set designer of the successful Dark of the Moon, is well in motion.

Mr. Higgins added that he felt The Lark could be one of the best plays of the season for the Belleville Theatre Guild.

Asseltine Trio.

- The Legion in Belleville will hold its annual New Year's dance and the orchestra will be Len Moore and the Escorts.
- Open House will be held in the Dutch Mill Inn in Trenton, with Bob Fisher and the Dawn Patrol;
- The Sun Valley will also be having dancing and entertainment.
- The Tops, Queen's Motor Hotel and the Quinte Hotel have no New Year's party plans so far.

So, if you have not made any party plans yet, take note — you may just want to take advantage of the opportunities available in the Belleville area.

The Lark Needs More Men

Plans are developing into practical work as Belleville Theatre Guild prepares its production of The Lark for this year's Eastern Ontario Drama League Festival in Ottawa in March.

Currently, auditions for parts in the play are being held at the Guild's Pinnacle Playhouse. They will continue tonight and Sunday.

Artistic resident director Roy Higgins said this morning that auditions for parts were going slowly.

"We're short men for parts in the play," he said. "We're going to need more men if the play is to go on."

Picton Abuses Town Christmas Present

PICTON — Town council gave residents of Picton their usual Christmas present this month, this time gift wrapping it.

The "gift wrapping" was a newspaper advertisement informing the public that free parking would become effective in Picton from Dec. 11 to Dec. 26.

In previous years, parking was free in the holiday season, but owing to a lack of advertisement, many residents still deposited their nickels and dimes.

Shortly after the advertisement appeared in the Picton Gazette, a letter from Ronald W. Macpherson, chairman of the Police Commission in Napanee, was received and circulated by the press.

In an excerpt from his letter, he remarked, "I know that Chief Pitt and his excellent police force will handle the traffic problem, but their task will not be lightened by the misguided benevolence of the council's lifting the meter regulations."

This morning, Sgt. Scott Hele of the Picton Police Department said that at least one prediction in Mr. Macpherson's letter came true.

Picton merchants and their employees are parking in the town's business section monopolizing about 50 parking meters.

Sgt. Hele noted that this leaves about (15) meters available for use by an estimated 6,000 persons.

With the exception of the merchants monopolizing the council's gifts, Sgt. Hele feels the new parking system is running smoothly.

He reported there has been no traffic congestion on Picton's main street.

He partially attributed the easy flow of traffic this season to the new stop light at the Ross and Main St. intersection.

The absence of military personnel shopping in town has reduced the number of cars travelling the main street, according to the police spokesman.

Peterborough Reserve Added

Militia Cut Trims Hasty Ps' Strength, Extends Territory

The banners of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment are being carried far outside its historic Quinte home — grounds in the current army reserve revision.

The famed militia unit, now readying to mark a half-century of service in 1970, has survived the latest reserve cutbacks.

But it must now absorb personnel from two Peterborough units which disappear in yesterday's announced reductions.

These basic details of the regiments' re-organization were confirmed by its commanding officer, Lt.-Col. F. Ross Allan:

(1) The regiment now will consist of two companies — one attached to headquarters at Belleville, the second in Peterbrough.

(2) In effect, its Peterborough contingent will be raised from personnel of the 50th Field (Artillery) Regiment and a RCEME squadron.

(3) The Belleville unit will be reduced from an effective strength of 218 to 89. Peterbough will raise a 74-man company.

Lt.-Col. Allan believes the reductions from the Belleville unit can be achieved painlessly — by way of "non-effective" personnel and militiamen already planning to retire within coming months.

He said the regiment was proud it was being retained at its traditional headquarters—Belleville.

"We're looking forward to the future with confidence. Our attitude certainly is a positive one," he added.

He called the Peterborough unit a "fine group" although as a militiaman he "sympathized" with its members.

The reorganization will make greater demands on the regiment.

While its headquarters strength will be reduced it must fill the same functions as an active reserve infantry unit.

In effect, this means the same jobs must be accomplished with fewer men.

"But we're looking forward to building an efficient, if tighter, organization," said the colonel.

For Lt.-Col. Allan the territorial expansion means much more travel. On militia service he must now travel regularly between both cities.

Coincidentally, the Peterborough company will be commanded by a man already known to the regiment.

Major Jack Richardson served 18 months with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in Belleville about six years ago, said Lt.-Col. Allan.

The retention of the regiment in Belleville is also of wide sentimental significance for thousands of local veterans.

Now the sole reserve unit in the area, it represents traditions dating back to the yeoman dates of settlement.

Founded in 1920 it saw its finest hour as one of the earliest - mobilized reserve units of World War II. Its citizen-soldiers from Prince Edward and Hastings counties won the respect of their regular army comrades for notable military achievements in Italy and northwest Europe.

It also had some noteworthy wartime commanders — including Howard Graham, who later became chief of staff and Britain's Lord Tweedsmuir, son of a one-time governor-general.

In peacetime the regiment has been equally lucky, surviving a series of national reorganizations.

The last major regrouping — in 1954 — saw its armories in Picton, Madoc, Millbrook, Trenton and Port Hope closed out. Since that time, the regiment has operated out of Belleville.

Its assignment to territory as far west as Peterborough places its scope well beyond the counties from which it draws its name.

But Lt.-Col. Allan has no word on any possibility that the regiment's historic name will be changed to more closely relate to its actual locale.

"There's no indication of change in regimental names in the foreseeable future," he says. "Certainly the roots of this regiment are in Prince Edward-Hastings."

The cutbacks, announced yesterday by Defence Minister Cadieux, had been the subject of continuing representations in recent months from local members of parliament — among them Belleville's Lee Grills.

Today, Mr. Grills said he was content the regiment was retaining its Belleville unit and armory.

"I realize the importance of the tradition that the Hastings and Prince Edward regiment has had through the years," said the Hastings MP. "And how important it was to military men in the area.

"I'm happy they (the government) are going to leave our Hasty Pees intact.

Family Of 3 Injured

STIRLING — A Frankford-area couple and their teen-age son last night were injured when the family's two snowmobiles collided with a car near here.

It was the first serious mishap involving snow vehicles in the Belleville area.

In hospital is Shirley Kenneth Towes, 48, RR 3, Frankford, his wife, Marie Jean Towes and 16-year-old son Rodney.

Mrs. Towes suffered a fractured leg and her husband and son possible head injuries in the collision on the Town Line Road a mile west of here.

Police say the accident occurred near the brow of a hill when the vehicles collided with a car driven by John Murray, 21, of RR1, Stirling.

Mrs. Towes was driving the lead snowmobile followed by her husband and son on the second machine. The oncoming automobile mounted the first snowmobile, demolishing the vehicle, then collided with Mr. Towes' machine, say police.

Quinte Students Add to Exchange

Approximately 800 of Quinte Secondary School's students celebrated the beginning of a two-week Christmas holiday yesterday afternoon with dancing and games and the Yuletide spirit of giving.

It was a three-fold Christmas carnival, sponsored by the Quinte Secondary girls Athletic club.

The event served two purposes, that of closing the Christmas term of school with fun and gaiety, and, at the same time, in the true spirit of giving, offering gifts to several needy families.

Students were allowed admission to the event only if they brought a small gift. Placed with others in hampers, they are to be distributed to Belleville citizens whose Christmas will not be as gay.

Once admission was paid the students took advantage of carol singing, games of skill and chance, and a rock dance with music donated free by Bill the Lizard.

Games were a highlight of the program, especially a competition between gangs and ganges gallery set'up in the students' cafeteria. Pictures of teachers and Quinte Secondary School officials were the tantalizing targets for students with an itchigun.

In the gymnatorium, a gigantic Christmas tree testified to the meaning of the occasion.

It was the first year that Quinte Secondary has closed the Christmas term with such an event, avoiding the traditional Christmas assembly. And the result was a complete success.

Teachers and students alike mixed together to take part in the celebrations. Even Santa Claus made an appearance for some of the games and if he appeared underweight, it could have been his antics on the dance floor that diminished his "bowl of jelly" appearance.

OBC POWEREADING COURSE SHOWS RESULTS

The POWEREADING course which is offered at Ontario Business College is now being taught to students from age 13 to age 60. The course is suitable for educational backgrounds from Grade 7 to University graduates, plus years in industry and teaching. It has been a total success. Each student is pre-tested and tested with a 10 part reading ability test and tested again at the completion of the course. These tests show the reading skill improvement in many areas of reading skills.

The testing program illustrates that neither age nor educational background is necessarily an indication of reading ability. Some University graduates have an overall reading ability equivalent to Grade nine, and ages equivalent of 10-13 years old persons, in their reading skills.

A third year university student at OBC tested at the 99th percentile, a reading comprehension in the 17th percentile, and grade equivalent to less than grade 13. This was increased to the 99th percentile, 99th percentile comprehension in the 95th percentile, and grade equivalent to Grade 12 plus, which is the highest rating marked. This is a typical case of a student with a high I.Q. which we have on file and which shows a marked improvement in reading skills in every case, without exception.

The next term will be 20 minutes per day, five days per week. Starts to come for a free test. New evening classes will begin the following week.

While the college will be closed for vacation Dec. 19 to Jan. 5, it will remain open for enrolment and telephone — Call 962-0870 anytime.

Death of Four Inquest Tonight

PICTON — An inquest will be conducted tonight in connection with the death of a Prince Edward County family asphyxiated in their Green Point home in October.

Chandlier Ross Sears, 45, his wife, Darla, 30, and their children, Robbie 4, and Debbie, 2, were found dead by a neighbor, Mrs. Malcolm Fearn.

The inquest originally scheduled to have been last week was postponed due to the absence of Crown Attorney, Richard Sheehy.

Quinte Secondary's Staff Gets the Point

Students at Quinte Secondary School yesterday afternoon "took the opportunity to "point out" their feelings about teachers and the vice-principal and principal during a dart game offered as part of the school's Christmas carnival. Staff members furnished photographs of themselves for the dart game.

Councillor to Resign Due to Ill Health

TWEED — Kenneth Thompson advised fellow councillors at the recent meeting held this week of the Tweed Village Council, that he planned to resign from office December 31, 1969, for reasons of health. His letter of resignation, will be sent to Clerk R. D. C. Morton this week.

Mr. Thompson was first elected to council on December 4, 1967, when he defeated Mrs. Jeanette Whitfield for fourth place on council by a 54 vote margin to become the lone male member of the 1968 council, thus bringing to an end the reign of Canada's first all-woman council.

Other council members at that time were Reeve Barbara Allen and councillors Christine Sinclair, Amelia Bosley and Dora Courneyea. Mr. Thompson was re-elected to council in December 1968.

Garrett Morton said he expected council would accept Mr. Thompson's resignation, when it was received.

Mr. Thompson has had a long record of public service in Tweed, having served for 16 years on the Tweed Memorial Parks Board before becoming a member of council. More recently he has been chairman of the finance and property committee of council, and was instrumental in arranging for the erection of the new fire hall on Metcalfe Street, Tweed. (now under construction on the old rink property).

Brighton Couple Hurt

TRENTON — A Brighton couple were admitted to hospital here last night with multiple minor injuries when their car crashed on Highway 2.

Hugh Currie, 45, and his wife Marilyn, R.R. 2, Brighton, were taken to Trenton Memorial Hospital where Mr. Currie is to be examined for possible leg fractures.

The Currie automobile crashed in the ditch west of here.

Christmas Thoughts

Thursday night's snowfall brought a real Christmas atmosphere to the area. Colored lights heightened the cosy aspect of living rooms and by morning there was a mantle of white over trees and hedgerows.

It is a good time to be aware of the true meaning of Christmas — the celebration of the birth of Christ, a time for selflessness, a time for giving. This year the youth of the community are becoming more involved in this kind of endeavor, as witness Moira secondary's music and drama night in aid of the Christmas Exchange, the Queen Victoria public school youngsters' reception for residents of Hastings Manor, and earlier, Nicholson Catholic College's collection of canned food for distribution to the needy.

Doubtless there have been other efforts of a similar nature and all are eloquent of the growing awareness of community needs being demonstrated by Belleville youngsters.

It is fitting too that we think of people overseas and give such financial aid as we are able through the various church and welfare organizations. Canada is rendering such aid in Vietnam — at the medical rehabilitation centre in Qui Nhon.

Here 13 Canadians, seven of them women, assisted by U.S., Vietnamese and New Zealand medical personnel, are working to restore crippled Vietnamese to something like normal lives. A recent Globe and Mail article by David Van Praagh said the centre's clean buildings and uncluttered grounds "stand out like an oasis of tidiness, peace and quiet."

One of only three in Vietnam, the centre does a heroic job against big odds. Five hundred artificial limbs are fitted annually, but Central Vietnam alone has about 8,000 of the approximately 40,000 amputees in the country. So there is a great deal of experimentation with makeshift materials to speed up the pace.

Photographs tell the tale. In one four boys are seen with crutches and another has a wheel chair. In another Kevin McKenzie, a brace-maker from Halifax, is seen giving a hand to a little girl, nine-year-old Nguyen Thi Hoai; she has a crutch under her right arm and her left foot is heavily bandaged.

In Canada this Christmas we are, as ever, well off.

Commonwealth Links

Former Conservative leader John Diefenbaker sees Canada's links with the monarchy breaking one by one — the latest cleavage being the decision to remove the Queen's portrait from several dominion bill denominations and to replace it with Sir John A. Macdonald's and other Canadian leaders of earlier times.

Like the tempestuous flag debate back in 1963, the response of Mr. Diefenbaker and those who have similar ideas is mainly emotional; yet there are sound practical reasons for maintaining our ties with the Monarchy.

Canada is the most prominent member of the Commonwealth after Britain. With Australia and New Zealand it is the main bastion of the Commonwealth ideal. For this country to sever its special ties with Britain and the Commonwealth would be to strike a blow at this influential institution.

However we do not regard the decision to honor former Canadian leaders in this fashion as a significant move in this direction. The Queen's portrait will still be seen and we are certain Canada will continue to fulfill its Commonwealth obligations as conscientiously and meaningfully as in the past.

Retires At 18

One of the Commonwealth's leading women swimmers, New Zealander Tui Shipston, is retiring — at the age of 18.

Regarded as one of the top contenders for honors at next year's Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh, Miss Shipston nevertheless is calling it a day. Perhaps she does not want to suffer the same fate as world mile champion and fellow countryman Peter Snell who attempted a North American tour when he was past his peak, with disastrous results.

At 18 Miss Shipston could scarcely be regarded as past her peak, but she said recently that since returning from a tour of Canada in May she had been unable to raise enough enthusiasm for the sport. To that extent then she is certainly past her best; motivation is vital to success in any endeavor, and if it is not there Miss Shipston has done well to quit.

Clerks Get $6,500

Postal Workers' Representative Protests Wage Schedule

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — So the postal workers kept their promise and delivered the Christmas mail.

But to hear union president William Hosie, you can not be sure what sort of mail service the future will bring unless the federal government's Treasury Board comes through with satisfying generosity in the collective bargaining.

There is an implication there of still another postal strike.

So, after three mail stoppages and regional wild-catting, what is new about yet another foulup?

Just this—the other side of the story — as told in a letter to this column by George B. Laviolette, secretary of the Railway Mail Clerks Association, from North Bay.

In the interests of fairness—because he complains that postal workers have been getting it in the eye — his letter, in its essential sections, is reproduced here:

In the last few years I have noticed that your column concerning the postal service is increasingly bitter and one-sided.

Your, own salary is probably between $25,000 and $50,000 a year (No he's not) yet for some reason you seem to begrudge a postal worker a decent salary.

The postal clerk gets $5,500 a year before deductions.

An apartment in North Bay starts at $125 and goes up rapidly.

In Toronto a recent survey showed the average wage for apartment - dwellers is now $7,500 to $7,900. People buying homes in Toronto earn an average of $11,200.

Homes in North Bay, Ottawa and other smaller cities are beyond the financial reach of the postal worker.

Do you realize that Toronto garbage collectors make more than some classes of post office employees? It is a matter of record that postal workers in Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent's day were better off than they are now.

Far from being a patsy, as you contend, the federal Treasury Board is a tough autocratic employer when it comes to collective bargaining.

At the close of World War II, a postal worker outdrew the average policeman and fireman in most cities. Today the postal clerk is almost $2,000 behind.

As for fringe benefits, who are you trying to kid, not the postal workers among your readers, I trust.

Just read the recent contracts negotiated by the steel workers at International Nickel and Steel of Canada. The entire medical, hospital insurance and pension set-up in part of the fact, some steel workers get six weeks' vacation plus extra vacation pay.

We postal workers claim that money deducted from our pay for superannuation covers the whole cost of our pensions, with the government benefiting from the use of our money at four per cent interest.

I doubt that any of this is really news to you, so for goodness sake please try to be fair.

Fringe benefits for senior civil servants may be as good as you claim, but industry is rapidly passing the Post Office department in these extras in the pay pack.

No doubt, like a lot of people you will say, OK, if we do not like it, then quit and find another job.

Please remember that a lot of us started 20 or 30 years ago under entirely different conditions than today's.

Moreover, the Post Office department is hardly getting the cream of the staff crop now. Could it be that the pay is too low?

In some countries where the Post Office department has been more neglected than here, they are lucky to get their mail at all, there is so much incompetence and even pilfering.

And is it not a fact that here in our country you never have to worry about losing mail?

As for private enterprise doing the job, well, the Post Office department loses millions a year ($97,000,000 currently), and so if business took over the mail service it would have to raise the rates enormously and drop such money losing branches as rural routes.

Have the firms that deliver shopping circulars deliver the mail? Would you entrust your mail to a bunch of kids?

And that is a postal worker's side of the sad mail story.

But Mr. Laviolette is not all that upset the he has lost his sense of humor, for he closes his letter with this wry remark:

"I can think of lots more to say, but I have to conserve my energy so I have in my weekly trip to the bank to deposit my savings!"

Helsinki Talks Show Promise

Ottawa Le Droit:

War causes a lot of talk. Peace does rarely . . . and yet, . . . a policy of pacification and disarmament is being worked out.

This time the spotlight turns toward Helsinki, . . . where . . . the Russians and the Americans . . . seem to have decided to extend their hands to each other. . . .

The meeting in Helsinki is a sort of summit meeting fraught with consequence, and no longer a vain parade of good wishes. It follows on the simultaneous ratification by Moscow and Washington of the treaty on non-proliferation of nuclear weapons. . . .

The treaty . . . would have no significance if the superpowers themselves were not deciding to limit the production of arms that they alone possess. The discussion at Helsinki is a beginning of the execution of this promise.

The Americans and Russians are treating each other as friends there. . . . Their relations have evolved greatly since Khrushchev's shoe-pounding of the rostrum in the United Nations.

Under the cold, grey sky of that Nordic country there is reason to believe that a thaw is going on in Russo-American relations.

La Salle's Treat for Local Children

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

On behalf of the staff and pupils of the School for Retarded Children on John Street, and through the medium of your paper, I should like to thank the La Salle Ambulance people and their helpers for their treat on Tuesday afternoon.

Being personally greeted by Santa, receiving treats and hot chocolate while admiring the exhibits, was a highlight in their Christmas festivities. Those who show the determination and hard work to erect such a display deserve public thanks; a letter to Mr. Meeks was simply not enough.

Among the many kindnesses afforded our children at this particular time of year, I mention also the party given for them at St. Michael's by a grade 8 art class under the direction of Miss Scissons. Leaving their own surroundings and being so warmly greeted in another school was a real experience. This type of integration is excellent, for their need of acceptance is being met at the same time. Thanks to that group also.

It would be impossible here to mention all the season's rem embrances from so many, but up one and all, thank you and God bless.

KATHERINE PRYOR,
Principal, Belleville School for Retarded Children.

A Coup That Failed

In Panama A Strong Man Tightens Hold on Country

By RAY DICK

WASHINGTON (CP) — Panamanian strongman Gen. Omar Torrijos is back in power, stronger than ever, thanks to a bungling and atomic easy attempt that U.S. Latin-American watchers would like to ignore.

While the general was loyally supporting two Panamanian horses at a Mexico track last Sunday, two of his colonels in the 5,000-man, American-trained National Guard announced they had taken over, banning Torrijos's return.

Less than 24 hours later, Col. Ramiro Silvera and Col. Amado Sanjur were under arrest by loyal officers after a counter-coup with little gunfire and no casualties.

Dressed in green fatigues and wildly waving a bush hat from atop a Volkswagen, Torrijos reentered the capital Wednesday night, greeted by some 10,000 persons and a military band playing marches and cha-chas.

The enthusiastic greeting was surprising to many observers because the 41-year-old strongman, who has unofficially controlled the country of 1,300,000 since a military coup 14 months ago, was not considered popular.

A military junta supposedly ruled Panama after the October, 1968, coup which ousted civilian president Arnulfo Arias after only 11 days in office. Colonels Jose Pinilla and Boliver Urrutia were chiefs of state.

It turned out they were no more than figureheads, and Torrijos, as commander of the police-military guard, has openly ruled Panama with massive publicity campaigns pushing reforms and a nationalistic stance.

In reality, observers say, it was an undisguised dictatorship, complete with press censorship, jailed political leaders and a vague promise of democratic elections sometimes in the future.

Coup leaders claimed Torrijos was fostering a "cult of personality" and was soft on alleged Communist activities.

What apparently won over the man in the street was Torrijos's act of "machismo" (masculinity) in returning to Panama to face the coup.

The major problem now facing Torrijos is what to do with the two colonels who led the abortive coup and the other two colonels who are technically chiefs of state.

Another question is how the new development will affect Panama's relationship with the U.S., which has many strategic and vital Panama Canal Zone since 1903.

In a statement Thursday, Torrijos said that the two leaders of the attempted coup, Silvera and Sanjur, will have their "situation decided by the high command of the officers' corps."

The two junta colonels, Pinilla and Urrutia, who signed an official order dismissing Torrijos as commander of the guard during the coup, are confined in the presidential palace.

Popular opinion among observers here is that Pinilla and Urrutia will get off with a severe dressing down. To dismiss them would mean a break in governmental succession that could embroil Panama in questions of diplomatic recognition with other countries.

Relations between Panama and the U.S., although no model of serenity, should not be basically affected, with the exception that Panama now is solidified as a dictatorship and Torrijos may be harder to deal with than before his comeback victory.

Guidelines in Selecting Christmas Toys

LONDON (CP) — There's more than meets the eye behind the annual Christmas task of hunting for youngsters' toys, says a guide issued by a British consumer organization.

Your choice could widen a small child's horizons or implant the seeds of frustrations and insecurity.

The Consumer Council, a government-sponsored advisory body, has published a parents' primer on buying toys for pre-teen children which lays down some guidelines to the sort of playthings suitable for each age level between one month and 12 years.

Concentrating on the younger age groups, its basic advice is keep it simple. Elaborate mechanical toys will either confuse or bore a child who would get much more fun from an uncomplicated object around which he or she can fabricate fantasies and adventures.

"Inside every child is the ability to discover, be inventive and express himself, but this can be stifled unless he has the opportunity to use his abilities," says the guide, called Aged Buying Toys.

Particularly among pre-school children, the urge to explore and invent is a strong and valuable drive which develops their awareness of the world around them.

Even before they can walk or talk, babies absorb information about their environment at a remarkable rate.

Child psychologists now believe that children cram more basic learning experience into the first five years than any other period in their lives.

During that time, a child learns to "talk, use his hands and mix with other people — all major skills," says the guide.

In the early months, ideal toys are ones which exploit this ability to soak up experience by stimulating inexperienced senses.

As early as one month, a baby can be attracted by vividly colored mobiles hung near his cot which spin and shimmer in warm air currents.

At later months rag dolls and unbreakable rattles appeal to the child's senses of touch and hearing.

By one year, the quickly developing youngster has reached the stage of pushing and pulling wheeled toys around the floor and putting simple objects together (such as) chunky wooden pegs into a board or piling building blocks on each other.

Graduating to more demanding toys, which acquires vital physical and mental skills on which almost all future development depends.

Imaginative children seek to copy their parents and the adult world by adapting their own playthings to fit the situations they see around them, the experts contend.

A back-yard climbing frame — which makes them feel big and important" — can become anything four- and five-year-old children imagine it to be.

Adults often tend to forget this need to invent fantasies around playthings and instead give children complicated toys with limited scope for adaptability.

A 12-year-old will be fascinated by an electric motor-racing set, but a less-sophisticated six-year-old will quickly lose interest when he discovers there is nothing else he can do with it.

Complex toys which break too easily will confuse a young child unable to understand that an electric model automobile wasn't made to be jumped on or floated in the bath tub.

Feeling his toy has failed him, a youngster may experience a sense of frustration expressed either in a brief temper tantrum or a more prolonged period of insecurity and withdrawal, especially if he gets a scolding for wrecking the expensive present.

He may interpret the failure as his fault rather than resulting from the toy's flimsy construction.

Hospital Ho! Ho!

Christmas came suddenly alive for youngsters at Belleville General Hospital yesterday, as Santa Claus dropped in at the paediatrics ward. The jolly gent's visit — complete with presents — was part of a Christmas party staged by the Women's Hospital Auxiliary.

Public School Students Celebrate Christmas Early

DESERONTO — Deseronto Public School marked the first Christmas since the opening of the addition. It is the first time Deseronto public school children have had an auditorium in which they could assemble and enjoy entertainment put on by the pupils.

Every room has its own decorations, and nearly every one has its own Christmas tree. Most of them have had their own private parties and small concerts.

The front entrance is practically all glass and this has been transformed into a stained glass window through the work of some of the pupils of grades seven and eight.

In the gymnasium — assembly hall is a large mural, a winter scene with trees in the foreground as large as the huge Christmas tree standing in front. It was brought into being by the pupils in about two hours under the direction of Mrs. Roger of Belleville, the art supervisor.

Friday was the big day, with a concert in the assembly hall where classes displayed their talent to all the school. Parents were invited for the afternoon, when school choirs provided the entertainment, until a great commotion announced the coming of Santa Claus — on the fire truck, with the firemen as his helpers. They presented a bag of Christmas treats to every child, and to all their small brothers and sisters. Then Santa Claus made the rounds of the nursing homes and visited the tots.

ST. JOSEPH'S CWL

The monthly meeting of the St. Joseph's CWL was held recently in the parish hall.

President Clarke announced that the "Teenage Dance" will be held December 28 in St. Joseph's school gymnasium. Music will be supplied by "The London Fog". The dance is open to all Belleville teenagers from grade nine up. Admission will be 50 cents per person.

Season's greetings were extended to Monsignor Carley and Father Gauley and gifts were presented to each.

The "meals on wheels" chairman reported a turn out of 30 for the dinner in addition to those meals taken out.

The business meeting was adjourned and the Christmas party got underway.

Entertainment was provided by Mary, Teresa and Susan Nagode when a repertoire of piano duets and Christmas songs were enjoyed. Sister Mary Avila provided the accompaniment for a general sing-song before playing "Court Whist" began. Father Crazley won the prize for having the highest score and Mrs. Tugnett won the draw on the fruit cake.

A buffet meal concluded the evening's activities. The next meeting will be held in February.

FRIENDSHIP CIRCLE ELMBROOK

The December meeting of the Elmbrook Friendship Circle was held at the home of Mrs. Arnold Ackerman with an excellent attendance.

The devotional part of the program was in charge of Mrs. Raymond Jinks, the theme being "Spirit of Christmas". The Christmas Scripture reading was given by Mrs. Jinks, followed by a most impressive candlelight service, with Mrs. George Benson being Joy, Mrs. Gorsline as Hope, Mrs. Orval May as Courage, Mrs. Jack Weisman as Peace, Mrs. Frank Ditchburn as Grace, and Mrs. Arnold Welbanks as Love.

President, Mrs. Arnold Ackerman took charge of the business portion of the meeting. An informative Christian Stewardship reading was given by Mrs. Gladys Lister.

The nominating committee report was given by Mrs. Reginald Moore as follows: president, Mrs. Howard Norton; treasurer, Mrs. Arthur Stone; press reporter/secretary, Mrs. Orval May.

The next meeting is to be held at the apartment of Mrs. Gorsline in Picton with Mrs. Jinks having the lunch. Mrs. Ackerman the program, Mrs. Benson the contest.

After some discussion, it was decided to hold the future meetings on the second Thursday of the month, in alternate months. A contest conducted by Mrs. Howard Norton, regarding the number of words to be formed from the word "stocking" was won by Mrs. Moore.

The distribution of gifts from one's "Secret Pal" then took place, followed by the choosing of a new "Secret Pal" for 1970. A tasty Christmas lunch was served by the hostess and Mrs. Reg. Moore.

Marmora and Beaver Creek WMS

MARMORA — Rev. and Mrs. W. A. McMillan hosted the Christmas meeting of Marmora and Beaver Creek W.M.S. of the Free Methodist Church recently.

The singing of a carol, was followed by prayer led by Mrs. Stewart Hardy. Two chapters of the study book dealing with Biafra and Nigeria were discussed by Mrs. Ron Brown.

Roll call was answered by each member exchanging her African Christmas greeting, "Omubie Ukisimusu", and placing a small gift for missionary boxes under the tree.

A skit "A visit to Rhodesia and South Africa for Christmas", was presented by Mrs. McMillan and Mrs. Harry Mawer who portrayed missionaries from those localities respectively. "The Christmas Story" as told by St. Matthew, was read by Mrs. Everett Derry, and "A Christmas Message from Africa" by Virginia Strait read by Mrs. Carl Bird, showed the real of these missionaries to be back at work in the mission fields. Two true Christmas stories by Alice Taylor entitled "God Sent Gifts" were read by Mrs. Everett Barrons. "In A Stable", a report from the dark continent, was given by Mrs. Hardy.

Prayer by Mrs. Alex McPaul concluded the Christmas program, and a lunch was served by Mrs. McMillan.

NSA Holds Christmas Meeting

"Getting to Know You" was the theme for a festive Christmas meeting of the Bay of Quinte Chapter of the National Secretaries Association held on Tuesday, December 16, 1969 at the Quinte Hotel, Belleville. Members and guests were given an opportunity to become better acquainted at the Yule Time banquet planned by Phyllis Graham, program chairman, and Joan Wilson and her enthusiastic membership committee.

Surprise guest was Quinte Chapter's Boss of the Year, Mr. O. F. Bradley, secretary-manager of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce.

Special guests Martha Kaney, Pamela Lepp, Mildred Wickerson, Priscilla Steels from Belleville; Enid Emery and Mary McGee from Trenton; Helen Vice from Campbellford; and Mrs. Joy Hornosky, former member, joined the gathering.

Installed as members in a candlelight ceremony were Marilyn McGillivray and Bonnie Lea Poole. Included in the ceremony was the installation of Marjory Cross as corresponding secretary, the office having become vacant. The Chapter was also pleased to welcome Mrs. Lorraine Stanley from Campbellford, formerly a Toronto Chapter member, who was reinstated in the association at this ceremonial. Mrs. Gabrielle Watkins tested the retention of the members of last month's program when she distributed a quickie quiz on "How to Win Friends by Telephone."

President Helen Worrell conducted a brief business meeting and summed up the various committees' activities for the year, to date. A meeting early in January of all committee chairmen was announced, at which time all projects for the balance of the year are to be discussed. The president welcomed Mary Ellen Rowland as chairman of publicity for the chapter.

Carol singing, charades and a visit from Santa rounded out the Christmas banquet.

Ann Landers

Husband's Promotion Goes to Wife's Head

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My brother is a pilot for a well known commercial airline. Recently he was promoted to captain. We are all proud of him. He is very modest about the promotion but his wife has let it go to her head to such an extent that she is becoming obnoxious.

Her new writing paper is engraved, "Captain and Mrs. ——." The mailbox is being replaced. When he makes restaurant reservations his wife insists that he say "Captain and Mrs. ——." I'm sure people think he is a son captain or an officer in the U.S. Army.

My husband is the vice president of a business. I wouldn't dream of referring to him socially as the vice president. My sister-in-law is an ardent reader of your column. If you will print my letter and just a word of comment I'm sure it would solve the problem. — NO NAME PLEASE.

* * *

DEAR NO NAME: It is not in good taste to use a business title socially. I do hope, however, when your sister-in-law sees this letter in print, it does not create a bigger problem than the one you wrote about.

* * *

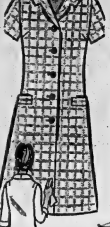
DEAR ANN LANDERS: When a young couple expects a baby six or seven months after a large church wedding, how should the bride's parents break the news to relatives and friends?

We are aware of that old cliche, "It happens in the best of families," but all the same, it's not easy to be nonchalant when the problem sits this letter in print, it does not create a bigger problem than the one you wrote about.

Should we keep quiet and hope the baby is small and say it was premature? Should we fib a little and say the couple was married several more months earlier? Or should we tell the truth and say the bride was pregnant when she was married? — R.P. WORRY.

* * *

DEAR S.P.: Why must you say anything? Your real friends will offer congratulations and ask no questions. The finger-counters, local yentas, and needle-nosed gossips will talk, regardless. Ignore the clods with their small minds and their big mouths. You owe them nothing.



* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please say something to mothers who slap their children across the face, slam things over their heads and call it "discipline." My daughter-in-law and her 7-year-old son live with me. It breaks my heart the way she cracks the boy in the mouth when he interrupts her. I've seen her box his ears one minute and slap him the next because he didn't obey her. I'm sure the child didn't obey her because he couldn't hear.

My son is in Vietnam. When I write I always say, "Everything is wonderful at home. Don't worry." It's not true, Ann. The child is terribly afraid of his mother and she takes out a lot of her anger on the boy. What should I do?—CONCERNED.

* * *

DEAR CONCERNED: Suggest to the child's teacher that she advises the mother to take him to a doctor to get his hearing checked. Then tip off the doctor so he can warn your hot-tempered daughter-in-law against beating the youngster on the head. You will then not be labeled an interfering mother-in-law and you will have achieved the desired results.

German POW Sparks New Arctic Industry

By DORIS CLARK

Let me tell you about what must be the most remarkable of experiments in international welfare.

During the war, a Germanborn chef, Erich Hofman, put in time in a prison camp in the foothills of the Rockies by fiddling around with so-called non-edible foods. Proteins like Arctic char, whale, buffalo meat, muskrat were subject to his scrutiny and ingenuity.

In 1955 he made another trip to Canada and was hired in the Frobisher Bay community of Baffin Land; became in 1967 a specialty foods officer for the Department of Indian Affairs and Northern Development.

Among other things, he produced, out of Buffalo meat, corned brisket, pemmican and buffalo sausage. He experimented with muskrat and came up with smoked muskrat, pickled muskrat, muskrat pepperoni. Then there was whale meat loaf, canned and pickled herring and white fish sausage or weiners.

At one point he went to the Hudson's Bay area and experimented with 100 whales, set up a temporary cannery for preserving. Now people rave about Arctic char. They enjoy whale meat and the inner skin of the white whale or "muktuk".

All of this has developed for the Eskimos a tremendous new industry which will give our Eskimo population employment and prosperity such as they have never known in 1969 four new products, under the brand name "Arctic Circle," are being marketed.

Result: Food for the Eskimos, a new industry and a new way of matching skills with the white man. And all because of a German in a Canadian prison camp.

Dear Doris: This is in answer to "My Daughter in a Wheel Chair", who was getting tired of the same old thing.

Tell her the Canadian Red Cross is looking all the time for young people to knit stockings, long-sleeved sweaters and short - sleeved and V-neck, and would love to have her work for them. And most of all are afghans in blocks. Yarn is supplied. She can put them together or send them in to the Red Cross to put together.

There must be a Red Cross branch where she lives. — Daily Reader.

Dear Doris: I notice a young girl is confined to a wheel chair through an auto accident: she is interested in working with her hands, but is tired of making the things, she has as hobbies.

I have a box of shell craft. I would gladly send it to her. — Wanting to Help

Dear Reader and Help: I have passed your messages on to the mother whose daughter is in a wheel chair. Bless you both!

Points for Parents

By MARY BETSON

Mother: "The baby has been fussy all week, but there's nothing wrong with him, so I just have to let him cry. I can't get the housework done if I have to play with him all the time."

Once baby is past the stage where he sleeps most of the day, he may need a bit of change and distraction and the warmth of companionship to keep him happy.

Mother: "I guess the baby gets tired lying in his crib all the time. I try to put him where he can watch me while I work; or I cuddle and rock him occasionally. It seems to relax both of us."

Kitchen Tested Recipes

A Popular Recipe for Chicken Loaf

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: Do you have a recipe for "Chicken Loaf" using chicken, backs and necks or wings? — Laura N.

ANSWER: The following is popular and is repeated from April 1961.

CHICKEN LOAF
(Using necks and backs)
1½ tbsp. butter or margarine
½ tbsp. flour
½ cups milk
½ cup breadcrumbs
2 egg yolks
1 cup cooked macaroni or rice
1 cup cold cooked chicken meat (see note below)
¼ cup mushrooms
1 tbsp. canned pimiento
½ cup heavy cream
1¼ tspn. salt
1 tsp. parsley, finely chopped
Whites 2 eggs

NOTE: Three raw chicken backs yielded 1½ cups well-packed meat when cooked — so you will have a little for sandwiches mixed with a little mayonnaise. Melt butter, add flour, and stir until well blended; then pour on gradually, while stirring constantly, milk. Bring to the boiling-point and add breadcrumbs, egg yolks, beaten until thick and lemon colored, macaroni cut into ½" pieces, or rice, chicken and raw mushrooms, cut in strips, pimento cut small, cream, beaten until stiff, salt and parsley. Stir until thoroughly mixed and fold in egg whites, beaten until stiff. Turn into a mould lined with buttered paper and cover with foil and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for about 30-40 min. or until set. Remove from mould to hot serving dish and garnish with parsley. Serve with tomato or white sauce.

QUESTION: Would you send me a glaze for cake? . . . Mary W.

ANSWER: I was not sure which type of glaze you wanted but since it is Christmas time I presumed it was for fruit cake.

GLAZE FOR FRUITCAKES

This is shiny but not sticky.

Stir together ⅓ cup light corn syrup and ¼ cup water. Bring this just to a rolling boil and immediately remove from heat. Cool to lukewarm. The cakes must be cold before glaze is poured over and it may be applied before or after storing.

Fruit cakes are usually decorated after they are stored. Cut candied cherries and citron peel into interesting petal and stem shapes and arrange them in flower shapes with leaves etc. If you glaze the cake after it is stored, while glaze is still moist press decorations into it so they will cling and dry with it.

Trainees Receive Cheques

NAPANEE — This week was an exciting one for the trainees at the Adult Rehabilitation Centre Industries (workshop) on the Slash Road.

Each trainee was presented with a cheque, a Christmas bonus from the association. Accompanied by the administrator, Bill Pollard and Mrs. Clifford Pringle a member of the association executive, they were taken to the bank, where each trainee endorsed his cheque and received his money. Then Mr. Pollard, and Mrs. Pringle took them to the stores, where each purchased something which he really wanted for himself.

The two following days were busy ones, being devoted to Christmas orders. Each received another cheque, his first wages.

Thursday was the Christmas party, with the parents and some friends there, all sorts of refreshments and at least four gifts for each trainee.

First Christmas Card Created Instant Furore

The first Christmas card, in the commonly accepted sense is the one illustrated, done by John C. Horsley, R.A., for Christmas 1843.

The card was offered for sale at a shilling and created an immediate furore because of the central panel showing three generations drinking together, children, parents and grandparents.

The Temperance Society immediately assumed the adults were drinking spirits and attacked the circulation of the cards as promoting drunkenness. No objection was raised to the children imbibing.

Interest in this card was revived in the 1880's when The London Times printed a lengthy and authoritative article on Christmas Cards. There was a spate of letters to the editor, including a letter by Horsley, then an old man, giving 1846 as the year he designed the first Christmas card. Subsequently research has proved that 1843 was the actual year of design and printing.

On this side of the Atlantic the first Christmas card appears to have been a trade card of R. H. Pearse of Albany, New York, printed between 1850 and 1852. The card advertises Pearse's Variety Store and Temple of Fancy, with the sentiment, "A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year" and "To" and "From" blank for recipient's and sender's names.

The first record of Christmas cards being printed in Canada is a copyright "entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada in the Year 1881" in the name of Rolph, Smith and Co., Toronto. Directories as early as 1871 list Frank Rolph and Joseph T. Rolph separately as engravers and lithographers. It is assumed one or both formed part of Rolph, Smith and Co. They may have been producing Christmas cards at an earlier date than the copyright.

Rolph, Smith and Co. cards are said to have been of large size and good quality. Since the firm went to the trouble to copyright the design, cards are probably imprinted with their name.

Prices for early cards are hard to estimate. One thing for certain, if you can hold onto your Christmas cards long enough they will increase in value.

Planes Flying, CYC Grounded So MPs Home for Christmas

OTTAWA (CP) — Assured that Canadian planes will keep flying and that the Company of Young Canadians is grounded, Parliament adjourned for the holidays Friday.

The Commons will resume sittings Jan. 12 and the Senate Jan. 27.

Royal assent was given in the Senate to a bill placing the CYC under financial trusteeship and the government introduced another bill in the Commons to reorganize the company and bring it under firm government control.

First reading also was given to a government bill to establish a Crown corporation for the marketing of sailfish.

While the government waited anxiously for assurance that federal air traffic controllers would not vote for a holiday air strike and thus postpone adjournment, members debated the merits of the government's white paper on taxation and approved a motion to refer it to committee study.

The great experiment to let CYC members "do their own thing" in the field of social reform effectively ended after three months with the volunteers in the driver's seat.

Royal assent was given to a bill calling for the company's every expense to be accountable to a government-appointed comptroller.

Almost simultaneously it was announced that Montreal lawyer Max Mendelson, an election worker for Prime Minister Trudeau last year whose law firm specializes in bankruptcies, had been appointed to the position.

The CYC has been run by a permanent council for the last three months, composed of 10 volunteer-elected members and five government-appointed members.

Under proposed amendments to the Company of Young Canadians Act, the government would appoint all members of the council, which would be reduced to between seven and nine members.

CYC executive director Claude Vidal has complained the council has usurped his control over volunteers. The proposed amendments would "make it clear" that the executive director is responsible for supervision of volunteers.

The company also would be brought under the Financial Administration Act," meaning it would be publicly accountable for use of its funds—$1,500,000 a year for the last two years.

The bill to set up a Crown corporation for the marketing of sailfish was mentioned in the speech from the throne which opened the present session of Parliament Oct. 23.

Presented by Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, it "is established for the purpose of curing fish and trading in and marketing cured fish and the by-products of fish curing."

It will be known as the Canadian Sailfish Corp. and its inspectors will be empowered to seize any cured fish or byproducts from fish curing which are in breach of the law.

It will make loans on a seasonal basis to commercial fishermen in participating provinces.

Civil Servants Pensions Increased

OTTAWA (CP) — The government announced Friday it will introduce legislation early in 1970 authorizing public service pension increases ranging from two to 42 per cent.

The Commons announcement, by Treasury Board President C. M. Drury, came shortly before Parliament adjourned for a three-week Christmas recess.

For those who retired in 1952 or earlier, the increase will be 42 per cent, Mr. Drury told the Commons. Those retiring this year would receive two per cent.

The increases are to take effect April 1, 1970.

In some sections of the public service, such as the armed forces and RCMP, where employees retire at an earlier age than most, the increases would be effective from the date of the employee's 60th birthday.

An added aspect of the announcement is the government's plan, to take effect in 1971, of granting yearly pension increases based on the percentage changes in the Canada Pension Plan index provided the increase does not exceed two per cent.

Mr. Drury said the legislation will be introduced in the Commons immediately after the Christmas recess ending Monday, Jan. 12. Further details would be available then, he said.

The announcement followed an "intensive study" of the Public Service Superannuation Act by a special advisory group.

"The committee concluded that such a plan financed by equal contributions of the government and employees is feasible as a continuing method of updating pensions. . . ."

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), a persistent advocate of pension increases, told the Commons he is gratified by the government's decision.

Air Traffic Controllers Vote To Accept Government Offer

OTTAWA (CP)—With a precedent-shattering contract in their grasp, Canada's air traffic controllers announced Friday they had voted to accept a collective bargaining agreement offered by the federal government.

Despite record gains over any other federal-employee union, the 1,000-member Canadian Air Traffic Control Association kept the country — and Parliament — on pins and needles with a strike deadline set for noon EST Sunday.

Government and union negotiators worked out the agreement Wednesday. The union then postponed a Friday strike deadline and began a membership vote.

The Commons and Senate, poised for a start Friday on Christmas recesses, stayed on the job pending announcement of union acceptance of the contract and an end to the strike threat. Had it not come, there was no question the government planned to prevent or end a walkout through emergency legislation.

But settlement was announced about 6 p.m.

John-David Lyon, association president, told a news conference that just under 60 per cent of the membership voted for ratification. Controllers at Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver, however, voted for rejection.

The key union gains: A 13-per-cent pay increase over a 27-month contract; a 36-hour work week; and four weeks vacation after 13 years service. All are tops in federal-employee contracts.

Mr. Lyon discounted reports that some controllers may still stage wildcat walkouts. He expected all to accept the majority vote.

Uganda's President Wounded

KAMPALA (CP) — President Milton Obote of Uganda is recovering from gunshot wounds that are not serious, a government spokesman said today.

The 44-year-old president was shot in the head Friday night at the close of the annual convention of his governing Uganda People's Congress.

Sources said one bullet entered one cheek and passed out the other. Obote was reported to be conscious when he was taken to Mulago Hospital.

The government spokesman said an armed man was arrested in connection with the assassination attempt, but his identity was not revealed.

The president suffered injuries to his lips, teeth and tongue, a medical bulletin said. It said that the president is receiving treatment and there is no cause for alarm.

Soon after Obote was admitted to the hospital, the government declared a state of emergency throughout the country and banned all major opposition political parties.

There was no indication of whether the shooting was politically motivated or linked in any way with resentment in the former kingdom of Buganda following the 1967 abolition by Obote of Uganda's hereditary kingdoms.

The recent death in London of exiled former Kabaka (King) of Buganda, Sir Edward Mutesa, was mourned by thousands of Bagandans in Kampala, which is part of the former kingdom.

A state of emergency had been in force in the southern Buganda region since the former Kabaka was ousted in 1966. It now is extended to the rest of the country, and Ugandan army patrols set up roadblocks at several points around the capital early today.

Entebbe airport, 20 miles from Kampala, was closed for a short time, but was reopened early today and flights were reported operating normally.

Just before the shooting, the delegates to the party congress approved Obote's call for a new "move to the left" for the East Africa country. They also called on Obote to make Uganda a one-party state.

Vikings Can't Let Up

Sunday Performance Still Vital for Four Title Contenders

By HAL BOCK
Associated Press Sports Writer

All of the conference races are over as the National Football League moves into the final weekend of regular season action but it's far from a so-what wrapup for some teams.

Four in particular—Minnesota Vikings, Los Angeles Rams, Cleveland Browns and Dallas Cowboys—are prepping for next week's first round of playoffs.

They'll be trying to stay sharp and avoid any injuries in Sunday's games.

Minnesota prepares for next Saturday's playoff game against Los Angeles by meeting Atlanta Falcons Sunday and the Vikings can't afford to let up.

They've won 12 straight games—second longest one-season winning streak in NFL history. They can tie the mark of 13 set by the unbeaten Chicago Bears 35 years ago.

And with only 123 points allowed, Minnesota has an excellent shot at erasing the 14-game record low of 144 set by Chicago Bears in 1963 and matched by Baltimore in 1968.

Los Angeles has dropped two straight and will try to reverse that trend against Baltimore Colts. The Rams, at 11-2, are still one victory short of a club single-season victory record.

This will also be the Rams' last exposure to the friendly California climate for a while. The Rams leave Tuesday to set up camp in St. Paul for their Western title game at Minnesota.

Cleveland Browns need a victory at New York in their wrapup game to match their club record for victories in a single season and post their best season mark since 1953. The Browns went 11-1 that season and take a 10-2-1 log into Sunday's match with the Giants.

Waiting in the wings for the Browns in the Eastern title game are Dallas Cowboys, who take a 10-2-1 mark in the regular season finale against Washington.

Redskins are 7-4 2- Theande

The Redskins are 7-4-2 and certain of their first winning season since 1955.

Detroit, 8-4-1, can wrap up third-place money in the West with a victory or lie against Chicago. The Bears, 1-12, are completing their worst season in history with the only consolation being Gale Sayers, who leads all NFL rushers with 972 yards —103 more than runner-up Cal Hill of Dallas.

Philadelphia Eagles and San Francisco 49ers tangle on the West Coast with little at stake while Pittsburgh Steelers play at New Orleans against the Saints and St. Louis Cardinals meet Green Bay Packers to complete the regular season schedule.

The pass-receiving title could be decided at the Steeler-Saints game with Pittsburgh's Roy Jefferson and New Orleans' Don Auraszewicz clashing head-to-head and trying to beat Washington's Charley Taylor. All three have made 65 catches, Jefferson for 1,052 yards, Abramowicz for 886 and Taylor for 822.

Trenton, Oshawa Tie 2-2

TRENTON — The Trenton Golden Hawks held second-place Oshawa Crushmen to a 2-2 tie in a surprise show of strength and talent here last night.

The local junior B team was performing with its new coach Roger Drake in command for the first time since he took over officially from Orval (Red) Gravelle earlier this week.

The Hawks goaltender Brian Wilson came on strong after Oshawa forward Lee Paradise scored on a shot along the ice at the first period's five-minute mark.

Craig Bennett and Randy Castelarin from Bim McFall produced Trenton's scoring.

R. Webb saved Oshawa from a loss with his tying counter in the third period.

The result did not change the league standings — Oshawa remains in second place and Trenton in the cellar.

Norm Defelice Stops Lorne O'Donnell with Sprawling Save

Mo-Hawk Present Stings Hornets' Pride

By MAURICE SWITZER
(Sports Editor)

"How badly do you want third place" was coach Davey Jones' pre game dressing room question. Two hours later Belleville Mo-Hawks proved they wanted that OHA Senior A commodity two goals more than the Galt Hornets wanted a win.

A goal by rookie Ray Johnston with less than three minutes remaining in last night's Memorial Arena game broke up a tight 2-2 stalemate and was the lever that prized out a 4-2 Belleville win over the defending Allan Cup champions.

Johnston's goal — a quick-rising backhand over Galt goalie Norm Defelice's shoulder — was the 19 year old's second game-winner in his first nine Mo-Hawk outings.

The first, ironically, was an overtime goal that gave the Mo-Hawks a 4-3 road win over the same Hornets two weeks ago.

Goals by linemates George Godson and Lorne O'Donnell had given the Mo-Hawks a 2-0 edge until late in the second period of last night's game, played before 1,300 Christmas week supporters.

Dune MacDonald's 30-foot screened-period blast add Bruce Reier's game-tying rebound off a post early in the final period set the stage for Johnston's winner.

With barely a minute remaining in the game defenceman Lou Kanowski provided the Mo-Hawks insurance by sinking a 40-foot drive using Al Ferguson as a two-on-one decoy.

"We played a good game," was coach Jones' rare word of all-inclusive praise. The only thing he faulted in the Mo-Hawk boost to a share of third place in the eight-team senior league was a failure to cash in on scoring opportunities.

Among the more memorable misfits were George Godson's breakaway bobble with the game only three minutes old and Jones' similar miscue on a perfect lead pass from "Wiener" Brown, almost identical to a play in Tuesday's 3-2 loss in Kingston.

Godson was quick to avenge his miscue by drawing first scorer-board blood for the Mo-Hawks.

The slick centre broke up the right side, slufted to the centre to get a clear shot past the Galt defence, and slapped a 25-footer home according to hockey Hoyle — high on the stick side of goalie Norm Defelice.

Godson was a going concern all evening, doing 30 seconds of energy legwork to set up Lorne O'Donnell's second period goal, and earning another helper on Kazowski's insurance marker.

There wasn't really any member of the lineup to give coach Jones nightmares.

The "second line" trio of Jones, Wayne McCaswell and Ray Johnston did first-rate forechecking to earn the game winning goal, and the Godson-O'Donnell-Ferguson trio unleashed one of the most potent ever Mo-Hawk power plays in a two-minute first period shoot-ing gallery with Bob Maxwell serving an interference minor.

And for the first time since its formation, the Gary Dallidayday Ralph Plane - "Shaker" Baker (sometimes B a y Summers) "third line" provided a sefering threat as well as a breather for the other two lines.

Plane almost hit paydirt when he and Dallidav executed a perfect criss-cross play at the Galt blueline early in the first period, but the club captain couldn't flip the puck over a prostrate Defelice.

Back on the blueline, Greg Marchen and Lou Kazowski played among their stronger games, while Steve Rear came up with some critical saves, despite the fact the locals outshot Galt 33-21.

One of the best was a point-blank robbery off Fern Belanger who was left unchecked in the side of the Belleville net while the Mo-Hawks were killing Gary Dallidav's t h i r d period high sticking penalty.

Sunday, the Mo-Hawks embark on the exhausting Queen Sound road trip, and are home Tuesday night seeking to avenge last week's loss to Kingston Aces.

Last night's loss for Galt meanwhile, hurt nothing but the Hornets' feelings.

The defending Allan Cup winners are preparing to leave for a European tour Christmas Day.

Woodstock Uses Junior C Star To Upset Oaks 6-3

Woodstock Athletics, mired deep in the cellar of the eight-team Ontario Hockey Association Senior series, reached into Junior C ranks for player help Friday. Their choice, Don Mears of the local juniors, responded with two goals as the As upset Oakville Oaks 6-3 before 500 fans for their second win of the season.

In other Friday games, Kingston Aces hek first-place Orillia Terriers to a 4-4 tie, Barrie Flyers crushed Owen Sound Crescents 8-1 and Belleville Mo-Hawks dumped Galt Hornets, the defending Allan Cup champions, 4-2.

The Belleville and Barrie wins along with Oakville's defeat created a three-way tie for third place at 24 points, six behind the Hornets and five points ahead of the Aces.

At Woodstock, the As outshot Oakville 36 to 22 as Bob Rutnig, Wayne Goetz, Jerry Harrigan and Gene McLaren completed the scoring. Bob Hawkins, Pete Bettiol and league-leading scorer Jim (Obie) O'Brien replied for the Oaks. The teams have a rematch Sunday night at Oakville.

Two newcomers to the Flyers' lineup accounted for the Owen Sound destruction at Barrie.

Ian Campbell marked his debut in a Barrie uniform with three consecutive goals and defenceman Don Fraser, playing his third game, also scored three times for the winners.

Mike Duheau, Jon Weeks and Pete Panagakis all scored once for the Flyers. Paul Haldane scored the only Owen Sound goal as the seventh-place Crescents went down to their 16th defeat in 21 starts. Barrie held a 49 to 26 edge in shotsm

At Kingston, two third period goals by Moe Galand salvaged the tie for Orillia. George Westfall and George Vail also scored for the league leading to a death overtime period.

Go-for-Broke Chiefs to Test Jets

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kansas City Chiefs are set to unwrap their ornate offensive package at Shea Stadium in New York today, but New York Jets figure they can handle any special deliveries Hank Stram sends their way.

The battle lines were drawn today for the American Football League playoff clash, with Chiefs' coach Stramm promising a "go-for-broke" game plan and the Jets working themselves up for a super effort to rebuff the favored visitors.

Kansas City, runner-up to Oakland Raiders in the Western Division, is a logical choice to oust the Eastern Division champions in the first game of the unprecedented semi-final playoffs. Houston Oilers, second in the East during the regular season, take on the Raiders at Oakland Sunday, with the survivors meeting in the Jan. 4 AFL championship game.

The winner of that game moves on to a Super Bowl berth against the National League champion, Jan. 11 in New Orleans.

The Jets went through the final light workout lasting about 20 minutes Friday while the Chiefs flew into New York for this test in which one element still remains to be decided just before game time.

The element is Jet flanker Don Maynard, premier receiver in quarterback Joe Namath's pass catching corps who has been out for three weeks with a broken bone in his right foot. A decision about activating Maynard will be made about two hours before the game.

The doctor will decide Saturday whether Maynard goes," said coach Weeb Ewbank after the workout. It is anticipated that Maynard will get clearance to play, but how effective he will be on the tender foot remains a question mark.

Despite the question of Maynard's status, the focal point of the battle is expected to be the personal match-up between Namath, who always plays on gimpy legs, and Chiefs' quarterback Len Dawson, who for the first time in his 13 year pro career has been hobbled with a knee injury.

With Dawson testing his knee last week in the season finale against Oakland, the Chiefs threw only six passes during the 10-6 defeat, creating the suspicion that the Kansas City quarterback still was having difficulty.

Stram, however, insists that "Dawson is greatly improved and will be at full efficiency." Stram also has promised that the varied Kansas City offense will be fully employed as it was in the 34-16 regular season victory over the Jets.

"We will," said Stram, "go for broke in this one."

Namath will be the target for the Kansas City front four. At the same time, there is little doubt that the Jets will try to test Dawson's gimpy leg with all-out pass rush, at least early in the game.

Poile Gone, But...

Flyers Still Face Difficult Task Winning in NHL

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Bud Poile says he wants to take a long holiday but two of his friends still have to face the task of keeping the sagging Philadelphia Flyers in contention for the National Hockey League playoffs.

Poile, 45, was fired Thursday as vice-president and general manager of the Flyers, leaving Keith Allen to take over the office duties and Vic Stasiuk still behind the players bench.

One of the first moves Poile made when he took over the club in 1967 was to hire Allen as coach. Last season, Allen was moved up to a position as assistant general manager with Stasiuk, a long-time Poile associate, coming in as coach.

Now Stasiuk, who said Friday his friend's departure "leaves quite a vacuum for me," and Allen, have the job of keeping their fourth-place club in line for the playoffs. They start tonight when the Flyers face the Blues at St. Louis in one of five schedule games.

In one game Friday night, goalie Tony Esposito recorded his fifth season shutout as Chicago Black Hawks downed Oakland Seals 4-0.

Other contests tonight see Detroit Red Wings meeting the Canadiens in Montreal, New York Rangers at Toronto against the Maple Leafs, Boston Bruins visiting the Penguins in Pittsburgh and Minnesota North Stars playing the Kings in Los Angeles.

In Sunday action, Montreal is at Boston, Toronto at Detroit, Oakland at New York, St. Louis at Chicago and the Penguins visit Philadelphia.

The Flyers go into weekend action two points behind Pittsburgh and 13 points back of St. Louis, the West Division leader. The Flyers have only five wins in 27 starts along with 11 losses and 11 ties.

Poile, who saw the Flyers win the West Division championship in their first season, 1967-68, said Friday he plans to stay in Philadelphia for a few months and has no intention of looking for another job immediately.

The former NHL centre, who scored 107 goals in six seasons with Toronto, Chicago, Detroit, New York and Boston, said he received an offer to manage an existing NHL franchise but turned it down.

"I wasn't even interested," he said.

Ed Snider, Flyers board chairman, who owns 60 per cent of the club stock, said Poile was dismissed because of "fundamental differences of opinion."

Poile said Snider's explanation covered "a multitude of sins", but neither man would give further details on their differences.

"I respect the position of all owners to hire and fire anyone they see fit," said Poile. "Other than that, I have no comment."

Snider said Allen's position as general manager was still temporary and he has yet to talk to the 46-year-old Saskatoon native about making the job permanent.

Poile, a Fort William, Ont., native, also lost his position as general manager of Quebec Aces, the Flyer's American League farm club. Snider said Friday a replacement for Quebec is yet to be named.

Bobby Hull opened the Chicago scoring with his eighth season goal in the second period before a crowd of 8,454 at Oakland.

Rookie Cliff Koroll made it 2-0 before the middle period ended and Gene Ubriaco and Jim Pappin provided third-period goals.

Esposito now has two more shutouts than his closest competitors in that department—Ed Giacomin of the Rangers and Jacques Plante of the Blues.

The 26-y e a r-o ld netminder handled only 23 shots to stop the Seals while Gary Smith was pelted with 36 Black Hawks drives in the Oakland nets.

Chicago closed to within two points of fourth-place Detroit in the East Division while the Seals remain in fifth spot in the West.

Oakland defencemen Carol Vadnais and rookie Keith Magnuson of the Black Hawks carried on a running battle for most of the game, getting into three separate fights.

Magnuson suffered a six-stitch cut on his lower lip in the final scrap and Vadnais took a broken nose.

Vadnais took three minor penalties and a five-minute major in the second period while Magnuson sat out two minors and a major. After their third-period scrap, both were assessed majors and misconducts.

Expansion Map for NHL

Vancouver and Buffalo, awarded conditional National League franchises, will begin playing in the 1970-71 season if the franchises are approved. This will expand the present circuit from 12 teams to 14. Teams representing the East Division will be Vancouver, Buffalo, New York, Boston, Montreal, Detroit, and Toronto. The West Division will comprise St. Louis, Minnesota, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Los Angeles, Oakland, and Chicago. (CP Newsmap)

No Danger in Losing Status As Amateur Claims Shaughnessy

MONTREAL (CP) — Frank Shaughnessy, vice-president of the Canadian Olympic Association's Winter Games committee, says he is not aware of any rule that disqualifies an Olympic athlete who participates in a game against professionals.

Shaughnessy Friday confirmed his views, originally expressed in a letter this week to Earl Dawson, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

The Montreal Olympic official bases his summation on an interpretation of the Olympic Eligibility Code as it appears in the 1967 edition of the book The Olympic Games, published by the International Olympic Committee.

Shaughnessy said he had written the letter after he became "puzzled by recent reports with respect to the possible disqualification from Olympic competition of hockey players participating in the 1970 world hockey championships if professional players are included in the lineup of Canada's team."

The International Ice Hockey Federation voted last July at Crans, Switzerland, to allow Canada to use nine professionals to bolster its national team for the 1970 world tournament scheduled for Montreal and Winnipeg next March.

However, it stipulated that none of the guns used should have played in the National Hockey League this season.

Since then, IOC president Avery Brundage of Chicago has said anyone competing with or against professionals in the world tournament will be ruled ineligible for Olympic competition.

In the face of this threat, John (Bunny) Ahearne, IIHF president, has called a special January meeting to study the possibility of reversing the rule.

Charles Hay, president of Hockey Canada, the body appointed to run Canada's national team, said here earlier this week any reversal of form by the IIHF at its January meeting could mean the immediate withdrawal of Canada's entry.

On the other hand, if the IIHF upholds its July decision to allow Canada the professionals, Ahearne says most of the European countries will not come here for the world championship for fear of losing their Olympic eligibility.

Jack Riley Says Referee Favors Eastern NHL Teams

PITTSBURGH (AP) — General manager Jack Riley of Pittsburgh Penguins of the National Hockey League has accused one of the league's referees of being partial to teams in the East Division.

In an official letter of protest sent to the league headquarters Thursday, Riley alleged referee John Ashley has given the West Division Penguins a raw deal each time they have met an East Division team.

"Ashley seems to feel there are just six teams in the league —the six in the Eastern Division —and that all the others don't belong," said Riley.

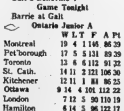
"We've never defeated an East Division team when he was refereeing, although we've played some very good games."

The Penguins are one of six teams in the NHL's West Division which entered the league three seasons ago.

All of the teams in the established East Division have been in the league since at least 1926.

Riley expressed displeasure with Ashley's refereeing in recent games with Detroit Red Wings and Boston Bruins, but exploded following the Penguins 3-2 loss to Montreal Canadiens Wednesday night.

Riley steamed into the referee's dressing room and demanded an explanation from Ashley as to why he had seen fit to hand out a total of 46 minutes of penalties in the first period of the game.



"I'm tired of listening to you," was Ashley's reply.

Penguin coach Red Kelly joined with Riley in criticizing the referee's performance.

"The league should do a lot of checking on this guy," Kelly said.

The Penguins are third in th West, 11 points behind division-leading St. Louis Blues. They play Boston Bruins tonight in Pittsburgh.

Chinnick Proves Worth

Brian Chinnick didn't waste any time Friday night proving to his new employers that he was worth the bother they went to to gain his services.

The former right winger converted to a centre man got his release from London Knights Friday just in time to join Peterborough Petes for their Ontario Hockey Association Junior A contest against the Flyers at Niagara Falls.

Chinnick scored two goals to give the Petes a 2-0 lead early in the second period, and Peterborough went on to a 3-2 win to climb into a tie for the series lead with the idle Montreal Junior Canadiens.

In other games, Kitchener Rangers downed Oshawa Generals 3-1 and Ottawa 67s whipped St. Catharines Black Hawks 6-2.

Christmas On Oil Rig Is Rugged

SEDNETH 1 (CP) — Christmas aboard Sedneth 1 isn't exactly jingle bells and mistletoe but it's an ideal time the spirit is here.

Sednth 1 is the sea drilling Netherlands N.V. oil rig 125 miles southwest of Halifax and Christmas is "just another working day" for most of the single men aboard.

Spending the holidays in the wintry Atlantic drilling for oil is not especially conducive to a spirit of goodwill but for the men of the rig it's become a way of life.

"I've been in this business for 22 years and I've spent more Christmases away from home than I have at home," says Ron Purcell father of three, a drilling foreman from Edmonton who will direct operations aboard the rig this holiday.

"You don't really mind it after all those years. It's just another day."

Glen Yungblut, Shell Canada Ltd.'s offshore drilling supervisor, says the most Christmas aboard the rig is nothing special but at mealtime on Christmas day the cooks make up for it.

"I remember when we were drilling off the West Coast one year we had the biggest feast I've ever seen laid out anywhere," he says. "We even had stuffed salmon."

Yungblut will spend Christmas ashore with his family in Dartmouth, N.S. this year.

There'll be no wine or other spirits to go with the meal on Sednth 1. "We considered it, but the problems it might create wouldn't be worth the little bit of cheer," he says.

"Most of the men have spent a lot of Christmases on rigs," says Yungblut. "We've bought of shutting down but we would not only lose a day but weekends and holidays are when something usually happens—Christmas seem to be a favorite."

John Mann of Universal Services, catering aboard the rig, says the 58 men here, including Dutchmen, Americans, Germans, Arabs, Norwegians and Americans, will have a special Christmas menu.

"They'll get lobster, steak or ham. Turkey is not a treat; they have it once a week."

The 18 Dutchmen aboard will enjoy a Dutch stew of rabbit, turkey and bacon.

Drab surroundings will be brightened by two fir trees flown out along with decorations, nuts, tangerines and grapes. The cooks will set up the trees in the cafeteria kid recreation room, complete with candles.

Mr. Mann says the Netherlands company, drilling under contract for Shell Canada Ltd., tries to send the married men ashore at Christmas and the bachelors at New Year's.

"It's nice for the married men to spend it with their families. They don't mind coming back for New Year's because it's just a quick drink at midnight and then it's all over."

Tweed

TWEED — Birthday greetings are extended to Mr. Cecil Clark of Arden, Ontario, who will celebrate his 82nd birthday on December 28, 1969. His wife has also passed the 80 mark. Both are comparatively well.

Mrs. Russell Whitfield, of Tweed, (south Victoria Street) is at present a patient in the Belleville General Hospital, following an automobile accident on Highway No. 37, recently. She is reported improving and is expected home at an early date.

A surprise anniversary party for Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Scott of Arden, Ontario, was held on the occasion of their 40th wedding anniversary at their home recently. The couple received many gifts from their family and friends. About 35 persons attended the get-together.

POPULAR BOOK

FREDERICTON (CP) — Someone Before Us, written by Dr. George Frederick Clarke, a noted Canadian historian and architectural critic Woodstock, N.B., now is in its second printing. The book's publishers, Brunswick Press of Fredericton, said the book had been given a new jacket for the second printing—a color reproduction of a painting by Edwin Tappan Adney showing a Malisheet hunter and guide. The book tells the story of the Micmac and Maliseet Indians and the early French, English, Irish and Scottish explorers.

Molson Bid Fails

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"She's going through an Italian phase. Last night she served me stewed garlic in wine sauce."

Neonex Wins Control of Maple Leaf Mills Ltd.

TORONTO (CP) — Neonex International Ltd., a Vancouver-based conglomerate, said Friday it has gained 51 per cent of the outstanding shares of Maple Leaf Mills Ltd. of Toronto.

Neonex thus beat out Molson Industries Ltd. for control of Maple Leaf.

James A. Pattison, Neonex chairman, made the announcement at 4 p.m. after a hectic trading day during which 376,435 Maple Leaf Mills shares changed hands on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

Neonex agreed to acquire 28 per cent of the company earlier this week by purchasing the interests of Bruce A. Norrip of Chicago in a share and cash deal. It hoped to acquire the additional 23 per cent from J. D. Leitch, Maple Leaf Mills chairman, but negotiations broke down Thursday, and Neonex announced it would bid on the open market.

Molson's made a cash-and-share offer for at least 50 per cent of Maple Leaf Mills early Friday.

Molson's, which diversified out of the brewing business when it acquired Anheuser-Imperial Ltd. of Toronto last year, offered one of its Class A common shares plus $5 cash for each Maple Leaf Mills share tendered. It put the value of its offer at $43,000,000 for 100 per cent of the milling company. Mr. Leitch announced he was supporting the Molson offer.

The acquisition puts Neonex, which grew out of a sign company called Neon Products Ltd. in Vancouver two years ago, into the big time of Canadian industry.

Neonex's assets are shown on its books at $58,500,000 at the end of last year—more than four times their worth in 1968.

It has been on a lively acquisition trail, acquiring seven companies last year and another four this year, mostly on share-exchange transactions. But until now all have been small. Among them are a helicopter firm, a western trucking line and drug and food distributors.

Maple Leaf Mills Ltd. is one of Canada's largest and soundest companies. It has assets of about $112,000,000, with milling and feed plants in Ontario and throughout Western Canada.

Last year sales totalled nearly $150,000,000 and it had a record net profit of $3,700,000.

Its stock rose sharply on the Toronto Stock Exchange Friday, touching a high of $30 a share, and closing at $29.75, up $4.75 from Thursday. For a time the exchange suspended trading.

Stock Markets Erratic

By NICK FERRIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Canadian stock markets moved erratically this week but ended up about where they began.

Trading was light.

Markets advanced moderately Monday in anticipation of President Nixon's speech on Vietnam.

Although Nixon announced further troops withdrawals, markets fell sharply Tuesday and Wednesday but rebounded Thursday, erasing losses of the previous two days. Friday brought another decline.

Thursday's strength appeared in response to statements by Arthur F. Burns, newly-confirmed chairman of the Federal Reserve Board in the United States.

He told a U.S. Senate banking committee that if he were confirmed as board chairman he would be watching to see when the current tight-money policy in the U.S. could be less restrictive.

Any relaxation in monetary conditions in the U.S. would likely lead to similar moves in Canada.

Investors have been waiting for some sign that restrictions on money will be relaxed before they make any strong investment commitment.

Statistically, on the Toronto Stock Exchange this week, industrials were down .50 to 183.12 and base metals .30 to 112.54. Western oils gained 1.72 to 190.78 and golds .87 to 143.11. Volume was 10,532,000 shares compared with 9,613,000 last week. Losers outnumbered gains 452 to 238.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, the composite index was down .36 to 176.55. Combined volume was 4,751,000 shares. Losses outnumbered gains 304 to 125.

Employment News

By J. R. STAVELEY
Manpower Counsellor

The activity of the Belleville Canada Manpower Centre during the past week reflected the importance of acquiring new industry in the Bay of Quinte area. Each new economic activity provides a number of new, permanent employment opportunities for persons seeking work.

Through the week, the facilities of this Canada Manpower Centre have been used by the representative of a new local plant to interview prospective employees. This type of assistance to both employer and prospective employee has become a routine procedure with the staff of this office. It is however, unusual because this is a new local labor market requirement.

I might add that this executive has been well pleased not only with the available labor supply, but also by the calibre of the persons interviewed for these new positions.

Unfortunately not all those Interviewed are successful in being hired at this time, for any number of reasons.

For those persons having difficulty in obtaining suitable work, now is a good time to analyze their present qualifications. It could be that their present educational or skill level cannot meet the demands of present or future employers.

If any doubts exist discuss your problems with the Manpower Counsellors at this office. It is now an acknowledged fact that one must be ready to train and re-train to keep pace with changing job opportunities.

This training is available through the Federal Department of Manpower and Immigration's program called OTA — occupational training for adults. This federal program is designed to help people meet the challenge of change by upgrading their work skills.

KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: So much is written about cancer. While it is true that it claims many lives, rectal cancer is equally deadly and not nearly enough is written about it.

It can start with a harmless polyp high in the rectum. This cannot be detected except by barium enema X-ray or by a sigmoidoscopic examination. Contrary to what I've read, there is not always an indication or a sign to warn the patient that something is wrong. (To use the old expression: "Something eating at his vitals.")

My husband had no change in his bowel habits nor did he have any discomfort before he started bleeding. Then what is the answer? Thre is but one: prevention through examination.

Unfortunately, part of the blame is the physician's. Most of the time a barium enema is not ordered by a doctor unless there is an indication that something is wrong. This X-ray should be included with the GI series so that any small abnormality can be found and treated while it is still benign.

Yes, we all know the importance of the chest X-ray and the Pap smear. But I wonder how many of us go through life without ever having had the benefit of a proper rectal examination.

This letter has not been easy for me to write. It brings back painful memories. While it cannot bring my husband back, I hope it makes your readers ask themselves, "How thorough was my checkup?"— Mrs. P.

* * *

Comment: Mrs. P., you have done a service by writing. I can only reiterate what you have explained so well. As I have often said, and it is well worth repeating, no physical examination is complete unless a skillful physician performs an examination of the lower bowel by proctoscope (lighted tube into the rectum) whether or not symptoms are present. And, of course, a barium enema for completeness when in doubt.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Please help me. Last year I took LSD. I had a pretty strange experience. Anyway, now all sorts of strange things are happening to me. I had two recurrences. My whole outlook has changed. I feel very unreal.

I haven't taken any drugs since then — I took LSD only once. I didn't tell my parents. They would be very upset. I never did anything wrong before. I'd like to ask them to take me to a doctor, but I'm afraid he'll tell them. Can I be punished by law for this? I don't know what to do. — Miss B.

* * *

Comment: You'll agree you can't go on like this — [illegible] only one thing to do. See your doctor. Y[illegible] your parents. Personally, I think they will be thankful to know the truth (why you have been acting so peculiarly.) They will co-operate. You will have both parents and doctor to lean on. Ultimately, we can all hope that the reaction to that one dose will disappear.

(Note: This letter should be of interest to those youngsters who want to take LSD "only once" just for the experience. It doesn't always turn out to be a harmless answer to one's curiosity.)

Bowel Examination Needed in Checkup

LEST WE FORGET ONE SOLITARY LIFE

He was born in an obscure village, the child of a peasant woman. He grew up in still another village, where He worked in a carpenter shop until He was thirty. Then for three years He was an itinerant preacher. He never wrote a book. He never held an office. He never had a family or owned a house. He didn't go to college. He never visited a big city. He never travelled two hundred miles from the place where He was born. He did none of the things one usually associates with greatness. He had no credentials but Himself. He was only thirty-three when the tide of public opinion turned against Him. His friends ran away. He was turned over to his enemies and went through the mockery of a trial. He was nailed to a cross between two thieves. While He was dying, His executioners gambled for His clothing, the only property He had on earth. When He was dead, He was laid in a borrowed grave through the pity of a friend. Nineteen centuries have come and gone and today He is the central figure of the human race and the leader of mankind's progress. "All the armies that ever marched, all the navies that ever sailed, all the parliaments that ever sat, all the kings that ever reigned, put together have not affected the life of man on this earth as much as that ONE SOLITARY LIFE.

Mrs. Muriel Rabel In Bazaar Shop

Mrs. M. Rabel Led Arena Fund Drive

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Reporter

FRANKFORD — A woman who has only been inside an arena once has provided much of the impetus for Frankford's new community centre.

That one trip to the arena occurred many years ago when Mrs. Muriel Rabel took her three children to a carnival at the Frankford Arena, a covered ice-hockey rink with a natural ice surface.

But since that trip to the carnival midsummer arena struck Frankford in the form of a fire which razed the rear part of the 40-year-old building and a partially - completed front section with change rooms and a hall.

So Frankford, a community with over 1,800 residents went without a covered ice surface for over a decade and the situation won't be remedied until a cold pad hits the area.

When the long - awaited cold spell does come, the citizens of Frankford will be well prepared, for, after a series of projects — many of them instigated and spurred on by Mrs. Rabel — the village has raised enough money and constructed a new arena on the site of the old arena.

"I don't skate or know anything about hockey; I just wanted to get involved in community affairs and this was something everyone had been crying about," Mrs. Rabel explained.

The Lions Club owned the previous arena and the partially - completed front section which was of concrete - block construction.

In 1967 the Lions Club turned the front section over to the village and the council (of which Mrs. Rabel was and is a member) decided, in completion as the village's Centennial Project.

Then in the spring of 1968 Frankford council decided to build a new rink and link it to the existing structure. Council appointed a Recreation Committee which Mrs. Rabel headed.

Immediately the Recreation Committee initiated a walkathon to raise funds for the proposed arena. Response was overwhelming and the pledges gathered by the more than 200 walkers totalled over $12,000.

The construction of the rink itself was started late in 1968 and the corrugated steel structure was completed externally this summer.

Community efforts resulted in work gangs attacking the interior and they have progressed to the point where the earthen floor is smoothed and the natural ice surface will be laid when a cold spell comes along.

Council hopes to be able to extend the facilities to include an artificial ice surface in 1970, but this will be a major project with the cost estimated at nearly $100,000-

An example of the community spirit which led to the contribution of an area farmer, Mr. Ernie Anderson. From his woods he provided all the lumber for the soon-to-be constructed seats and he even paid for having the lumber cut-to-size at a nearby sawmill.

Still another example are the citizens who have volunteered their services many nights this fall to prepare the interior of the Dr. McMullen Arena, which is named in memory of the man who was for a long while the village's only doctor.

Such paintings the prime example of community involvement is Mrs. Muriel Rabel.

Two winters ago Mrs. Rabel and a second interested citizen, Mrs. Arnold Biddle, attended an auction sale at a farm on the ninth concession of Murray Township.

But the two women were not spectators; they sold coffee and sandwiches on that cold afternoon and in five hours they had raised $15.00 which they put in the bank.

This meagre sum was actually the first money donated towards Frankford's new arena.

The auction sale was just the beginning and the work of Mrs. Rabel and her community - minded cohorts has expanded to include other fields.

In May of 1969 they organized a Hobby Show which netted $200 for the Arena Fund and every month they prepare the meat for the Frankford Lions Club's monthly supper.

In addition they are selling Arena Booster Buttons and raffling off an oil painting contributed by a local artist John Rosenthal of Baltwa.

Mrs. Rabel made a Centennial Quilt in 1967 and raffled it off in 1968, contributing the proceeds — $500 — to the Arena Fund.

But it was in mid - July of this year that Mrs. Rabel and Mrs. Ezri Baker touched off yet another significant campaign for the Arena Fund.

They began a Bazaar Shop on Mill Street in a building owned by the Orange Lodge who contributed it rent-free.

Donations among them clothing, books, games, dishes, utensils, skates and other items poured in and the two ladies sold them each Thursday, Friday and Saturday afternoons between the hours of 2 p.m. and 5 p.m.

During the last month other ladies have volunteered their help in the Bazaar Shop and the proceeds have been most gratifying. A $1,000 cheque has already been contributed to the Arena Fund and Mrs. Rabel expects that another $500 will be taken in before the end of the year.

Frankford council is currently devising ways to defray the cost of the artificial ice plant and accompanying cement floor and Mrs. Rabel and her co-workers are also hard at work on the problem.

And there seems little doubt that the woman who simply says: "We've enjoyed all our life" will continue to be a major factor when Frankford does achieve its goal.

Counterfeiting Ring Investigated

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Joseph Kikola has been arrested in connection with what police believe is a multi-million-dollar international counterfeiting ring.

Kikola, 51, of Windsor, was arraigned in provincial judge's court Friday on a charge of possession of about $10,000 worth of bogus certificates may be involved in an international plot to defraud the U.S. Hudson Store, Detroit's biggest retail outlet.

Hudson's treasurer, John W. Paymar, said the department store received information about a week ago that a large amount of counterfeit certificates would be pushed in Hudson stores during the pre-Christmas rush

The arrest was made following the combined efforts of the Windsor force, RCMP, the FBI and the United States department of justice task force against organized crime and racketeering in the Detroit area.

Task force director James Ritchie said Friday as high as $10,000 worth of bogus certificates may be involved in an international plot to defraud the U.S. Hudson Store, Detroit's biggest retail outlet.

Hudson's treasurer, John W. Paymar, said the department store received information about a week ago that a large amount of counterfeit certificates would be pushed in Hudson stores during the pre-Christmas rush

Canadian exports to all countries are estimated at $15,000,000,000, while imports ran to $14,000,000,000 in the year ending 1969. This will leave Canada with a merchandise trade surplus of $1,000,000,000. (CP Newsmap)

Another Little Drink Could Do A Lot of Harm

'Tis the Season to Be Jolly---Careful That Is

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

This is a merry season, from just about now for the next two weeks, when traffic police are a little more vigilant than usual, a bit more alert to flag down the motorist who seems to veer or who seems to be pushing the speed limit.

Across the country, police departments have issued their seasonal call: "If you drive, don't drink."

This time, the police have added a warning: "If you do, we'll nail you, and make it stick."

Since Dec. 1, it has been an offence for a motorist to drive with more than .08 per cent of alcohol in his blood. Breathanalysis machines now are used in many municipalities and police have the authority to compel motorists to take the test.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows that no special measures are being taken by police this year to bear down on the drinking driver—just the routine Christmas-New Year's alert.

In recent years, Metropolitan Toronto police have made spot checks of traffic and these are being continued. They are considered a first-rate deterrent. Traffic cruisers pull over a motorist anywhere, haphazardly, and he is checked for possible violations.

This year, if the constable suspects that the driver has been drinking, he is taken to one of five police stations for a breath test. No tests are made by the roadside because, police say, such tests are not necessarily accurate and such evidence may not stand up in court.

In Halifax, city police will have extra patrols but that is normal holiday procedure. New Brunswick has a Drive-to-Live campaign extending through the holiday which includes an extensive checkpoint program. In Prince Edward Island, the RCMP will intensify its highway surveillance.

In Quebec, provincial police fed information about accidents during Christmas weeks of 1967 and 1968 into a computer which selected potential trouble spots where extra patrol cars should be placed. But Montreal motorists need not worry about the breath test. Police in that city are not yet trained and equipped to use the machines.

In Calgary, a motorist who feels he can't drive home on Christmas Eve may call the police. A patrol car will arrive. One constable will drive the caller's car home and he can regain his keys the following day. He will not be charged, either for the service or with a traffic violation.

Spot checks, starting Dec. 12 and continuing to Jan. 5, are extensive in British Columbia. In Vancouver, a four-man crew driving around the city from early evening until morning stopped 2,000 cars in a recent week. Sixteen tickets were issued.

The addiction Research Foundation in Toronto offered this advice to drinkers:

Alcohol is more slowly absorbed into the intestine from beer and wine than from a cocktail or hot buttered rum.

Water in whisky delays absorption but lay off soda for a mix.

The carbon dioxide in soda, the foundation said, "may hasten absorption because of its effervescent nature."

OTTAWA (CP) — Between 35 and 45 Canadians will meet death in traffic accidents over the Christmas weekend, the Canada Safety Council predicts.

In 1967, 63 people were killed in traffic over the four-day holiday weekend. The highest toll recorded was 86 deaths in 1966, over a 78-hour holiday.

"However," said Phil Farmer, executive director of the Canada Safety Council, "the continuing downward trend in traffic statistics over the last year and a half plus the new amendments to the Criminal Code of Canada concerning drinking and driving" could result in a lower toll this year.

The Christmas holiday starts officially at 6 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 24 and ends at midnight, Sunday, Dec. 28, local times.

The council offered these recommendations for safe driving:

If you drink, don't drive; slow down on slippery roads; and maintain that safety cushion between your car and the car ahead.

Janis Can't Turn Them on by Song
So She Dances Up A Four-faint Storm

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Janis Joplin wasn't having much success in turning on more than 14,000 people at Madison Square Garden Friday night.

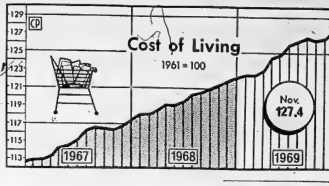
So she challenged her fans to get up and dance in the aisles.

Thousands surged toward the stage, shoving guards out of the way. In the crush, at least three girls and a youth fainted, were pulled up on the stage and carried off for treatment.

After three more songs Miss Joplin ended the show, leaving security guards and ushers with a frenzied horde to calm, and show out.

Police reported no arrests and no serious injuries.

Security guards made one futile attempt to clear the aisles and pulled back. But they stood behind the stage and helped several red-eyed youngsters who staggered on to the stage.



Miss Joplin shrieks with style and power, but Friday night her band was unorganized and a strong echo worked against her.

Exasperated by the audience sitting calmly in their seats, Miss Joplin interrupted a rock song to yell: "What's the matter with you? I can't tell you get up and dance—that's against the law. But what . . . are you doing sitting. . . . ? This is rock 'n' roll!"

Dozens, then hundreds, then several thousands kids pressed toward the stage. One after another, boys jumped up, hugged Miss Joplin, kissed her and were put back on the floor by stagehands and guards.

"That's better, that's more like it," she yelled, and began beating out another song. A boy up front grabbed her microphone, then arm, tried to pull her into the crowd and kissed her.

When she left, the kids clapped in unison, chanted "More!" and milled about. After a few unsuccessful tries at stealing microphones, they left.

Arab Commandos Convicted

GENEVA (Reuters) — Two men claiming to be Arab Palestinian commandos Friday made off with 1,000,000 Swiss francs (about $232,500) ransom money after holding the Portuguese consul and his wife captive overnight in their home here, police said.

The men, armed with pistols, a knife and a club, said they needed the money to help finance legal fees for three Arab commandos currently on trial in Winterthur, Switzerland, on charges laid in connection with the shooting up of an Israeli jetliner at Zurich airport last February.

Consul Salvador Hassan and his wife were taken prisoner Thursday night and held bound and gagged until the ransom was paid Friday, police said.

Authorities said the kidnappers claimed they were members of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine—the same organization to which the three accused in Winterthur belong.

On the Rise

The consumer price index rose to 127.4 in November from 126.8 in October, mainly because of higher food prices, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported. The index, based on 1961 consumer prices equalling 100, was 121.9 in November last year. (CP Newsmap)

"You're late!"

America's Too Damn White, Man

Martin Luther King's Father Fears Mass Killings

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — As he turns 70, the father of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., slain civil rights leader, says even the loss of his son was not too great a price to pay "for the freedom of his people," but he worries about continued white prejudices.

Interviewed Friday shortly before a testimonial dinner marking his 70th birthday, Rev. Martin Luther King Sr. said great progress has been made by Negroes and still is being made.

But he said he fears that continued race prejudice and hate could result in mass killings by both races.

"America's too damn white, man, and it's sure running it," he said. "We can lose America."

King has ministered for 38 years at Ebenezer Baptist Church, site of the funeral of both his sons—Martin, shot to death in Memphis, Tenn., April 4, 1968, and Rev. A. D. King, who was drowned in a swimming pool 15 months later. He has one other child, a daughter.

Of the progress made, he said: "It's great. It's great. If I had to go back, I'd go back the same way. And I have got a great deal of strength even in the loss of my sons. They're just not dead. To me, they live, but they're just away."

"America's white man," King said. "And America still hates. She won't stop hating and they hate Jews worse than Negroes and the only reason they accept them is the money. . . .

"If we can get these folks to see, get hate out of their hearts. . . .

Churches, King said, are the chief offenders where apathy toward problems is concerned.

"The church," he said, "is still segregated and wonders, 'What's the matter with these people?' It's just guilty of apathy at every point."

Police Learn Japanese for Expo

TORONTO (CP) — Sixteen provincial police officers have learned conversational Japanese. They also eat Japanese food with chop sticks and bow in Japanese greeting.

Their manners may have improved somewhat too, because "they have to be more polite than the North American aggressiveness requires."

The policemen have just completed a 13-week course in preparation for staffing Ontario's pavilion at Expo 70 in Osaka, Japan. Twenty-seven hosts and hostesses also took the course.

Maj.Gen. George Kitching, commissioner of the pavilion, said Ontario will be unique among the Western participants since other exhibitors have hired Japanese staff.

Arab Kings and Presidents Meet in Rabat

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — Kings and presidents of 11 Arab states and representatives of three others and of Palestinian Arab refugee groups were meeting here today to unify their strategy against Israel.

Informants said guerrilla chieftain Yasser Arafat, whose Palestinian raiders have captured the imagination of the Arab world, will try to convince the Arab leaders to abandon efforts for a political settlement with Israel.

But the sources said there are moderate Arab leaders who still believe a negotiated settlement is possible and they will try to win over those who advocate force.

The meeting is the fifth Arab summit and the first since August, 1967, in Khartoum after Israel's victory over Egypt, Jordan and Syria in the June war.

It was called to co-ordinate the Arab's military, financial and political efforts against the Jewish state.

The big two of the Arab world, President Gamal Abdel Nasser of Egypt and King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, are expected to set the tone in the discussions.

Nasser is considered a progressive in Arab politics and Faisal a conservative and the two have sometimes differed. They met in Cairo Thursday and Friday before coming to Rabat to work out an understanding on the summit meeting.

Little of what is decided at the meeting is expected to be made public. If things go according to schedule, a final communique will be issued Monday.

The only nations not represented by heads of state are Syria, Iraq and Tunisia. Syria and Iraq are ruled by rival factions of the Baath Socialist party, so each sent cabinet ministers. President Habib Bourguiba of Tunisia is ill and sent a representative.

Toronto Red Crescent Denies Assisting Arab Guerrillas

TORONTO (CP) — Spokesmen for Arab-Canadian groups Friday denied that donations to the Toronto Red Crescent Society, a relief organization, are being used to assist Arab guerrillas in the Middle East.

The denials came after Rev. David Dennson, a United Church minister, quoted a newspaper in Lebanon as saying the Toronto agency's purpose was "to raise funds and receive other economic assistance for the Fedayeen (Arab guerrillas)."

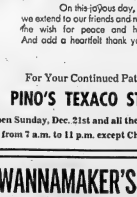
Mr. Denson's statement came as a result of a notice in the Dec. 15 issue of the United Church Observer asking readers to send donations of money and clothing to the Toronto agency.

The Observer editor Dr. A. C. Forrest said he is satisfied the appeal was in good faith and that the donations are intended for refugees.

Dr. Ibrahim Sabi, past president of the Canadian-Arab Federation, said the organization IS co-ordinating similar appeals in other Canadian cities and that all donations were to be sent to the Red Crescent Society in Jordan for distribution to refugee camps.

The Red Crescent Society is the Arab counterpart of the International Red Cross but Julia Durzi, a member of the Toronto Red Crescent Society, said her organization has no official ties with the Middle East organization.

Mrs. Durzi, a Canadian-born housewife married to a Palestinian Arab who is a Canadian citizen, said the local group is composed of a few women, mostly Arab-Canadians.



Mrs. Durzi said the group has decided to reject all offers of money because of the controversy.

Jesus Lived Amidst Violence Yet Grew Up with Assurance

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Roman crosses lined the roads of Galilee and Judea — 2,000 of them—on which Jewish patriots writhed in agony and died. It was a harrowing but common sight during the boyhood of Jesus.

From the start He lived in the midst of violence, struggle and peril. Yet He grew up with an undaunted assurance.

"Take heart, . . . Have no fear, . . . Blessed are those that are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."

Brought back from Egypt on the death of King Herod the Great, who had sought to slay Him among the children in Bethlehem, His upbringing in Nazareth remained in the shadow of the Roman Empire.

Three sons of Herod, survivors of family purges that had done away with five other sons, now ruled his divided realm—Archelaus in southern Judea, Herod Antipas in Galilee to the north, and Philip in the mostly pagan region east of there.

Flames of revolt broke out across the country in Jesus' childhood, and turned it into a powder keg of insurrection and fierce reprisals.

Jesus, His brother James and His staunch advocate, John the Baptist, eventually were slain in the onslaughts of imperial rule, which later made martyrs of His apostles and thousands of His early followers.

But it was a grimly familiar situation to Jesus from the very first, from that earliest flight into Egypt to elude the slaughter of Roman legionnaires, and the maturing days of Galilee, swept by uprisings and scourging troops.

At the time Jesus' family returned from Egypt to Nazareth, deciding against going back to Bethlehem because of the turbulence in Judea following Herod the Great's death in 4 BC, Herod Archelaus already was involved in retaliations there.

When temple crowds, lamenting the late king's hunting to death of their learned, defiant leaders, Judas and Matthias, stoned a detachment of 1,000 troops sent to desecrate them, Archelaus unleashed his entire army.

Foot soldiers and horsemen killed 3,000 Jerusalem people, sending hundreds of others fleeing to the hills to throw armed hands to strike back at the foreign predators.

For a time, the whole nation was in revolution.

The Roman legions finally beat down the rebels.

During this rampage, Archelaus, Herod Antipas and Philip were in Rome, getting their jurisdictions confirmed by Caesar Augustus, who overruled appeals from Jewish delegations to end the rule of Herod's line.

Returning to the territories, Archelaus pursued his harsh crushing of dissent, replacing the temple priesthood, overriding Judaism's moral precepts, imposing exorbitant taxes and arousing a wave of revolt.

Archelaus then was deposed and banished to Gaul, succeeded by Coponius, the first of a line of 11 Roman procurators, including Pontius Pilate, to hold Judea in submission, while Philip and Herod Antipas retained their restive tetrarchies in Israel to Rome.

It was Herod Antipas who imprisoned further Greco-Roman features on Galilee; the rural area where Jesus grew up and began his ministry.

When Jesus was warned by synagogic Pharisees to "get away from here, for Herod wants to kill You," Jesus told them: "Go tell that fox . . . I must finish My course. . . . I must go My way today and tomorrow and the day following."

In Jesus' youth, native resistance to foreign dominated rule broke out like scattered brush fires, and it continued sporadically for more than half a century, until Rome annihilated the nation in 70 AD.

Writes the historian Josephus:

"What did most elevate them (the Jews) in undertaking this war was an ambiguous oracle that was found also in their sacred writings: How about this time one from their country should become governor of the habitable earth."

In Jesus' developing years in Galilee, numerous rebel chieftains arose, leading guerrilla bands in lightning assaults against Roman power.

Some rebel leaders, including Simeon and Athronges, soon were captured and slain but others arose, and Judah, in partnership with Rabbi Zaddok, kept up the struggle for years, firing a militant new party, the Zealots.

"They have an inviolable attachment to liberty, and say that God only is to be their only ruler and Lord," Josephus recounts.

Four other major factions were active in Jesus' time:

—The collaborationist Sadducees, who worked arm-in-arm with Rome and its puppet rulers, made up of aristocratic temple priests and merchants, who dominated the Jewish judicial executive council, the Great Sanhedrin, and who were indifferent to religion, other than its practical, legal prerogatives.

—The pacifist, devout Pharisees, mostly unpropertied but scholarly men, dedicated to the torah and prophetic ideals, scrupulous in their conduct, working at trades, but also serving as respected teachers and exemplars to the people, bearers of the vital spiritual traditions of Judaism.

—The Essenes, aloof, ascetic separatists, living in isolated communities around the Dead Sea, with their strict codes, "consecrated" weapons and fiercely militant Battle Manual, with signals for ambush, pursuit and assembly.

—The Herodians, who along with the Sadducees, firmly supported the Roman establishment, and who frequently are cited in Scripture as opponents of Jesus, including the time they baited him about whether it approved paying taxes to Caesar.

"Show me a coin. Whose likeness and inscription has it?"

"Caesar's."

"Then render to Caesar the things that are Caesar's and to God the things that are God's."

Tiberius, who became emperor in 14 AD on the death of Augustus, succeeded Pontius Pilate in 26 AD as the fifth procurator in Judea.

In his 10 years there, Pilate repeatedly had to crush uprisings, once disguising soldiers as citizens to put the revolt to hundreds in the temple square, slaughtering a mass gathering in Samaria, sending Jesus to the east.

He finally was removed by Rome for his brutality in 36 AD, but the next year, in 37 AD, the death of Tiberius brought to power a new, more grossly cruel emperor, Caligula.

Caligula banished Herod Antipas to France in 39 AD, and with Philip having died in 34 AD, the last of Herod the Great's line was gone except for a grandson, Herod Agrippa, offspring of one of the sons of Herod the Great who had died at Herod's orders.

A protege of Caligula, the lurching, lumbering Agrippa briefly ruled his father's old kingdom from 41 to 44 AD, and subsequently established himself with the brute emperor, Nero, and joined with his Roman generals, Titus, Vespasian and Titus, in devastating Jerusalem in fire and blood in 70 AD.

That was the end of Israel's life for 1,878 years until 1948. And it was the final touch of the spawn of Herod the Great.

Secular historians, in those years, say little of Jesus, but what they say is revealing. Tacitus tells of a "great multitude" being Christian, declaring their name "from one Christus, who was executed in the reign of Tiberius by the procurator of Judea, Pontius Pilate."

Josephus mentions the "stoning of James, the brother of Jesus, called the Christ." Suetonius tells of an expulsion of Jews from Rome for disorders "instigated because of Chrestus." A later emperor, Diocletian, after 10 years of Christian persecutions, had this inscription put on the Roman Coliseum:

"The Christians are no more."

It was the savage, erroneous postscript which Herod's masters in Rome wrote to a Christmas saga that the Judean king began with the same kind of atrocities in Bethlehem, but which surpassed all the duty of his baleful descent to raise the image of a true kingdom that grows on in the face of trials and trouble.

"The light shines in the darkness," wrote the apostle John, "and the darkness has not overcome it."

Pope Follows Custom In Christmas Program

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul will follow tradition for this year's Christmas celebrations, with none of the drama that marked his Christmas Eve visits to flood devastated Florence in 1966 or to a huge steel mill in southern Italy last year.

The 72 year old Pope has made one change in his Christmas activities, however. He will deliver his message to the world Christmas Day, after celebrating mass in St. Peter's Basilica, in the past the message was usually recorded and broadcast a few days before Christmas.

Vatican observers said the Pope wanted to give more emphasis this year to the importance of Christmas Day itself. He therefore decided to speak to the crowd in St. Peter's Square.

The Pope begins his Christmas week activities Sunday with a visit to a manger built in St. Peter's Square.

On Christmas Eve, the pontiff will celebrate mass in the Sistine Chapel for the diplomatic corps. Early Christmas morning he will visit one of Rome's poorest suburbs. He will say mass at the Church of St. Agapito in Prenestino where many workers live in shantytown slums.

The Pope will return to the Vatican to celebrate a mass of high pomp and brilliancy before a crowd of tens of thousands. Then he will appear outside on the balcony over the main entrance to St. Peter's, to deliver his speech to the world and give his annual "urbi et orbi" blessing to the city of Rome and to the world.

For December 21

Your birthday today: The Sun goes from Sagittarius into Capricorn today at 7:44 p.m. Eastern Standard Time. In most years this change occurs on the 22nd. Babies born before this hour and minute this year are Sagittarians. Those born afterward are Capricornians. Both Sagittarians and Capricornians with birthdays today face a year of consolidation of interests, more concentration on making the home significant.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): This interesting and busy Sunday is full of activities and intellects which deserve, in many cases a more thorough following later on.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): The what your community expects of you today. Spend any idle time in checking out your budget — you need to know very soon just where you stand. The evening hours may hold a surprise.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Sunday routines are about as usual. Time devoted to hobbies is pleasant and rewarding. Encourage others to ask questions. Unusual tactics advance romantic interests quite well.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Rest and relaxation is much needed this Sunday, so make full use of the chance while it lasts. Divert yourself with sedentary pastimes, light reading.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Satisfy your need for a fuller life. Set up appointments with people you find difficult to reach during the week.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Friendly social relations are strongly favored. Unaccustomed activity, however, finds you low in energy. Take it easy rather than forcing strenuous exercise.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Intellectual or theoretical considerations attract your interest. Think about the events that happened which resolved to produce your current situation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): This normal Sunday offers an opportunity to do all the pleasant little amenities expected of you and enjoy the company of friends and loved ones.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Home life now is ever so much more rewarding than public or commercial entertainment.

For December 22

Your birthday today: In most years some of the people born some are Capricornians. Both groups face a year of larger responsibility and greater recognition in the affairs of their community. The very late Sagittarians succeed a bit easier in commercial efforts, while the very early Capricornians prefer public service. Both types are ambitious, no matter what the pat terns in their individual character may be.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Your workweek starts with neither great ease nor special problems. Pitch in early and keep at it for a full day of intelligent application.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Emotional pressures are involved in purchases today, expressed as haste and lack of attention to quality. Save your money.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Various schedules run into conflict this evening. Comparing of notes in the morning helps ease the situation. Give other people a chance to work at their financial assistance or appreciated.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Delays increase as the day progresses. Older people pose unanswerable questions with no particular invitation. Think about a program to take care of your health.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Social activity becomes expensive today, with decreasing probability of results. Hurt feelings are not to be taken as a reason for going out of your way to offer financial assistance or protection.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Make sure that your loved ones know how you feel about them and your home today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Preoccupation on your part is apt to be misinterpreted. Project your feelings so there is no confusion among those you care about.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Be alert with both people and mechanical things today. Steady persistence is beyond price. The main difficulty is that some don't really has a clear image of what he wants.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Pending matters can be settled more effectively on a hunch or conclusion based now. Negotiations on other terms are tedious.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): It is your turn to be sensitive, but go ahead despite unsolicited reactions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Modernization in all things is a good motto today. Some people squabble for lack of any better way of expressing themselves or due to an absence of definite goals.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Your work hours run longer than your personal affairs will tolerate without great inconvenience and perhaps complaints. Promise nothing that you are not sure you can do.

Urban Renewal No Failure

Less Talk, More Cash Demanded from Ottawa

TORONTO (CP) — Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough said Friday Ontario does not feel urban renewal has been a failure and would like "less talk and more cash" from the federal government.

The Ontario minister was commenting on Thursday's announcement by Ottawa's federal minister responsible for housing, that the federal government will spend only $35,000,000 annually on urban renewal for the next five years, approving only 12 of 107 projects awaiting implementation.

Mr. McKeough said he was not surprised by the announcement but had been hoping that the federal government would listen to pleas from Ontario and Federal Liberals about the importance of channelling money to the cities.

"We have been saying that many of the problems of today are in our urban areas," he said. "But what does the federal government do—it plans more studies.

"Well, the problems of the cities aren't going to stand still while they do their mass studies. They are slowing down on something we feel has been 90-per-cent successful."

Mr. McKeough said that in October, Ontario submitted a proposal to the federal government pointing out that about $50,000,000 in federal funds is needed over the next five years just to finance projects already planned in 15 Ontario cities.

The proposal was drawn up with the advice of the mayors of the municipalities involved and since then, he had twice requested a meeting between the mayors and Mr. Andras to discuss it but received no reply.

Mr. McKeough said he feels the federal government has a moral commitment to spend the $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 it had announced repeatedly across Canada in 1964, 1965 and 1967 would be spent on urban renewal.

He said he does not know how Ottawa plans to allocate the $25,000,000 a year it has announced will be spent, but he expected official commitments made four months ago to Ontario municipalities would be honored.

These include $1,000,000 to Kitchener, $2,000,000 to London $1,500,000 to Sault Ste. Marie, $1,000,000 to Cornwall and about $100,000 to both Niagara Falls and Windsor. On top of this would come the $3,300,000 which Mr. Andras said is allocated for Toronto.

Mr. McKeough said Ontario has already committed itself to pay $5,000,000 next year on urban renewal projects that are in the building stages.

Under the cost-sharing agreement, the province and the municipality each put up 25 per cent and the federal government 50 per cent, which would make the federal share $10,000,000 in 1970.

If Ottawa refused to pay this, he did not know whether Ontario could continue to meet the commitments or whether there was a chance the province would take over payment of 75 per cent.

Mr. McKeough said that neither the provincial government nor the municipalities agree with Mr. Andras that urban renewal projects have been a failure in need of complete restudy and revamping.

"At no time does the federal minister name any specific locality or program," he said.

"Surely what is happening in Alexandra Park in Toronto, what has happened in the Bluewater area in Sarnia, in Confederation Park in Hamilton, and in Sudbury and downtown Windsor has helped immensely to overcome some of the urban problems in those cities."

Telegram, Star Said Canada's Best Papers

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's two best newspapers are the Telegram and The Star in Toronto, not necessarily in that order, Telegram publisher John Bassett said Friday.

He offered the opinion under questioning to the Senate committee on the media. Toronto's only morning newspaper, The Globe and Mail, is not in the same category as the two evening papers, he said.

Later, Mr. Bassett clarified which paper he thought best. He said the Telegram is the most quoted paper in the country because it is the best paper.

The two evening papers come closest to the ideal in the total effort they make to meet the responsibilities of the publisher, Mr. Bassett said.

He told the committee the great bulk of the Globe's newscoverage comes via the New York Times service. Only the CBC and The Telegram had men in Moscow, where The Canadian Press, the domestic news agency, withdrew its reporter recently.

The Telegram, in "a tremendous effort by a single newspaper," also had correspondents in Washington, London, Paris, Bonn, Rome and Hong Kong.

No North American newspaper except the New York Times has so many foreign correspondents, he said. The Star tried to do the same thing.

The entertainment sections of both newspapers are first-rate and compare with any in North America, Mr. Bassett said. The Globe's entertainment section was "indifferent." The Telegram sends people to New York to cover plays that will come to Toronto.

Mr. Bassett said he used to be personally active in CP, the cooperative news distribution agency financed by Canadian dailies, but is not any more.

He believes CP does an adequate job in certain areas, but has little reference to the needs of the metropolitan press. CP was primarily designed to serve the needs of the middle-sized papers outside the competitive metropolitan markets.

Mr. Bassett, commenting on steps by both The Star and The Telegram to acquire weeklies around Toronto, said the The Telegram went into it to protect the paper's future.

In this connection he noted that dailies flourish in the New York suburbs because of the flight of the population to them. At the same time some New York papers were dying.

The Telegram had no interest in entering the weekly field as such. But the acquired weeklies were "doing well" on their own. He does not know what the future holds for the move to the weeklies, he said.

Committee lawyer Yves Fortier asked Mr. Bassett how he would reconcile the ownership of the weeklies with his statement that newspapers should be owned.

Mr. Bassett said he does not reconcile it. The weeklies should be owned locally but he believed it was more important that the Telegram be strong and viable and not choked to death.

He repeated that ideally every newspaper should be owned and operated by local citizens, but he said he had decided the Telegram was more important than that idea.

On important, non-local issues, Mr. Bassett told Mr. Fortier, his weeklies would follow his editorial views.

He said he differed from the Thomson newspaper group, which he said has autonomous local publishers because he believes responsibility should be clearly pinpointed.

And what would happen if one of his papers opposed the editorial line, Mr. Bassett said he would tell the man in charge he had better find a job where he would be happier.

During questioning about daily editorial conferences with senior Telegram staff, Mr. Fortier asked whether it would be a fair assumption that Mr. Bassett has veto power.

"No, that would be a fair assumption," Mr. Bassett replied. "You bet."

He said there would never be an editorial in his newspaper with which he disagreed. There may be a lot of argument beforehand about policy, but if it cannot be resolved, he decides.

Mr. Fortier asked whether Telegram readers know about Mr. Bassett's interests outside of newspapers and television—Maple Leaf Gardens and the Toronto Argonauts football club.

Mr. Bassett said he was sure Toronto people knew about that.

The publisher said he was opposed generally to the idea of newspapers being owned by persons with other business interests and he does not think "it is the most desirable thing in the world" that a newspaper has interests in the professional sports.

Asked by Mr. Fortier whether the T. Eaton Co. exercises any influence over Telegram editorial policy, Mr. Bassett said no. The Telegram is a private company with seven shareholders. Mr. Bassett's three sons and four sons of John David Eaton.

Mr. Bassett said Mr. Eaton loaned him funds to purchase the Telegram in 1952, but there was never any contract. The only agreement was that Mr. Bassett would be publisher and would exercise complete control.

He said laughingly that he had proposed to Mr. Eaton, a friend, that either he lend him money to buy the newspaper or make him a vice-president of the Eaton company. Mr. Eaton quickly decided to lend him the money.

Underlying his belief in clearly-defined responsibility in a newspaper, Mr. Bassett said he would oppose establishment of a press council—a forum for public grievances against newspapers and advice.

A group of British press council has proved to be totally ineffective.

A press council would tend to relieve him of his responsibility to the newspaper's reader. To set up a council to investigate something in his newspaper, he could then reply that it was the council's responsibility.

Further, he would oppose a council—which would have newspaper and public representation—because he had no intention of letting the publishers of the Toronto Star and the Toronto Globe and Mail help decide his editorial policy.

On editorial policy, Mr. Bassett referred to his newspaper's editorial switch to support of the Liberal party in the 1963 federal election and said that cost The Telegram 10,000 readers.

Questioned about ethics, Mr. Bassett said the sole guide on his newspaper's unwritten code is good taste.

He said it was good taste which prompted him to have an article about homosexuality removed from Weekend Magazine, part of the Saturday Telegram, earlier this year.

In answer to other questions, Mr. Bassett said the so-called underground press must be filling a need not provided by the established press because underground newspapers are being produced and read. He said he would oppose suppression of underground newspapers.

On the question whether the underground press was filling a need that the established press is not, Mr. Bassett said The Telegram "is not publishing pot."

Mr. Bassett said he believes the American Newspaper Guild has done a great deal to raise the living standards and dignity of journalists.

Mr. Bassett said he would like to think of himself as an enlightened publisher, but he has no doubt that journalistic salaries are higher because of the guild than they would have been otherwise.

Further, he said, he thinks it is undignified for an employee to have to go cap in hand to an employer for more pay. The Guild negotiates for all employees and saves individuals that indignity.

The committee adjourned public hearings until Jan. 20. It has scheduled a series of public sessions periodically into April.

Independent Paper Ownership Favored by Publisher of Star

TORONTO (CP) — The president and publisher of The Star said Friday that Senate inquiry into the mass media should recommend policies that will insure the continuance of independent newspapers.

Beland H. Honderich told the annual meeting of Toronto Star Ltd. that the inquiry, now underway in Ottawa, should determine the limits that should be placed on newspaper chains and on joint media ownership—companies involved in newspapers along with television or radio.

"So far as The Star is concerned, we believe the public interest is best served by independent ownership and we would be happy to abide by this policy if it was applied to everyone in our business.

"But we are not prepared to stand idly by and see our competitive position endangered by group owners and multi-media owners who do not accept this principle.

"Moreover, we think the Canadian Radio and Television Commission has some responsibility to see that some balance is restored to the competitive position."

Mr. Honderich, who is tentatively scheduled to appear before the inquiry Jan. 20, said the advent of cable television may mean trouble for independent newspapers.

He said cable television will leave a place for newspapers, but "I cannot be certain there will be a place for independent newspapers."

Mr. Honderich said he has "no confidence" government policy will require groups of joint owners to divest themselves of any significant part of their media ownership.

"The best one can hope for is that some limitation will be placed on group ownership in the future," he said.

Detroit Scrap Dealer Sought Longer Strike

TORONTO (CP) — A Detroit scrap metal dealer attempted to influence a union negotiating team to prolong a strike against International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd., Murray Cotterill, public relations director of the United Steelworkers of America, said Friday.

Mr. Cotterill was commenting on an announcement that provincial police are investigating activities during the 128-day nickel strike which ended Nov. 14.

Harold Graham, assistant OPP commissioner, said an investigation is taking place to determine whether bribes were offered to USW negotiators to prolong the strike.

Scrap metal dealers made large sums of money when the strike evaporated an already short supply of nickel. The price of nickel rose sharply on the official "grey" market to four and five times its pre-strike level of $1.03 a pound in United States currency.

Union leaders said the Detroit dealer, who was not identified, had entertained unionists and urged them to "stick to their guns."

"This man's actions were reported to senior members of the union, who told the negotiators to have nothing to do with him," Mr. Cotterill said.

He said union members had been questioned by police and that the union offered to cooperate.

An Inco spokesman said the company had no comment.

Huge Copper Contract Signed

LIMA, Peru (AP) — The Peruvian government signed a contract with United States copper mining consortium Friday night for an estimated $355,000,000, said to be the largest such investment ever made.

The signing represented a major breakthrough for Peru in reopening the foreign and domestic investment that dried up following the military coup d'etat of Oct. 3, 1968, and expropriation of the International Petroleum Co. six days later.

Under terms of the contract, Southern Peru Copper Corp. will develop the Cuajone copper deposits near the Chilean border, doubling Peru's production and raising the country from seventh place to the world's No. 4 or 5 producer.

Police Arrest Five Students For Italian Terrorist Blasts

ROME (Reuters) — Squads of police today stepped up the hunt for a terrorist group after charging five students Friday night in connection with four bomb attacks last week in Rome and Milan.

Police were silent about the case after the students—all from well-to-do, upper-class families—were charged. But rumors circulating here said that only part of the affair has been unravelled.

Officials are convinced that a single group was involved in the four explosions—one in Milan and three in Rome—which killed 14 persons and left another 107 injured within an hour Dec. 12. The Milan blast, in the National Agricultural Bank, took all 14 lives.

One theory widely held here is that those arrested so far were only pawns in an anarchist plot hatched by an unknown mastermind or political organization.

Three of the students charged were named as Roberto Mander, 17, son of well-known Italian conductor Francesco Mander; Emilio Borghese, 19, son of Soffo Borghese, a Supreme Court counsellor; and Roberto Gargarelli, 19, son of the chief cashier at the Rome Banco Nazionale del Lavoro, where one of the blasts took place.

Armless Girl Given Licence To Drive Auto

MOUNT GILEAD, N.C. (AP) — The state of North Carolina has given Carol Burton, 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Burton of Mount Gilead, an early Christmas present—a car driver's license.

For a girl born without arms, it's a unique present.

A spokesman for the state motor vehicles department said Carol became the first female congenital amputee in the state to receive a licence to drive.

The 1966 model car she drives has special steering and gear shifting equipment.

Construction Industry's Outlook Reported Poor

OTTAWA (CP) — A dismal forecast for the fortunes of the construction industry in 1970 was made Friday by Mark Stein of Montreal, president of the Canadian Construction Association.

"We look for a $14,000,000,000 construction program in Canada in 1970. This, if achieved, will mean only a nominal increase over 1969," he said in a statement.

Construction volume for 1969 was expected to record only a modest increase.

The shortfall experienced in attaining the intended construction program this year is mainly due to the relative shortage and-or expense of investment funds and the series of work stoppages caused by strikes and lockouts."

Israeli Cabinet Studies Split with U.S. Policy

Rockets Hit 5 Settlements

From AP-Reuters

Arab commando gunners in Jordan today fired rockets into five Israeli settlements in the Beisan Valley, including the industrial town of Beit Shean, sparking renewed fighting in the area for the second straight day, an Arab spokesman said.

The spokesman for the Palestine Armed Struggle Command said Al Fatah guerrillas launched a heavy rocket attack against the Beisan Valley at 7 a.m. He added that the Israelis suffered heavy losses of life and property.

The rockets started several big fires which could be observed from the Jordanian east bank of the River Jordan, the spokesman said.

Israeli artillerymen returned the fire.

Israeli military sources said there were neither casualties nor damage from the Arab attacks.

Rockets fired across the Jordan exploded near a textile plant employing hundreds of workers on the outskirts of Beit Shean. Some windows were smashed and power was cut off temporarily, the Israelis said.

A Jordanian military spokesman announced that 90 minutes later the Israelis lobbed five artillery shells into the Jordanian town of Irbid, 10 miles from Beisan of the opposite bank of the river.

The Fatah spokesman said the shelling of Irbid was in retaliation for the attack on the Beisan Valley.

The morning attack on the Beisan Valley followed closely on a series of guerrilla night operations described by an Al Fatah spokesman as the largest ever launched in the area just south of the Sea of Galilee. He said the night attacks were on a 22 mile front.

Rockets were also fired at Israel's potash works in Sodom, on the Dead Sea. The Arab command said the attack destroyed all the factory's housing units and some other installations, but Israel denied there was any damage.

Israeli jets and artillery attacked Jordanian territory southeast of the Sea of Galilee Sunday in a four-hour blitz the Israeli command described as retaliation for Arab aggression.

Shortly after the attack, a Jordanian military spokesman said in Amman that six Jordanian soldiers were killed while seven other soldiers and four civilians, including a seven-year-old child, were wounded. Seven houses were destroyed, he said.

Later a broadcast from Iraq said six Iraqi soldiers were killed in the attack. Iraq has had troops in Jordan since the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

The Israelis described the attack as one of the heaviest actions against Jordan this year.

The attack began at 1 a.m. and witnesses on the Israeli-occupied side of the Jordan said the jets swept across the waterway in waves to drop bombs on targets in the Gilead Mountain range. They said the planes flew through heavy anti-aircraft fire.

'Arduous Argument' Causes Deep Worry

JERUSALEM (Reuters) — The Israeli cabinet was called into crisis session today to discuss what Foreign Minister Abba Eban called Israel's "grave and arduous argument with the United States."

The government ordered his extraordinary meeting amid growing concern over an apparent erosion of Washington's support for Israel's stand against the Arabs.

Eban flew home Sunday night after talks in the U.S. and Britain. Another arrival was the Israeli ambassador to the U.S., Gen. Yitzhak Rabin, summoned to attend the cabinet talks today on relations with the U.S.

The meeting coincides with reports of new Middle East proposals drawn up by the U.S.

In Washington, the state department had no immediate comment on a New York Times dispatch saying the plan recommended that Israel relinquish almost all occupied Jordan territory and leave Jerusalem an open but unified city.

(Reports from Rabat, Morocco, the site of the 14-nation Arab summit conference, said today that some peace plan was currently under discussion between Jordan and the U.S. Arab delegates showed interest in newspaper dispatches about U.S. proposals for the Jordan-Israel section of the ceasefire line.)

Eban was likely to give a detailed report to the cabinet on his talks with U.S. State Secretary William P. Rogers.

But, speaking to reporters at the airport Sunday night, he said that Rogers had not told him about the latest U.S. proposals for a settlement between Israel and Jordan.

Thirty Children Die As Plane Hits School

SAIGON (Reuters) — Almost 100 persons were killed today when an Air Vietnam DC-6B passenger plane crashed in flames into a heavily populated area after overshooting the runway at Nha Trang airport, police sources said.

The dead included about 60 of the 68 passengers aboard the four-engined, propeller-driven airliner and 30 children attending a primary school, initial reports reaching Saigon said.

The aircraft burst into flames after plowing into the school and several other buildings at the central coastal city 200 miles northeast of the South Vietnamese capital.

Police sources in Nha Trang quoted a woman passenger who escaped from the burning wreck as saying there was an explosion in the cockpit when the plane was about 15 mile south of its destination on its flight from Saigon.

The survivor said she saw a stewardess providing first aid to the pilot and co-pilot.

At least eight passengers escaped through an emergency door, the police sources said.

The passenger list included three Americans and one South Korean. The rest were Vietnamese.

The plane was on charter from Formosan-based Far Eastair Transportation Corp. for Air Vietnam's domestic service.

Burundi Executes Plotters

BUJUMBURA (Reuters) — Twenty-three persons were executed at dawn here today for attempting a coup d'etat and planning the massacre of Burundi's Tutsi tribe.

They included former planning minister Barnabe Kanyaruguru and Gregoire Nkimbikije, onetime leading official in the economics ministry and former first secretary at Burundi's embassy in Washington.

Those executed comprised 19 military men and four civilians.

Twenty-five persons were condemned to death by a court martial last Wednesday, but President Michel Micombero commuted the death sentences on two of them—former ministers Andre Kabura (national economy) and Nderarabo Balthazar (social affairs)—to life imprisonment.

Nixon Is Claimed Riveted to Right

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Committee for an Effective Congress said Sunday that President Nixon is "becoming riveted to the right" seeking the support of a frustrated and increasingly conservative middle America.

The organization, which describes itself as non-partisan, said the president "is today clearly re-positioning the Republican party far to the right of the traditional centre."

Its annual discussion of the congressional year was devoted primarily to a sharply critical assessment of Nixon and his administration.

The committee charged that Nixon has been paying political debts to the South for campaign support.

The committee described Vice-President Spiro T. Agnew as "Nixon's Falstaff," and forecast an intensifying conflict between the White House and Congress, particularly the Senate.

"The administration is working the hidden veins of fear, racism and resentment which lie deep in middle America," the organization said.

The committee said its analysis was based on interviews with members of Congress and officials in both the Republican and Democratic parties, and on "a survey of over 200 right wing organizations and publications."

Its judgment: "Nixon is becoming riveted to the right, both politically and philosophically.

"Judging from the mail received in congressional offices, it is safe to conclude that the strategy is yielding rich dividends.

"Southern Wallace voters, under the spell of Spiro Agnew, are being safely tucked in the Nixon portfolio, along with a growing number of nervous, Northern middle-class suburbanites, many of whom have a Democratic voting history."

U.S., Russia Agree On Site for Parley

HELSINKI (Reuters) — The United States and Russia today announced agreement to convene full-scale Strategic Arms Limitation talks April 16 in Vienna, Austria.

A communique issued at the end of five weeks of preliminary talks here said the two sides would return to the Finnish capital at a later date, apparently for a third phase of the negotiations.

The communique said that, as a result of the exchange of views the two sides had, each was "better able to understand the views of the other with respect to the problems under consideration."

"An understanding was reached on the general range of questions which will be the subject of further U.S.-Soviet exchanges," the communique added.

The agreement was seen as marking a major step by the two super-powers toward easing the threat of a worldwide nuclear war.

The coming conference will work to produce treaty limiting development of strategic weapons," which could be expected to lead in an eventual cut on rocket stockpiles.

The choice of Vienna as the site for the major conference came as a complete surprise, because conference source had indicated frequently during the last few days that the Russians were adamantly opposed to reconvening in the Austrian capital.

The Oldest Story...

Perhaps among the best to tell the age-old story of the first Christmas are the residents of Hastings Manor. In their annual Christmas pageant, 92-year-old George Ketcheson played the part of a shepherd, while Mrs. Lavillia Vandervoort, 85, and her husband, Ryerson, 87, took the roles of Mary and Joseph. Many of the residents participated in the pageant, which told the Christmas story in songs and readings.

Failure to Check Flue Caused Death of Family

PICTON — A coroner's jury last Saturday ruled that a Prince Edward County resident, Chandler Ross Sears, 45, died in his Green Point home last October from asphyxiation by carbon monoxide. Mr. Sears, his wife, Darla, and their two children, Robbie, four and Debbie, two were discovered dead in their bungalow last February by a neighbor Mrs. Malcolm Fearn.

The jury fixed the time of Mr. Sears' death between 1 a.m. and 4 a.m. on October 30. Evidence was given by experts, representatives from the department of energy and resources and a Belleville furnace man.

They said there was a buildup or blockage of solidified soot in the elbow, or cross way of the chimney's two sections. Instead of the gases travelling out through the second chimney, they backed up into the house. The man who testified said that in their opinion the blockage ought to have been found with proper routine inspection.

After hearing the evidence, the jury recommended that only qualified furnace men be used by oil companies and furnace maintenance firms and that draughts on chimneys and furnaces be checked more closely.

Israel-Arab negotiations, to be harmful to the chances for peace, Ehan said.

Rabin, who was advised of the latest U.S. initiative concerning Jordan, said on arrival Sunday that he knew of no pressure being exerted on Israel by the U.S.

Political circles here considered the new American stand as an attempt to conciliate the Arab states, especially the moderate ones, during the Rabat summit conference.

Though there appeared to be growing concern that a change in U.S. policy might lead to an attempt by the U.S. and the Soviet Union, or be the Big Four, to impose a settlement, Israel has already made it clear that it would reject outright such an effort.

Charlie Is A Gay Cavalier At His Trenton Apartment

TRENTON — An eligible bachelor in the residential west end of Trenton may be spending the Christmas season alone.

Not that he's indifferent to the holiday season — it is just that he's a creature of habit and his usual habit would be to sleep the winter away.

For Charlie is an 8-month-old racoon, undecided about remaining out of hibernation for his first winter.

Charlie is the pet of the Capt. Gus Morrin family, Trenton. Mrs. Morrin is a member of the Quinte Humane Society and in May of this year was called by the society's manager and asked to care for an abandoned baby 'coon.

A round ball of fluff, he weighed about 10 ounces and measured about seven inches long, including tail.

Mrs. Morrin fed him with an eye-dropper at first. Now he weighs 27 pounds and eats hamburg, earthworms, peanuts and kitchen scraps.

Capt. Morrin built Charlie a bachelor pad at the rear of the family residence. It has a second floor entrance into a reception room. In a sleeping loft above he curls up to snooze away the days, but so far this winter when the sun is shining, Charlie stays awake.

The young coon has a neighborly relationship with the cat and dog living next door. Matey, the spaniel, makes daily visits to the Morrin home and Charlie is always ready with a treat when he arrives.

The mischief-maker has learned to take him to a remote part of Algonquin Park where he will be released, far from human haunts.

In the meantime, his best friend is Joey, the Morrin's 9-year-old son. If Charlie is awake and in the mood, he will share a turkey dinner with the family Christmas Day.

Below Soil Wiring To Hotel Site

Preparations for the running of underground telephone cable to the proposed Four Seasons Hotel training school on Belleville's waterfront are being made by Bell Telephone installation crews.

Coils of plastic pipe for lining the underground service are already piled in readiness and local Bell manager George Thompson says installation is expected to get under way as soon as possible.

Bell will use facilities at the Four Seasons Motel as a training school for technical personnel for 10 months of the year. Construction of the motel is expected to get underway in the near future.

Bell is also providing more lines for telephone service in the north part of Prince Edward county and has completed the installation of the necessary cable. Still remaining to be completed is splicing of some of the cable connections.

Juvenile Charged

A Belleville juvenile has been charged with break, enter and theft as the result of three breakins over the week-end.

According to police chief Douglas Crosbie, three residences were entered and a total of $65 taken.

Apartment three at 190 Yeomans Street, 19 Elgin Street and apartment 13 at 306 Sidney Street were the residences involved.

Chief Crosbie said that entry was gained by tearing screens from windows and then pushing the glass panes in all cases.

Other than the screens there was no damage involved in the breakins.

Oak Hills Plans Junior Ski Racing

Junior ski racing enthusiasts with a yen for inter-club competition are invited to take part in tryouts this coming Saturday at the Oak Hills Ski Club slopes.

Sponsor of the tryouts is the Bedding Nancy Greene Ski League. Competition will be under the auspices of the Canadian Amateur Ski Association.

Saturday's tryout commencing at 2 p.m. will be for boys and girls 13 years and under as of Aug. 31 this year, who are members of the Oak Hills Ski Club.

The purpose of the Nancy Greene Ski League is to develop junior racers for inter-club competition with five other clubs in the Quinte and Lake Ontario area.

The club this year will limit itself to one racing team of 13 members but eventually it is hoped that several teams in specific age groups can be developed.

Operation Manna Raises Over $5,000

PICTON — Operation Manna, a Prince Edward county fund drive for Biafran relief, is flying high.

Because of this campaign, at least one food flight into Biafra has been made possible. Cost of a single food flight into the war torn country is $4,200. To date, Operation Manna has raised more than $5,000 through door to door canvassing, individuals' projects and church offerings.

The relief program was initiated last month by Rev. Robert Jones of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Picton and Rev. Peter Breedveld, Bethany Christian Reform Church, Bloomfield.

Operation Manna gained the support of the Prince Edward County Ministerial Association. While the cost of one food flight into Biafra had been staged, Mr. Jones and Mr. Breedveld are hopeful that enough money can be added to the fund's $300 surplus to finance another flight.

With this goal in mind the ministers have written letters to 100 businessmen in the Picton, Belleville, Kingston and Trenton districts, urging their support of Operation Manna.

Both clergymen continue to stress the importance of public letters to Prime Minister Trudeau, seeking peace for Biafra.

Area Men Fill Assessment Posts

Regional assessment offices for Hastings and Prince Edward counties, currently situated at Belleville city hall, will be moved to Trenton this week.

G. Leighton Thompson, assessment commissioner for the two-county region, said the regional office will be located in temporary quarters at 31 Quinte Street, Trenton, until the new Trenton office is completed some time in late March or early April. The telephone number for the Trenton office is 392-2501.

The assessment take-over by the province on Jan. 1 will see all local municipal assessment offices closed out.

Organization of the new regional assessment office is continuing in preparation for the Jan. 1 take-over, with three valuation managers having been named.

Clarence Bird, formerly with the Belleville assessment department has been named farm valuation manager; S. C. Jevons, former Hastings county assessment commissioner, is residential manager and J. Allen Smith, former Trenton assessor is the assessment services manager. The industrial-commercial assessment manager for the new regional office is still to be appointed.

Clergy Reserve Once Burning Issue

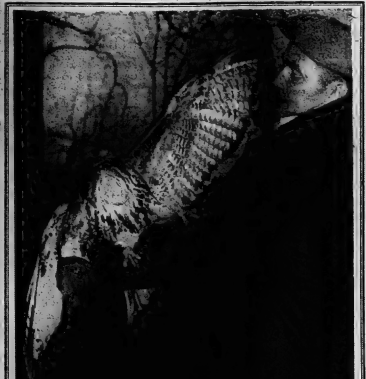
Sale of two lots at the rear of St. Thomas Church rectory for expansion of the Bell Telephone building has served to recall what was once a controversial clergy reserve issue.

Clergy reserves, sometimes called gleb lands, were a vexing political problem throughout the 19th century — a problem that still surfaces occasionally today.

In an effort to ensure establishment of the Church of England in Upper Canada, the government decreed that 10 per cent of all Crown land would be set aside for the support of the Anglican clergy.

Belleville was no exception and in the first survey of 1816 a slice of land around the present St. Thomas Church, its rectory and parish hall, was set aside for the rector's support. A further tract, north of the Moira River, was dedicated to the same purpose.

The entire clergy reserve system was abolished in the late 1850s, due to cries of discrimination heard for over half a century from other denominations, chiefly Methodists.



But funds from rental or sale of land in the hands of the Church of England still continued to be used to maintain the parish clergy.

In 1976, by an act of the provincial legislature, the Belleville Rectory Fund was set up. Money from rental and sale of gleb lands still belong to St. Thomas Parish was controlled and invested by the Synod of the Diocese of Ontario in Kingston. The first $3,000 of the annual interest from the fund went towards the support of St. Thomas' rector and the remainder was shared by Christ Church and later by St. Margaret's - on - the - Hill.

The portion of the clergy reserves not used for church purposes had dwindled by this year to the rear portions of two lots behind the Bell Telephone building on Church St. They were sold recently to the telephone company.

But with added money in the Belleville Rectory Fund, St. Thomas wards an added share for support of its clergyman. It is applying to the provincial legislature for $500 more a year from the fund. The act to amend the original status of 1976 will go before legislature at its next regular session in 1970.

"There are many cases like this in Ontario," says a church spokesman.

Raymond Ostrander And Grounded Pet

Hector the Cranky Hawk Becomes Expert Freeloader

By Margaret Haylock
Staff Reporter

WAUPOOS — "Hector" is a cranky convalescent without a leg to stand on should his host's dinner menu fail to gain his approval.

Grounded by a flying accident which broke his leg several weeks ago, the young red-tailed hawk was rescued by Waupoos resident, Raymond Ostrander. Since the hawk, christened Hector, could no longer catch his own meals, he swiftly became dependent upon his benefactor to supply him with food. The injured bird is recuperating on a diet of hamburger and fresh rabbit meat. The highlight of Hector's day, in fact, is to guess who's coming to dinner.

While the circumstances surrounding Hector's accident will never be known, Mr. Ostrander thinks that the hawk was probably flying low in pursuit of game when he glided, head on, into a wire fence. The impact of the crash broke his leg and left him helplessly entangled in the fence. When Mr. Ostrander discovered the hapless hawk, he was an angry bird in no mood to be rescued.

Cautiously, Mr. Ostrander set about him from the wire fence and carried him home on a stick. He did what he could to set Hector's leg, hoping to save the majestic bird from death. The hawk responded to Mr. Ostrander's doctoring and soon adjusted to his predicament. He began to devour the rabbits brought to him with the appetite of a connoisseur.

His indignation subsided, too, and Hector became almost sociable. Kept in Mr. Ostrander's barn, Hector takes an occasional turn around the door yard, his injured leg showing him slightly. He perches on Mr. Ostrander's arm and permits him to stretch out his wings to demonstrate their sleek plumage.

Hector has a hang up, though. While rabbit meat makes a flavorful meal the young red-tailed hawk has a hankering to sample chicken. Mr. Ostrander keeps his three hens carefully shut out of the bird's sight since Hector learns to cast hungry glances in their direction.

Hector has been an entertaining guest at the Ostrander home but his rescuer has no intention of keeping him captive. The hawk is free to leave just as soon as Mr. Ostrander is sure he can fend for himself.

The big bird, however, displays the disposition of a freeloader. While he skims along the ground near the barn, he makes no effort to climb skyward when Mr. Ostrander reaches to pick him up. Keeping Hector could present problems, especially from the view point of the Ostranders' cat. Before the family feline can venture out of doors, his owners must check on Hector's whereabouts. Pursued by a bird, what cat could keep its self esteem?

Children and Christmas Mean Increased Fire Hazard

Of the hazards of fire, the loss of children is the most pathetic, say members of the Belleville Fire Department.

And injured and dead children are of even more concern in the Christmas season of good cheer and happiness.

"Christmas should be a time of joy for children, but preparations for the festive season, and scenes of the celebrations associated with it, may constitute deadly threats to their lives," warned Fire Chief Leo Culhane.

"Never leave children unattended," urged Mr. Culhane. "Never take a chance on slipping out for a few minutes."

"Only a few seconds can turn happiness to horror when decorations, gift wrappings and trees bring increased dangers of fire into homes."

Mr. Culhane pointed out that the Criminal Code of Canada provides heavy penalties for such negligence which may endanger the life or health of any child under the age of 16 years.

"Never leave them alone for an instant, no matter how strong the temptation to pay a short visit to a neighbor or make a last-minute purchase," Mr. Culhane said.

A reliable baby sitter is the best assurance of freedom from worry.

"Be sure the baby sitter knows the correct action to take if fire should strike. First, get everyone out of the house," Mr. Culhane suggested. "Then call the fire department. The first rule in the event of fire is to get out safely."

Quebec 'Hospitality'

Being stopped by a Quebec provincial policeman for passing on the double line entering Granby some years ago gave a Bellevillian some anxious moments. Quebec, he had been led to believe, was somewhat like Mexico — better that one should avoid all contact with the police. He was allowed to go free though, after a brief lecture from the officer which in retrospect was quite justified.

Less fortunate was the recent experience of a Hawkesbury man who was tailgated by a police cruiser en route home in the early hours of the morning on the Quebec side of the Ottawa river, then arrested for speeding and jailed overnight in St. Jerome.

Relating the incident in a letter to relatives in Belleville, the Hawkesbury citizen said he had speeded up momentarily from 60 to 80 mph to shake off the car behind and make a turn into Grenville just across the bridge from Hawkesbury. Earlier, he had signalled his intention to turn but the car behind did not slow down.

What followed was more than he bargained for. Instructed to leave his car at a garage in Grenville he was driven to police headquarters at St. Phillips (halfway to Lachute) where the officer finished his reports for the day, then another 25 miles to St. Jerome for his night — or what was left of it — it was now 3 a.m.) in the pokey.

The cell had an army cot, two clean sheets, mattress and "one thin blanket you could almost see through," but sleep was impossible for about 4 a.m. the cell's window, hitherto open slightly to admit fresh air, flew open completely. The guards were asleep so there was no help there; the hapless prisoner rubbed his arms and legs until the lights came on at 6 a.m.

Breakfast of oatmeal, toast and coffee of dubious ancestry was followed by exercise in a courtyard with about 85 jail companions. This experience had its lighter moments, for when the Ontarian scored well at tossing rubber horseshoes a guard said, "we are going to invite yo uback here for the finals."

The same guard must have known all the legal ropes because he instructed our friend to call his banker in Hawkesbury and have $35 transferred by wire to a police account in St. Jerome, then led him to a court upstairs; there he pleaded guilty but explained the circumstances. The cheque was then handed over to the judge and the prisoner released. It cost him a further $15 for a taxi back to Grenville.

We have been thinking of that tourist slogan they have in Quebec. It goes something like this: "Hospitality Spoken Here . . . !" Clearly this depends on the interpretation of individuals — so watch it chum when you are visiting La Belle Province by car.

Growing Up

Just being young is at once the most exhilarating and disturbing period in human life.

Being up in the clouds one moment and down in the dumps the next are emotions every teenager recognizes. It is the same in the pre-teen years, so that all in all young people undergo plenty of natural stresses and strains.

Most survive though, and later life assumes a mellower but no less enjoyable aspect. All the same there are pains and these burdens of a psychological nature that call not only for understanding and fortitude, but the care and wisdom of skilled practitioners.

Home, church and school, as well as the community at large must be increasingly sensitive to the problems of the young. When we learn for example of a 14-year-old girl in Calgary committing suicide with her father's gun, blaming her depression and "black moods" on marijuana, we sense the despair that gripe many for want of understanding and just plain "communication."

In England recently, another 14-year-old, the son of a peeress, inexplicably hanged himself in his room at Eton College.

In Japan, according to the Canadian Churchman, published by the Anglican Church, the suicide rate for people under 15 is the highest in the world — this in a "bustling, energetic country . . . where profound changes in the birth rate, family life, industry and communications are taking place at incredible speed . . . where the cost of living is sky high and overcrowding is a major problem."

In Japan, as in every country where technological change is swift and economic progress inexorable, the conflict between people and the machine, between population and available housing, is a pressing social problem. In such countries the needs of people, as people, must not be forgotten.

Focus on Middle East and North Africa

Russia Busy with Economic Aid and Propaganda

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Soviet policy is making important gains in the huge, strategic area loosely described as the Middle East. The troubled area is shaping up as the main cockpit of East-West political conflict in the 1970s.

In showing its concern for the area's complaints, the cautious but effective Soviet program utilizes economic military aid, trade and propaganda.

The Russians fan suspicions of the United States, but seem to want to avoid any chance of provoking hot war or a showdown. The degree of peace they want in the Middle East may be subject to doubt. A stable peace could remove much of the reason for Arab co-operation with the Communist bloc.

A no-war-no-peace policy for the area would tie in with Soviet efforts toward lessening tensions in Europe and with Kremlin advocacy of collective security in Asia. The Russians probably can live in Europe and Asia with something like the status quo while they concentrate on a target which offers considerable promise.

This target is a volatile triangle stretching across the northern tier of Africa and east to Iran, southwest from there to Sudan, and northwest from there to Algeria. The area is home for about 140,000,000 people, many living in backward areas under unstable rule.

At the core of the triangle is an apparently insoluble conflict which pits Arabs and their supporters against Israel, and tends to cast the United States as the chief opponent of popular aspirations. American stock goes down steadily in lands where the United States has enormous economic and strategic interests.

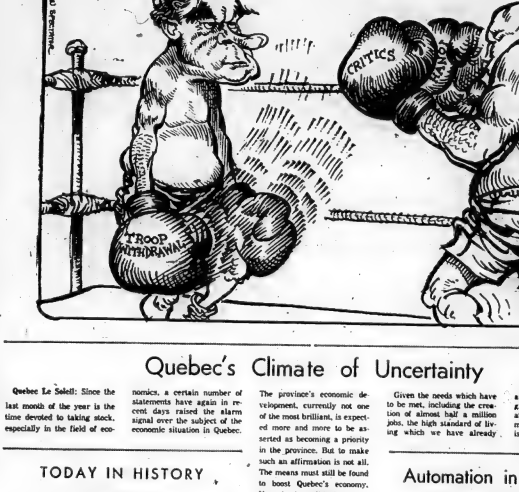
Russian ambitions in the area, at least 100 years old, have led to establishment of Moscow seapower in the Mediterranean with access to the Persian Gulf and Indian Ocean.

Another aim now is to forge a ring of states dependent upon Moscow. The Russians do not need Middle East oil, but undoubtedly seek some authority over the flow of that oil to Europe.

The current thrust of Soviet propaganda, which seems to be bearing fruit, is to sow suspicion of U.S. intentions everywhere.

In Libya, the new regime calls itself "Arab Socialist." Moscow propaganda pushes the notion that the United States supports plots "inspired by foreign powers" against the regime, with an eye to preserving Western bases in the country. Libya has been demanding that the Americans get out of Wheelus Air Base ahead of schedule and the United States is moving to do so.

The Russians profess to stand four-square behind Arab demands for Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab territory as a minimum demand for a settlement, but the Moscow watchword is caution.



Last month, Nasser called upon Arabs to "open our road toward what we want, over a sea of blood and a horizon of fire." The Russians seemed to hail him to cool it.

Meanwhile, Moscow has made points by replacing for Nasser all the $1,000,000,000 worth of Soviet arms destroyed in the 1967 war, though it is generally believed to have avoided increasing the amounts. Egypt swarms with Soviet advisers.

Expanded economic and military aid, along with a lesser flood of advisers, has gone to Syria and Iraq. Even Jordan, whose regime is the least anti-West of the Arab East, benefits from economic-technical co-operation with the Russians.

Those with designs on part of the inner core of the triangle. At the eastern corner, the Communist bloc has extended generous credits to Iran and has been aiding it in economic projects. At the western corner, Algeria's revolutionary regime gets expensive Russian aid.

From the southern tip of the triangle, Sudan's revolutionary government recently sent a delegation to Moscow to prospect for help. Moscow also has been steadily bettering its relations with Turkey, which commands the Dardanelles and its access to the Mediterranean.

Quebec's Climate of Uncertainty

Quebec Le Soleil: Since the last month of the year is the time devoted to taking stock, especially in the field of economics, a certain number of statements have again in recent days raised the alarm signal over the aspect of the economic situation in Quebec.

The province's economic development, currently not one of the most brilliant, is expected more and more to be asserted as becoming a priority in the province. But to make such affirmation is not all. The means must still be found to boost Quebec's economy. Now, is the political and social climate favorable? . . .

Violence and disorders are only one aspect of Quebec's present political climate; the prospect of secession is another. Quebec is not the only area of the world which experiences disorders and violence. But whereas elsewhere, in Europe for example, attempts are being made to unite to expand the consumer market, the prospect of a reduction of the consumer market in a Quebec cut off from the rest of Canada is not of a nature to reassure investors who must count on a certain general order favorable to the sale of their products. . . .

Given the needs which have to be met, including the creation of almost half a million jobs, the high standard of living which we have always and which will not be easy to keep up, Quebec cannot tolerate for much longer the climate of uncertainty which exists at home.

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

François de la Verendrye, the last of the family of great French explorers, was born 254 years ago today—in 1715—the third son of the Sieur de la Verendrye. He discovered the Saskatchewan River in 1739 and spent more than 10 years on the prairies. With his brother Joseph, he may have been the first white man to see the Rockies. After the British conquest of Quebec he inherited a seigniory and lived at Montreal. He died in 1794.

1952—The government announced plans to establish a national library for Canada.

Automation in Vineyards

German Features

BAD KREUZNACH — Winegrowers in Germany may get a boost from a new machine introduced in this Rhine-Palatinate city, the heart of one German wine region. The machine works like a vacuum cleaner, sucking ripe grapes right off the vine.

Presently, winegrowing is still a tedious behobored chore requiring each grape to be picked by hand. The new instrument would require three hands to operate it, but do the work of numerous grape pickers.

In one hour, it can suck in as many grapes as 20 pickers could collect in the same time.

To see how important the development could be to the wine-growing industry: 300 of every 1,000 hours work in making wines go for the grape-picking process.

Only one major problem must still be ironed out before the new machine can be put to work — namely, it not only sucks in the grapes, but foliage as well and the foliage must be separated before the grapes can be mashed for wine. However, the developers believe there's a solution to the problem — using a special wash system.

Talks on Nigerian Conflict Break Down

UK Under Strong Pressure to Encourage Ceasefire

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Collapse of peace negotiations in the Nigerian civil war leaves an abyss which may only be filled by more war and more slaughter.

An official of the secessionist Nigerian state of Biafra says much unrewarding effort went into the proposed peace talks with the federal government that his people would look on any new proposals with only the greatest suspicion.

The Addis Ababa talks broke down even before they started.

The weight of British public expression, as seen by editorial reaction and comment by British officials, is that the Biafrans won a propaganda advantage by at least turning up at the Ethiopian capital while Nigerian federal authorities still lingered in Lagos.

In Paris, Le Monde suggested the Nigerian federal forces are biding their time, awaiting the outcome of the latest ground offensive before solidifying a political negotiating position. In other words, the Ethiopian talks would have been meaningless since the federal side is still convinced it can obtain a military victory which time has shown it has been unable to achieve so far despite a heavy flow of armament support from Britain and the Soviet Union.

The Biafrans went to Addis Ababa in what seemed to be, at least on the surface, in good faith. They were advised by Emperor Haile Selassie, 77, that there would be no preconditions to the negotiations. But as it turned out, there were preconditions. The talks would be under the auspices of the Organization of African Unity which already has called for peace on the basis of a united Nigeria which the Biafrans have consistently opposed.

On the other hand, the Biafrans have indicated in various ambiguous statements that they no longer were rigidly demanding a completely independent Biafra, perhaps hinting to Lagos that some compromise was possible.

It appeared evident from the rigid position taken by the Biafrans at Addis Ababa that they still are not prepared to yield much political ground and that sovereignty is still the biggest issue in the bargaining.

British officials maintain that they urged Lagos to send a delegation to Addis Ababa but to no avail. How much diplomacy went into this British urging is still a matter for conjecture for the British government has consistently supported the federal side, simply treating the Biafrans as rebels.

But the abortive Addis Ababa talks have had at least one effect: They have increased pressure inside Britain for great official British action to work for a ceasefire.

The British newspaper The Guardian, which has given Prime Minister Wilson some support in other fields, says that in view of the imminence of new slaughter, Wilson ought to insist on a ceasefire, even on pain of cutting off arms supplies to the federal side.

The London Daily Telegraph also calls for a review of the British position. It is time, it says, for elimination of rigid protocol. The British government should send a representative to Biafra, if Gen. Odumegwu Ojukwu will let one in.

What About Me?

Maggie, the family pet, wanted a quick look at his present when Santa showed up at the Farmers' Market in Picton on Saturday. It was an annual visit for the Christmas season's busiest man.

Party Whirl Nears End As Christmas Gets Closer

PICTON — Holly is "in" and mistletoe is mod in the party whirl that is preceding Christmas in Prince Edward County this year. Santa began his final series of personal appearances before the 'big night' in Picton yesterday. From his sleigh he dispensed holiday treats to a crowd of youngsters gathered at Vince's Farmers' Market on Bridge St., Sunday afternoon.

Christmas in song came to Prince Edward County in a candlelight service at Bethany Christian Reformed Church, Bloomfield, Sunday night. This special hour of worship was sponsored by the Young People of the church joined by the choir.

Members of Picton United Church joined in a Candlelight Carol Vesper service yesterday afternoon to mark the holiday season.

In a 'festivities flashback', last week's holiday magic included two parties for quite privileged youngsters of Picton and Prince Edward County. Members of Kinsmen and Kiwanis Clubs and their wives entertained 92 young guests at a party in the Royal Hotel last week. Santa arrived to present each child with gifts of toys and clothing. Last Friday evening the Salvation Army also sponsored a party for underprivileged boys and girls.

Christmas isn't just for children, in the opinion of the Picton Kinsmen. This service club made it possible for Picton's senior citizens to go out on the town last week to view the colorful outdoor lights. Members of the Kinmen Club drove the senior citizens to Picton fire hall where a bus, donated for the evening by Wayne Martin, took them on a gala tour of the town.

Pictonians seem to be in the swing of the Christmas season judging by the number of yuletide trees sold recently. About three weeks ago, local merchant Vincent Gemile brought 600 Christmas trees from the Bowmanville area to Picton. The trees sold quickly and this weekend not one evergreen remained behind his store. Elsewhere in the county Christmas tree sales are reportedly "very good." Almost gone are the days of chopping down the Christmas tree and dragging it home through the snow.

Area Snowmobile Club Has First Aid Team

MARMORA — One of the few clubs in Ontario to sponsor a rescue and first aid team, the Marmora and District Snowmobile Club has picked an 11-man crew for this purpose. The St. John Ambulance course was given on Sunday morning and afternoon by Mrs. Bernice Young, and the team, especially chosen for their qualifications, were tested that evening by an examiner from Belleville.

Although snowmobile activities are numerous in the Marmora area, through the efforts of the Club and its members, there have been scarcely any complaints. It is not necessary for the machines to buzz up and down the streets causing a disturbance, due to the fact that there are so many miles of carefully marked local trails maintained in the woodlands in all directions from the Village, and linking with the 350 miles of trails in the Centre Hastings Sports Area.

The Club is well aware of the possibility of accidents. Drivers and passengers have been asked to wear safety helmets on every outing, and to remember that if an injury does occur, the consequences could be less serious if help is obtained through the St. John Ambulance Corps sponsored by the Club, before moving the injured person.

A sleigh is being constructed to serve as an ambulance, and will be available 24 hours of the day at the Marmora Fire Department. This will be completely equipped with first aid equipment, new type of splints, and will be ready for operation Christmas week.

The men taking the course, all skilful and experienced snowmobilers, including firemen, woodsmen and trappers, will be well qualified to assist in case of an accident. Under the direction of Jack Fraser, the crew members are: Ray Black, Ted Bonter, Roger Snider, Clarence Shannon, Vic Provost, Ted Fox, Roger Nesbeth, Ken Bonter, Vern Strasburg, and Wayne Potts.

Family of 4 Homeless;

A family of four have been left homeless after a Sunday morning blaze damaged their Front Street apartment and kept Belleville firemen working for an hour.

Mr. and Mrs. William Wellington and their two small children were driven from their apartment at 338 Front Street Sunday morning at 9:40 a.m. when a fire broke out in a front bedroom of their residence.

"There was quite a bit of damage in the apartment," explained fire chief Leo Culhane "but it was mostly water and smoke damage.

The Vogue Beauty Salon and Skinner's Barber Shop also suffered from smoke and water damage, being part of the building in which the apartment was situated.

However, a back apartment had little or no damage.

"In another five minutes we would have had quite a problem putting out the fire. It would have got into the attic," Mr. Culhane said.

Cause of the incident has not been ascertained as yet. The fire department was unable to quote damage figures.

Bird Census Reveals About 40 Species Here

Christmas birdlife' means more than turkey in Belleville.

In fact, for a dedicated band of Bellevillians it's one of the busiest times of their year.

They are the Quinte Field Naturalists now engaged in their annual Christmas census of the birds of Belleville.

The actual count was taken yesterday — and for the first time Bellevillians generally were invited to join in.

The naturalists, on watch at feeding stations in various parts of the city, also enlisted the aid of householders who were asked to phone information on any birds they spotted around their gardens.

The public came up with what a naturalist described as "a wonderful response."

The total result revealed a count of 40 different species. Predominant was the common sparrow. But other breeds ranged from hawks to more exotic identities like the dickessall, and redbreasted nuthatcher.

The census is a Christmas ritual of birdwatching groups across North America, compiled for the Audobon Society.

Points for Parents

By MARY BEYSON

Mother: "I know just how you feel. I had the same kind of disappointment in love when I was your age. Really and truly, time will solve your problem."

When your teen ager has a major disappointment, the best thing you can do for her is to be there to listen in sympathetic silence if she wants to talk. Comments and advice may be annoying and unwelcome.

Daughter: "You don't know how I feel. This is completely different."

A teen-ager does not always want too much understanding, and she likes to think her problems and griefs are unique. Your attention and interest will let her know you care more than anything you might say.

Letter Tells of Two Women Legally Wed

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Recently, in response to a query, you said you knew of no state in the union where two women could be legally married. This is to inform you that two women were married in Sioux Falls, S.D., on Valentine's Day of this year. They are now trying to get a divorce in Minneapolis.

ANN LANDERS

The plaintiff is a 23-year-old woman who claims she was legally married to her 42-year-old girl friend by a Circuit Court Judge in Sioux Falls. The judge insists that he has no recollection of the marriage and added, "There must have been fraud and misrepresentation in obtaining the licence." He said when a couple comes to him with a licence, he doesn't ask questions. "I assume one is a boy and the other is a girl," he added. I thought you'd like to know the latest. — C.R.

DEAR C.R.: Someone should inform the judge that those days, it's somewhat risky to assume "one is a boy and the other is a girl." It's best to ask.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a speech therapist. Please help me deliver a message to millions of well-meaning parents who are damaging their children. I am referring to the way they deal with the child who stutters.

Most children between the ages of three and five stutter somewhat when they first learn to speak. This is normal. Parents can tear the stuttering is going to be permanent, so they interrupt and say, "Stop! Start over! Don't talk so fast!"

If you are a parent who is guilty of this, please stop doing it. Simply ignore the child's stuttering. It is a habit he will probably outgrow. If, by the time he is six years of age he is still stuttering, take him to a speech therapist. Remember that stuttering is a break in the fluency of speech. Every time you say "uh —" or — "err" you, too, are stuttering, only in a more grown up way. So, you see, we all stutter at some time, in some fashion. — NOELA

DEAR NOELA: Thank you for a letter which should be immensely helpful to a great many readers. Because you wrote, several thousand kids are going to express themselves uninterrupted tonight, and that's as it should be.

A Proposed Menu for the Festive Dinner

By Mary Moore

1969 CHRISTMAS DINNER MENU

Broiled Pink Grapefruit Halves Maraschino (see below)
Roast Stuffed Turkey (see Wednesday Dec. 17)
Giblet Gravy
Delicate Mashed Potatoes and Turnip (see below)
Cauliflower with Pimiento Cream Sauce (see below)
Jellied Cranberry Salad (see Wednesday Dec. 24)
Canadian Plum Pudding (see Wednesday Dec. 10)
Hard Sauce OR Lemon Nutmeg-Sauce (see Thursday Dec. 11)
Mints Milk for Children Coffee

Most of the important items on our menu have been described in detail in recent columns but some young brides might welcome other details in our proposed menu

BROILED PINK GRAPEFRUIT HALVES MARASCHINO

Cut enough large choice grapefruits in halves to provide one for each guest. With sharp knife and scissors remove seeds and core. Loosen pulp from skin and membrane with sharp pointed knife. Sprinkle each half with 1 tsp. sugar and, 1 tbsp. maraschino syrup (from bottled maraschino cherries). If you have Angostura bitters on hand shake on a few drops. Place on broiler rack. Broil 4" from preheated burner until hot and flecked with gold. Serve at once on tea plates.

To prepare the Mashed Potatoes and Turnip cook equal amounts of both vegetables in salted water until very tender. Drain well and shake over heat to dry them. Mash (or beat with beater) until no lumps remain. Add cream and butter and salt and pepper and nutmeg to taste. I cannot give you amounts for I do not know how many guests you are serving but invite a willing fellow helper to help you decide on the right amount of seasonings. Reheat, stirring constantly and serve in preheated vegetable dish.

For the Pimiento Cream Sauce on the cauliflower simply add chopped canned pimiento to medium white sauce. See Wednesday for recipes for Jellied Cranberry Salad.

One Advised to Start Early In Making Life's Decisions

By DORIS CLARK

If you have a big decision facing you, how long does it take you to make up your mind? To be able to decide wisely and without too much stalling is a sign of maturity.

It isn't easy to get that way. One needs to start early — like at age two. Small things at first, like which toy to play with: which pair of socks to put on.

- Later on (say at age six or seven), the world is shaking choices come in the realm of dress or hair-do or how to best squander a dime or a quarter.

Round about the ripe age of ten one begins to do some friend-choosing in earnest; and into high school thinking come many decisions about dating, party behavior, what vocation to get started at.

Then much later — we hope — choice of a mate.

With practice comes judgment, some self-assurance. The boy or girl who hasn't had the course, whose every decision is made for him or her, is a sitting duck for the approach of the smooth seducer (in any area of conflict).

He has never decided his own fate, nor will he now. The overprotected teen-ager is easily overruled.

Dear Doris: I am grateful to you for your comments on the problems of deafness. Few people are aware that speech is directly dependent on hearing and that the poor quality of speech in the deaf is not a sign of ignorance.

May I suggest the following hints in dealing with the oral deaf?

(1) Speak distinctly but don't overemphasize lip movement.

(2) Don't be afraid to repeat or rephrase a question. (The embarrassment is generally on the part of the hearing person).

(3) The speaker should face the light. You can't lipread a silhouette.

(4) Be willing to hire a deaf employee. They are equally as intelligent as a hearing person and frequently have better work habits, resulting from years of training. — Mother of Profoundly Deaf Child.

Dear Mother: Thank you for sharing what you have found out the hard, heart-breaking way!

Women's Institutes

QUEENSBORO WI

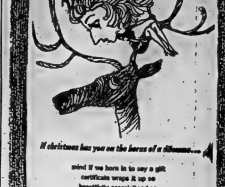
QUEENSBORO — The December meeting of the Queensboro Branch of the Women's Institute was held in the WI Hall on Wednesday evening, December 10. Mrs. Arthur Holmes was hostess and Mrs. C. A. McMurray presided when 15 members attended.

It was decided that a gift be given to any members moving away from the community in the future. It was also decided to send flowers as a Christmas remembrance to both the homes for Senior Citizens, again this year. Mrs. Allan Sager consented to be the girls' club leader for the next club if she can get assistance.



The branch directors were in charge of the program. Miss Roberta told the story of how turkeys got their name. She also gave a reading "No Time for Christmas". Mrs. Harold Tukley conducted a contest "A Christmas Jumble". Several carols were sung by the group. A surprise visit from Santa was enjoyed by all.

Lunch was served and a social time spent.

WHA Enjoys Yule Party

The annual Christmas dessert party was enjoyed on Tuesday by many members of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary, Mrs. J. R. Durrant and her committee had spent a great deal of time arranging the dessert tables and individual tea tables with Christmas candles, floral centrepieces and tempting desserts.

Puppets, dressed for Christmas by Mrs. C. D. Ashley and her committee were on display. These puppets will be given to the children being discharged from Paediatrics.

Mrs. P. M. Tift reported that she had a variety of favors, which she will place on the patient's trays on Christmas Eve. Gifts from the Auxiliary will be given by Mrs. Tift and several others to each patient in the hospital on Christmas Day.

An outstanding year has evolved for the Opportunity Shop. Mrs. F. A. Beeby expressed thanks to the Ghrex other conveners, Mrs. F. H. Bowler, Mrs. C. Campbell and Mrs. Joseph Gallagher. Their efficient co - operation has resulted in a smooth running operation. The artistic talent of Mrs. W. C. Gault is evident in the Shop during this season with many Christmas decorations. A cheque for $1,250 for November was presented to Mrs. B. E. Burley, which brings the total to $11,700.00 for the year 1969. Although the Shop closes on Saturday until the new year, any Christmas decorations or articles suitable to be sold for Christmas gifts would be welcome.

The Samaritan Cupboard has been well stocked, stated Mrs. Robert Temple.

There are eight new volunteers in the hospital, Mrs. S. B. Bochmek told the meeting. A total of 162 patients were visited by free lance visitors during November, also 101 calls were made for credit pictures. The latter project is in charge of Mrs. R. S. Knight.

The library carts now have the Women's Hospital Auxiliary crest on them stating that the lending service is free. Drivers are also needed to transport patients to physiotherapy. A mother and daughter tea was held for the junior volunteers. Eleven of the girls received awards marking their accomplishment of a total of over 600 hours completed for volunteer service.

A party took place in Paediatrics on Friday, at which toys, purchased for the auxiliary were given to the patients. Mrs. J. R. Nelles represented the president, Mrs. B. E. Burley, assisted by Mrs. S. B. Bochmek, second vice-president and Mrs. C. D. Ashley, third vice - president.

On Tuesday, January 20 at 1 p.m. the annual luncheon will be held in Education Hall. Mr. R. Alan Hay, executive director of the Hospital Auxiliaries' Association, will be the guest speaker.

Mrs. B. E. Burley wished all the members a Merry Christmas and thanked them for their support during the past year.

U.C.W. Meetings

The Christmas meeting of Mount Pleasant-Rawdon United Church women was held at the hall with 42 women present. Special decorations included lighted lanterns, a tree and poinsettas.

Mrs. Mac Sharp provided the piano music and accompanied the carol singing. Mrs. Burton Sharpe presided and reports were given by Mrs. Harry McAdam and Mrs. Grant Hubbie.

The 1970 allocation for the presbyterial budget is $500, with another $20, allotted for presbyterial expenses. The supply department sent two bales during the year at a cost of $64.

Donations were authorized for St. Paul's clothing room board and for presbyterial welfare fund for a fourteen-year-old boy.

During the year two members each had an unknown UCW friend and gifts were received at this meeting.

Mrs. Robert H. Hoard and Mrs. Stanley Williams were in charge of the program which was interspersed with carols. Conducting the devotional were Mrs. Herbert Smith, Mrs. Oscar Merrick, Mrs. Verna Hoard and Mrs. Clarence Scott.

Selections were read by Mrs. Ross Jeffs, Mrs. Douglas Campbell and the conveners, Mrs. Burton Sharpe with Mrs. Allen Reid as assistant provided Christmas refreshment.

The group opened their gift parcels and learned who had been the unknown friends during the year.

Retarded Students Entertained

A most enjoyable event took place recently when students of the Belleville School for the Retarded were entertained by the Order of the Chambra Indian 109.

The annual Christmas party was held last Sunday afternoon on third floor Knights of Columbus Hall.

A sing-song and entertainment were enjoyed. Santa arrived and presented each child with a gift, after which refreshments were served.

Service Will Be Held Christmas Eve

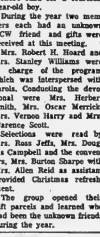
TYENDINAGA RESERVE — A communion service will be held Christmas Eve in Christ Church on the Tyendinaga Reserve, beginning at 11.30 p.m. Rev. Cecil Betts, rector of Tyendinaga and chaplain of the Mohawks will officiate.



This is one of the three occasions during the year when the priceless Queen Anne communion silver is used. It is also used on Easter Sunday and on Mohawk Sunday, the Sunday nearest May 22, which is the anniversary of the Mohawk landing on the shores of the Bay of Quinte in 1783. The silver was brought to the area at this time and used in the Indians' service of thanksgiving soon after they landed.

The silver had been presented to the Mohawks by Queen Anne in 1711 and was used in their chapel in the Mohawk Valley. When they fled during the American Revolution, it was buried for safety's sake, but was rescued somewhat by before they left for Lachine, where they had lived temporarily.

VON Nurse Gives Report

The local branch of the Victorian Order of Nurses held its December meeting recently at the Y.M.C.A.

The nurse-in charge Miss Nama Gundall reported that 268 visits had been made locally during the month of November.

School Party Held For Mentally Retarded

NAPANEE — The school for special children in Morven recently held its first Christmas party, the children having been at Happy Day School last year.

Parents, as well as some members of the local Association for the Mentally Retarded and several members of the County School Board were guests. Mrs. Kay Coathup, a board member, chaired the event, along with R. A. Dodds, superintendent of schools; J. C. McLeod, director of education; Patrick Slack, the county board's diagnostician; Mrs. Beverley Heavie, resource teacher for special education and A. D. Medd, another board member.

The program included selections by a rhythm band and a kazoo band, as well as a number of group songs. There were two solo performers: one boy who did well on the harmonica and a girl, who sang for the guests. Then came Santa Claus with a gift for each pupil from his teacher and another from a fellow student. Refreshments were served.

The previous week pupils of the Morven school gave a party for trainees now working in the Happy Day School workshop.

The Morven school has 19 pupils in the senior class, taught by the principal, Mrs. Freman Martin and eight in the junior class, with Mrs. Garnet Dupre as teacher.

The Story of the First Christmas

It is a story that is told and re-told every year, but one that never loses its meaning. The players are all members of Eastminster United Church, acting out their roles in the Christmas production "A Star of the East," held Sunday night at Moira Secondary School. It was the second year for the Christmas presentation, which again met with good response from the public.

Outstanding Performance At Eastminster Yule Pageant

An outstanding performance of "Star of the East," a Christmas pageant, was presented Sunday evening by the members of Eastminster United Church. The event was opened by Rev. Alex McDowell, minister of the church who led in prayer. Director producer was Hilda Hoodercon who must be commended for a production well done.

An especially good performance was given by the girls' choir. Choir leaders were Grace McGugan sod Marion Smith. Mildred Graham and Evelyn Martin were pianists.

Joseph and Mary were played by Ted Smith and Bonny Wormald, who gave a fine performance. However, the cast as a whole contributed to the making of a well rehearsed and exceptionally good rendering of the Christmas story.

During the event, the audience danced to the singing a number of Christmas carols.

The services of the wardrobe designers and sewers were put to good use — it was evident that a lot of time and energy was put into the creation of the striking and authentic costumes worn by the cast.

The members of Eastminster Church demonstrated that the real spirit of Christmas still exists and the number of people present was a good indication of interest taken in the real meaning of Christmas.

Club Activities

HI-TOPS CLUB

ROSLIN — The Roslin Hi - Tops held a Christmas Party in the form of a Mother - Daughter diet banquet recently in the Thomasburg United Church Hall. The hall was gaily decorated with a Christmas tree and decorations. The evening was opened with a welcome by the leader Mrs. Peg Minzs, followed by the singing of grace.

The following committees were thanked: The banquet committee including Mrs. Beatrice Ray, Freda Morton and Grace Boldrick. The decoration committee consisting of Association of Mrs. Freda Morton and Mrs. Peg Minzi. The entertainment and message committee Mrs. Hazel Beckman and the Ethel Slingerland. Special thanks were given to Mrs. Olive Newman and Mrs. Rhonda Fraser for their assistance.

The Queen for November was Mrs. Alice Mumby and the runner-up was Mrs. Beatrice Ray.

The Awards were announced for the most weight loss in the five week contest and they are as follows: Ethel Slingerland, Beatrice Ray, Mary - Jane Rollins and Alice Mumby.

After the banquet, a small meeting followed. It was decided another contest would follow for five weeks at which time the Marshal would have to lose at least five pounds. General business followed.

The evening was closed and entertainment under the direction of the executive followed.

The Experts Say

Most Children Get Immunization Shots

TORONTO (CP) — The average Canadian baby joins the ranks of the public-spirited at the age of about three months, though it probably makes him howl with rage.

Every time he gets a shot to immunize him against a communicable disease, not only is he a little safer but so is the community.

Dr. J. Stewart Bell says that in theory the spread of a disease can be stopped by immunizing every second person against it, provided the unprotected are scattered through the community.

Dr. Bell says the majority of Canadians automatically see that their children get protective shots, but he and his staff keep an eye out for occasional pockets of unprotected people. They are most likely to be formed by newly arrived immigrants from countries where immunizations are not customary. Dr. Bell says that in such cases his department circulates information among the people and encourages them to get "done."

"There is no compulsion for it. Years ago there was an attempt made to make smallpox vaccination compulsory, but it was ruled ultra vires (beyond the powers of), not in the jurisdiction of the health department."

Dr. Bell is chief of Ontario's epidemiology service. That means, roughly, that he is in charge of communicable disease control in the province.

He says there is little fear or nervousness about shots in the public mind now. Since the Second World War, it is customary to have a normally healthy baby immunized against a growing list of diseases.

"One of the advantages of infant vaccine is that they're not old enough to worry about a shot or scarteh it."

The series begins about three to six months. Ordinarily the first shot is a combination of diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus and polio. Smallpox and measles follow and then boosters.

Measles is customarily given as a separate shot, but Dr. Bell says Ontario has a special program that involves incorporating the measles component that can be given early in the first year because this is a time when serious complications have occurred.

"Besides, it means fewer shots for the baby and makes it easier for mothers to remember what shots they've had."

Dr. Bell says most shots stimulate protective antibody reactions. Only those made of live vaccine, such a measles and smallpox, produce a mild form of the disease to produce immunization.

As a rule, he says, immunized cases should be boosted at five-year intervals. He says whooping cough can be dropped first, after school entrance. Diphtheria, tetanus and polio he recommends repeating until leaving school. Adults should have tetanus, polio and smallpox shots repeated regularly.

"A mumps vaccine exists, but is probably not needed on a mass scale. A typhoid vaccine exists, but the improvement there has been produced by other means, pasteurizing milk, disposing of sewage more effectively, adding chlorine to water.

"A lot of work has been done on influenza but the virus keeps changing, so it's hard to keep ahead of it. It is most needed."

He says each new vaccine brings with it some questions.

Truckers Want $5 Hour Boost

CHICAGO (AP) — The 450,000 union truck drivers in the United States have set a $5-an-hour wage increase and additional contributions to their health and welfare funds as goals for contract negotiations, an officer of a local union says.

Edward Fenner, executive director of the Independent Chicago Truck Drivers Union, said Sunday the International Brotherhood of Teamsters will present the demands to the trucking industry Jan. 7 in Washington. The current contract expires March 31.

Fenner said he believes the truckers will get their demands without a strike.

If the wage demands are won, the total compensation of the drivers will rise in three years to $9.75 from about $4.75 an hour, or an annual salary of $14,872 by 1972.

"Our demands will not be inflationary provided the employers maintain a normal level of profits instead of tripling their prices and using labor as the scapegoat," Fenner said.

All Seasons Bench

During the summer Toronto parks are pockets of activity. But when the snow comes there is hardly a person to be seen — except for hardy souls such as Gloria Zuccala and Richard Flaman, students at the University of Western Ontario in London, who found that a bench in Queen's Park was great after a snowfall. ## Armed Robberies Higher in Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Armed robberies, marked by death and injury in many cases, are on the increase in Montreal and special measures to deal with them are having little effect, police say.

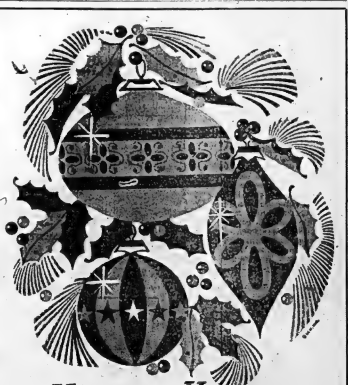
Police have beefed up patrols in the last 10 days and have started spot checks of vehicles they consider suspicious.

But during the weekend, the city's normal once-an-hour holdup rate almost doubled at one point as 22 armed robberies were reported in 12 hours.

Police Director Jean Paul Gilbert, who plans to retire Jan. 1, said major crimes in Montreal have climbed to 41,000 in the first 11 months of 1969, a 19 per-cent increase over the same period last year.

Police define major crimes as murder, rape, robbery and violence, burglary, auto theft and thefts of $50 and more.

During the weekend, three armed men entered the city's voluntary tax and permits departments, bound and gagged three watchmen, and stole cash estimated at between $5,000 and $10,000 and cheques valued at at least $25,000.



Burglars made off with more than $30,000 in cash and merchandise and assorted minor robberies were reported.

Among recent violent holdups:

—A $125,000 heist last Wednesday at a credit union in the Canadian Pacific Railway's east-end Rachel Street shops during which Brinks guard Real Champagne was killed by a burst from a machine gun;

—A Dec. 13 holdup at a confectionery in which Yves Richard, 16, was shot to death as he entered the store;

—A Dec. 3 holdup in which Napoleon Marcoux was shot in the chest in his grocery store after refusing money to armed robbers. Mr. Marcoux now is paralyzed from the waist down.

Three Different Ways to Deal with Israel Studied by Arabs

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — Three different viewpoints emerged today as delegates from 14 Arab states and the Palestine Liberation Organization met in private session seeking a new strategy against Israel.

Sources at the Arab summit conference said the first lengthy discussions on Sunday produced these suggested courses of action:

1. Several rulers want to continue the search for a political solution although they do not necessarily subscribe to any of the formulas proposed since the 1967 war.

2. A number of states, reported to include Egypt and Libya, favor launching a general war against Israel in an attempt to recover the territory lost in 1967. But some leaders doubt that the Arabs are ready for another round of hostilities.

3. One group of leaders holds the view that territories occupied by Israel—the Sinai Desert, the west bank of the River Jordan and the Golan Heights of Syria—would provide ideal base areas for Palestinian Arab guerrilla raids against Israel.

The Palestinians, these leaders believe, should form a government in exile under guerrilla chief Yasser Arafat. The guerrillas should be given maximum backing by the Arab states, they say, because guerrilla action would eventually force Israel to negotiate with the Palestinian provisional government and reach an agreement under which both sides could live within Israel's pre-1967 borders.

Sources in Arafat's delegation said the Palestinians are not interested in forming a 'provisional government because this could cause "political complications" for the guerrilla movement.

Reuters news agency reported that an Egyptian plan, presented Sunday night by Minister Mohammed Fawzy, is believed to detail the specific commitments expected from each one of the 11 Arab League members.

Observers say the plan does not call for blank cheques from the 14 nations but rather is a contingency plan designed to increase the credibility of the Arab military threat.

Egypt and Jordan, who pushed for the plan at a meeting of the Arab Defence Council in Cairo last month, want to know just what aid they can expect from the other Arab states if the present undeclared war along the Israeli ceasefire lines escalates into open war.

Arafat himself was treated almost like a chief of state by the Arab leaders, and was seated on the same level as the kings and presidents of Arab states.

One result of the first day's talks was the announcement that Syria and Morocco have decided to restore diplomatic relations after a four-year break caused when the Syrian radio insulted King Hassan II of Morocco.

Another inter-Arab dispute, the recent border fighting between Saudi Arabia and South Yemen, has been shifted to the sidelines of the conference, sources reported. The two countries agreed to accept an offer by President Nasser to mediate.

California Oil Slick Spreads

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (Reuters) — An oil slick began washing ashore in the surf over 11 miles of beach south of here this weekend as Union Oil Co. reported increased seepage from its controversial oil well in the Santa Barbara Channel.

The Union oil well sprang a major leak in January, spewing gummy black oil over beaches and spreading an 800-square-mile slick over the Pacific Ocean.

The new oil slick was brought ashore by huge waves which have been battering the southern California coast for the last week.

Following the earlier seepage crisis, Union Oil succeeded in reducing seepage to 10 to 15 barrels a day but a break in the pipeline carrying oil from the platform to shore storage tanks brought a new crisis Tuesday.

The company ordered operations suspended but said this caused pressure to build in the well, resulting in a "substantial increase" in seepage.

But the company added that when the pipeline was repaired and pumping resumed later in the week, pressure was reduced and the seepage again reduced.

Union Oil officials would not say how much oil was leaking from the undersea well now.

Woman Threw Dog Into Sea

LONDON (Reuters) — British newspapers today carried front-page stories about a woman who threw her pet dog off an English Channel ferry because she could not afford the quarantine fees.

Rhona Tillock, a secretary, said she had smuggled the dog, a mongrel called Stuffles, aboard the ferry in Belgium but was warned by ship's officers that she faced a two-year jail term if she tried to avoid Britain's strict quarantine laws. All pets entering Britain must spend eight months in quarantine at the owner's expense.

"It sounds a monstrous thing to do," said Miss Tillock. "But I had no choice. I liked the dog but I couldn't face going to jail for him."

The incident was reported to have happened about three weeks ago and now is under investigation by the Royal Society for Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Plane Hijacking Prevented

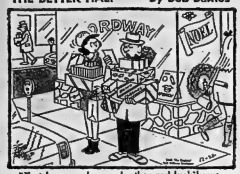
ATHENS (Reuters) — A ticket counter clerk who became suspicious of three young Arabs carrying identical bags called police Sunday and helped to prevent the hijacking of an American Trans World Airlines jetliner.

One of the three was detained in the airport lounge and his bag was found to contain explosives. The others were arrested aboard the airport bus carrying passengers to the airliner, which was on a flight from Tel Aviv to New York via Rome.

The Associated Press said the trio carried firearms, explosives and a hand grenade.

Police named the three as Issam Doumidi, Sami Aboud, and a girl, Amoud Khal. They were said to be aged between 18 and 22 and were travelling on forged Lebanese passports.



The AP said that police sources quoted Aboud as saying that they hoped to force the plane to fly to Damascus, Syria, after taking over in mid-flight to Rome.

It quoted the sources as saying that the three apparently intended to copy three other Arabs, including a woman, who hijacked a jetliner between Rome and Athens, forced the pilot to fly to Damascus and then blew off the plane's nose after putting off all the passengers.

The three told police that they would "blow up the nose of the plane."

China Attacks Russia For Talks with Germany

HONG KONG (Reuters) — China today attacked the Soviet Union for holding non-aggression talks with West Germany.

An article in the People's Daily, broadcast by Peking Radio, said the Kremlin was making "a dirty deal" with the West German government of Chancellor Willy Brandt, betraying the German people and trying to meet Bonn's demands in West Berlin.

Describing the Soviet government as "the Soviet revisionist ruling clique," the official newspaper said the Moscow talks, starting Dec. 8 on a non-aggression pact, were a new step to intensify Soviet-West German collusion.

"It is also part of its sinister deal with U.S. imperialism to carve up Europe into their spheres of influence," it said.

Lost Thumb Replaced By Big Toe

LONDON (AP) — British doctors have replaced a man's missing thumb with his big toe and the patient now is earning a deft living as a woodworker, a medical magazine reports.

The Journal of Bone and Joint Surgery says the patient, who was not named, had his left thumb cut off by a circular saw. Doctors at Queen Victoria Hospital in East Grinstead grafted the top joints of his left big toe onto his mutilated hand, using a special microscope to join the blood vessels and nerve fibres.

The magazine says the German microscope permitted two surgeons to look through it at the same time during the operation.

U.S. OUTNUMBERED

NEWPORT, R.I. (AP) — A navy official says the Russians have the largest submarine force in the world, and by the end of the year will have more nuclear subs than the United States.

Capt. Robert E. Williams, director of the School of Naval Warfare at the Naval War College, said in a speech yesterday that Soviet ships now call at more than 800 ports in 100 countries.

Five Far-left Groups Unite

ROME (AP) — In the wake of police crackdowns on political extremism in Italy, five far leftist organizations banded together Sunday to form a committee of "revolutionary forces against repression."

The committee was formed during an assembly of about 200 militants and intellectuals including writer Albert Moravia and film director Pier Paolo Pasolini.

The meeting resulted from widespread arrests of extreme leftists and rightists that followed bomb attacks in Milan and Rome Dec. 12.

It was an unprecedented example of unity among the revolutionary groups, which before the bombings spent much of the time feuding among each other.

Representatives attended from three pro-Chinese Communist-Maoist parties, from a militant workers' group called Worker Power and from another militant organization called Continuous Struggle.

Moravia and Pasolini, two of Italy's best known intellectuals are declared Marxists.

The Milan and Rome bombings killed 14 persons and injured more than 100 others. Police have jailed six persons.

Elephant Takes Over House

WINTER PARK, Fla. (AP) — Edward Stewart heard a tap-tap on his door Saturday night. He looked out—briefly.

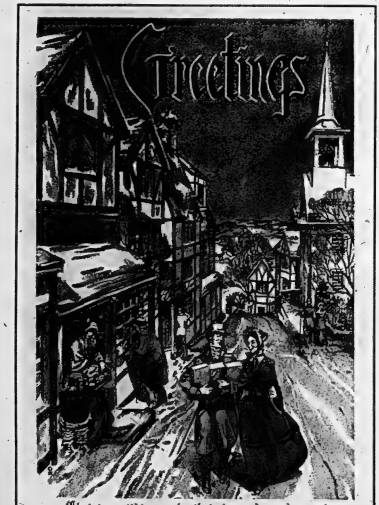
"Shirley, be yelled at his wife. "There's an elephant at the door. Let's get out of here."

They did and Kari the elephant took it as an invitation.

She entered the home and, en route to the garbage, pulled down some drapes with her trunk.

She was trapped in the garage a short while later, ending a three-hour safari that left crushed shrubs, splintered doors and a fence mangled by a jeep.

Kari, still a baby but weighing a ton, broke loose from her trainers during a circus performance at the Orlando Naval Training Centre.



Sailors took up the chase. Kari trotted around the base. Twice she was cornered, and her would-be captors chanied her to a jeep.

Frightened by the noise, Kari decided to go for another walk. She took the jeep with her. They parted company at the training centre fence.

Then she showed up at the Stewarts' house and was finally captured.

Way Paved for British Entry

Common Market Is in Accord On Financing Farm Policies

BRUSELS (Reuters) — European Common Market ministers reached agreement early today on how to finance their farm policy—a key development which paves the way for talks on British entry into the six-country community.

The agreement, thrashed out after long hours of bargaining which at one stage threatened to produce deadlock between France and its five partners, was considered a milestone in the development of the market and its greatest achievement in recent years.

France, as the Market's largest farm producer, had insisted that a g r e e m e n t should be reached on the Market's common fund before entry talks with Britain and its fellow applicants could begin. The fund is mainly used to support the farm policy, guaranteeing farmers minimum prices. French farmers benefit the most.

The six finance ministers, closeted in a small room in the B r u s s e l Palais de Congres backed by banks of calculating machines, finally agreed on a fi. n a n c i n g formula to which France consented after its contribution to the fund next year was slightly reduced.

An understanding also was reached on how to give the European parliament power to exercise budgetary control over Market spending.

The new plan comes into full operation in 1978 after a preparatory period.

It provides that member countries will pay into the common fund, as they do now, the levies that are imposed on food imports from outside the market.

In addition, they will pay in all customs duties on industrial imports, as well as part of the revenue from a tax levied throughout the market. This is a tax on goods placed at various stages of the manufacturing and marketing process.

The six agreed that these customs duties would be paid in progressively i n increasing amounts during a transitional period. Several countries, including The Netherlands and West Germany which are heavy importers of industrial goods, said that immediate payment of all customs duties would prove too heavy a burden.

At French insistence, it was decided that payment of farm levies would be automatic, as at present. The French fear that any limit on these payments could open the way for lower-priced food imports from outside the Market.

The transition period would have two phases. During the first, in 1978, payments of farm levies would be made according to a fixed percentage for each country.

This was mainly to satisfy Italy, who said it was paying too much. Its contribution, and that of some others, was reduced while France's shot up by several per cent.

France objected to this but consented after a reduction of 0.9 per cent to 38 per cent in its contribution.

But beginning in 1971, the countries will pay in all farm levies, adding each year a gradually-increasing amount of their customs duties until, by 1975, the entire amount is paid into the fund.

This will mean that France, whose food and industrial imports are comparatively low, will see its total contribution decrease as those of the others increase.

Hess Asks to See Wife, Son

WEST BERLIN (Reuters) — Rudolf Hess, Hitler's former deputy, in Nazi Germany, has broken a 22-year vow and asked to see his wife and son for the first time since he was imprisoned for life in 1946, British sources said Sunday.

Hess, 75, is undergoing treatment for a stomach ulcer at the British military hospital here.

Mrs. Ilse Hess, who lives in the Bavarian mountain village of Hindelang, and their son, Wolf-Ruediger, 30, probably will have a 30-minute meeting with him during the Christmas holidays, the British sources said.

Hess has been a captive ever since he flew to Scotland in 1941 on a personal mission to try to negotiate peace with the British government.

He vowed after his trial he would never let his wife and son visit him in Spandau Prison, where he was incarcerated after the Nuremberg war crimes trial.

Hess is the world's loneliest— and most expensive—prisoner. For the last three years he has been the only inmate of Spandau, a former Prussian barracks built for 600 soldiers.

The prison costs Britain, the United States, France, the Soviet Union and the West Berlin city government about $218,000 a year to maintain.

There have been many public appeals to pardon Hess, many of them initiated or supported by his son. All have been turned down by the Soviets.

Airport Aftermath

Swiss Jail Arab Guerrillas

WINTERTHUR (Reuters) — Three Palestinian Arab guerrillas today were sentenced by a Swiss court to 12 years each at hard labor for shooting up an Israeli airliner at Zurich airport in February.

Mordechai Rachamim, a 23-year-old Israeli security guard on trial with them, was acquitted on a charge of the manslaughter of a fourth Arab attacker.

The El Al Aircraft co-pilot died of wounds suffered in the attack.

The three Arabs are Mohammed Abu Al Haija, 24; Ibrahim Tawfik Youssef, 34, and a pretty 22-year-old school teacher, Amina Dahbour. All have 10 days in which to lodge an appeal.

Rachamim and the three other accused stood up as the presiding judge, Hans Gut, read the sentences, which marked the end of the first public trial outside the Middle East of Palestinian Arab commandos.

There was a gasp in the crowded courtroom when Judge Gut gave the Arabs the full sentence demanded by the prosecution.

Rachamim smiled and looked relieved when the judge said he was "not guilty because of lack of evidence."

The Israeli security guard, who admitted killing the fourth Arab in the attack on the El Al Boeing 720B—but claimed he acted in defence of the aircraft and himself—left the court with armed Swiss police guards.

They have accompanied him throughout the trial for his own safety. Rachamim had been free on bail since March.

The Palestinians were found guilty on six charges and not guilty on a seventh—causing material damage worth 250,000 Swiss francs (about $60,000).

The counts on which they were convicted were: wilful killing, causing bodily harm, disturbing air traffic, attempting to use explosives with dangerous intent, violating Swiss sovereignty and illegal possession of weapons.

Peace on Earth Plane Flies to Hanoi

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Texas billionaire left by chartered jet today on the second leg of a trip he hopes will end with the delivery of 180,000 pounds of Christmas presents to 1,400 Americans held by North Vietnam.

"Allowing private American citizens to bring Christmas directly to these men would be a major step toward improving relations between our people," H. Ross Perot said before the plane—with Peace on Earth painted on it—left Dallas Sunday.

Most of the cargo—bedding, clothes, canned food, medicine and personal packages from prisoners' families—was loaded aboard the Boeing 70 during a stop in Los Angeles before it took off for Honolulu.

A second plane, named Goodwill Toward Men, waited in Dallas for word to proceed.

Perot said he planned to arrive at Bangkok Tuesday and take another plane to Hanoi to try to persuade officials to allow the cargo planes to enter.

"That will give us most of the 24th to unload and bring Christmas to those guys on Christmas Day," Perot said.

"Of course, we could have Christmas in January."

He said Hanoi had discouraged the trip in a cabled message, advising Perot to send packages through normal postal channels via Moscow.

Perot, 39, who owns a Dallas computer company, organized a group called United We Stand, which is sponsoring the flight. He said he received large donations "to help him pay the cost, about $600,000.

With Perot were about 30 reporters and project workers including Red Cross doctors and a male nurse.

Perot said that since he announced his plan a week ago he hasn't sought advice from U.S. officials. If he did, he said, "the odds that this trip could succeed would go to zero."

The idea for the flight came as "a by-product of meeting a 4½-year-old boy who has never met his father," Perot said. He said the trip was "in the best interest of the Vietnamese . . . simply a humanitarian act on the part of private individuals."

Mo-Hawks: 3-2

Perfect Timing For Baker's Goal

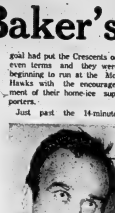
OWEN SOUND (Special) — If a hockey coach can't have players who score all the time, he'll usually settle for those who score when it counts.

Belleville Mo-Hawk standby John "Shaker" Baker filled that bill Sunday night, coming up with a late third-period-goal needed for a 3-2 win over Owen Sound Crescents and the two points to keep the Mo-Hawks in a third-place tie in the OHA Senior A standings with Oakville and Barrie.



Playing-coach Davey Jones and Lorne O'Donnell accounted for the first two Belleville tallies, with veteran Alec Keeling and Wes Rydall connecting for the seventh-place Crescents.

The Mo-Hawks, who have now lost only three of their last 15 games, have a game in hand over Barrie and two over Oakville, and have a chance to grab sole possession of third place in an 8:30 Memorial Arena game tomorrow night against Kingston Aces.

Sunday night's goal by Baker was only the netter's third in 16 games, but couldn't have come at a better time.

Rydall's early-third-period goal had put the Crescents on even terms and they were beginning to run at the Mo-Hawks with the encouragement of their home-ice supporters.

Just past the 14-minute mark, winger Ralph Plane's pass put Baker in a one-on-one situation. Using trailing Gary Dalliday as a decoy, Baker beat goalie Ken Lockitt with a low 15-footer to give the Mo-Hawks their margin of victory.

JOHN BAKER
Makes Them Count

Again as in the past several games, Jones had some praise in store for the "third" line combination.

"Besides coming up with that big goal for us, they didn't have any scored against them."

Jones got his ninth goal of the season on a perfect set-up from Wayne McConnell to give the Mo-Hawks a 2-1 edge midway through the middle period. Lorne O'Donnell's 13th came on a first-period power play.

The Crescents didn't come close to knotting the score a third time.

"We kept them in their end in the last couple of minutes," noted Jones. "They never even got an opportunity to pull their goalie."

Jones was again disturbed about the goals the Mo-Hawks DIDN'T get.

As in Friday night's big 4-2 home win over Galt, there were a lot of precious Belleville scoring chances that never found their way to the scoreboard lights.

"We had at least four posts," said Jones. "Al (Ferguson) hit one on a breakaway."

"Luckily for us, Steve (Rexe) kept us in the game, especially in the first period."

Rexe, who has now shaved his goals-against average to second-best in the eight-team senior circuit, blanked the Crescents as they pulled out all the attacking stops in the first 30 minutes.

He only had the protection of a three-member defensive corps, with "Weiner" Brown missing another game due to shiftwork.

Tomorrow night's 8:30 game with Kingston should draw a healthy crowd to the Memorial Arena who would like their senior hockey Christmas present to be revenge for last week's 5-2 road loss to the Aces.

Taking the Plunge

Batawa Ski Club member Karen Buck takes a breather before another downhill run at the club slope. Good conditions prevailed for ski enthusiasts over the weekend at the Batawa facilities.

Sixteen-year-old Darcy Lawson is a veteran riding pupil of Norbert Schattmann, former assistant trainer Lou Mikucky, trainer for Canada's winning equestrian team. Mr. Schattmann has come to the Quinte area to offer riders in the district the opportunity to gain 'English' riding experience.

German Riding Ace Offers Services Here

by LINDA GELDART
Staff Reporter

Norbert Schattmann is placing a rare opportunity at the feet of riders in the Quinte area.

In fact, the opportunity is golden and the promise so rare that the whole idea has intrigued and excited horsesriding enthusiasts throughout the district.

Much of the promise is with Norbert Schattmann, simply because he is Norbert Schattmann.

In horsesriding circles, he is classed among the best.

He was the German Junior Champion in the three-day event, for three years in a row, and Eastern Canadian Champion for two years running.

For the past couple of years, he was assistant to Lou Mikucky, trainer of Canada's equal winning equestrian team.

He has not been in the Quinte area too long, but plans to stay if he gets the kind of response he is hoping for in offering to provide area riders with the opportunity to learn the English style of riding.

Since 95 per cent of the riding in the area is the "western" style, Mr. Schattmann's presence in the district, according to riders in the area, is something that should be met with immediate response.

But Mr. Schattmann is not as interested in the scheme as a money - making one much as he is improving the quality of riders already here, and those who want to learn.

"It is not so much a money-making project, as such," emphasized Mr. Schattmann. "The priority is to improve the calibre of the sport in this area, so we can have rider just as good as any other centre, if not better".

The only Quinte areas, located on the Oshawa Farms, Highway 14, owned by Doug McDonald, has been made available to Mr. Schattmann and his future students.

"Everyone will be able to afford lessons. Many of those interested will be discouraged, because they don't have their own horse. This is no barrier. If we get enough people to come out, this problem can be worked out very easily. Besides, we have a number of horses here at the farm", he added.

To get the project on the road, a free clinic is to be held this coming weekend, Saturday, Dec. 27 and Sunday, Dec. 28 from 1 p.m. in the afternoon at Mr. MacDonald's indoor arena.

"There is a desperate need for a clinic such as — for the horsemen of the area to get together, not only to improve, but to organize", remarked Mr. Schattmann.

He is particularly interested to see the calibre of the riders in the district, and to discuss with each individual how he or she can improve, and which direction each should take.

"We have the facilities, and the instructor, now all we need is for the riders to respond and come out to the clinic", said Mr. MacDonald, owner of the arena.

"Once we get that initial response, we have made a beginning".

Next action for the Ellis' comes Friday night when they travel to Trenton for an 8 p.m. Community Gardens game with the Golden Hawks.

Trenton showing definite signs of vacating the league basement, held Oshawa to a 2-2 Friday night stalemate.

Trenton Bantams Turn Tables

Kinsmen on Other Side of Coin

The Kinsmen bantams have been involved in their share of upsets in winning OMHA "AA" honors for the past two years.

But Sunday, the Belleville bantam all-stars were on the receiving end of a surprise.

Trenton handed the Kinsmen a 2-1 setback in what team manager Bob Ricketts estimated was the first Trenton win over a Belleville bantam all-star team "in five or six years."

A pair of goals by Curtis McLean turned the trick for Trenton, while Richard Barnett provided the only Belleville goal. The two teams are now tied in Quinte Lawrence league standings.

Saturday night, goals by Wally Dainard, Mark Coates and Andy Ricketts earned the Kinsmen a 3-1 win in Napanee. The bantams leave Belleville at 4 a.m. Boxing Day morning to participate in the "B" section of the 24 - team Windsor Riverside tournament.

In other city all-star action, the Western Tire juvenile ended Picton 4-3 Sunday, paced by Steve Moore's two goals and singles from Jim Drummond and Steve Sharpe. Moore got the winner unassisted with less than three minutes remaining in the game. Dave Wright, Neil Vader, and John Porsce replied for Picton.

Meanwhile, Blake Kerr Imperial midgets ran their unbeaten streak to four games, settling for a 2-2 draw with Trenton Lions on first-period goals by Steve Kirby and Doug Jones.

Second - period goals by Locke and Keech earned Trenton their point split.

Juniors Crushed In Oshawa For Second Time

OSHAWA (Special) — About all the Belleville Ellis Juniors can say about Saturday night's 8-2 loss in Oshawa is that "it wasn't as bad as the last time."

Playing without the services of high - scoring John McConnell and fast - skating Dennis "Tooty" McCormack, the Belleville B's never threatened the second - place Oshawa, although they didn't look as bad as the team that took a 12-2 Oshawa thumping earlier this season.

Coach Floyd Crawford drafted three midgets into service for the Ellis, who have now lost two games after a three-game winning streak that moved them into the six-team Eastern Ontario loop's fourth position.

One of the midget militia— Rick Meagher — scored the first Ellis goal, from brother Terry and defenceman Al Jones to narrow the score to 2-1 for Oshawa early in the second period. Dave Smith and Doug James provided the other midget support.

The elder Meagher also drew an assist on Reid Mallory's third - period marker to bring his point total to 28, best on the Belleville club and only one back of Kingston's Colin Loudon's league-leading total.

Goalie Ron Jury had to handle 41 shots by the Oshawa men, who got three goals from Chris Bone, a pair from Dusty Lynd - assists from Lynd, McAvoy, Jim Robson and Ken Gyles.

Oshawa goalie Tom Christie stopped 34 shots from the Belleville B's who drew four of 12 minor penalties assessed.

Next action for the Ellis' comes Friday night when they travel to Trenton for an 8 p.m. Community Gardens game with the Golden Hawks.

Trenton showing definite signs of vacating the league basement, held Oshawa to a 2-2 Friday night stalemate.

Frederick and singles by Bruce McKinney and Pat Willman, who also assisted on the other Unity Belleville goals.

The Maurice Rollins peewee all-stars saw both sides of lopsided scores, dropping a 9-3 loss in Kingston, but whipping Madoc 11-2.

Tony Meagher scored three goals and added a goal in both games for the Rollins all-stars, with Rick Culkin's pair and singles by Ed Grills and Gary Thompson rounded out the scoring in the Madoc game.

Another Ottawa Team--the Blues--Joins Hunt for Grey Cup

OTTAWA (CP) — Police today are continuing the search for the Grey Cup, snatched from the offices of the Canadian Football League champion Ottawa Rough Riders Saturday.

A police spokesman said Sunday night the theft appeared to be "a prank" since trophies of more value in the office were left untouched. The Grey Cup is valued at less than $50.

"If it is a prank we want to give the jokers time to return it on their own," the spokesman said.

The cup was stolen from Hamilton Tiger Cats in 1967 but it turned up three days later, abandoned by pranksters.

Victories over Western Football Conference champions have captured the Grey Cup, symbol of Canadian football supremacy, for Riders for the last two years.

The cup was almost lost in a 1947 fire at the Toronto Argonaut Rowing Club building. Smoke-blackened but intact, it was the only trophy rescued.

It disappeared briefly in 1920, but was later found in a trust company vault in Toronto by a brother of a cup trustee who had put it away for safekeeping after the First World War when football was inactive.

The trustee had forgotten where he had stored it.

CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur said Sunday that a replica will be made if the original is not found.

Also in the trophy case were numerous other awards. Among them: The Schenley awards for top Canadian and outstanding player won by Riders' quarterback, Russ Jackson this year.

None of the others was taken.

Nats Continue To Brighten Tourney Hopes

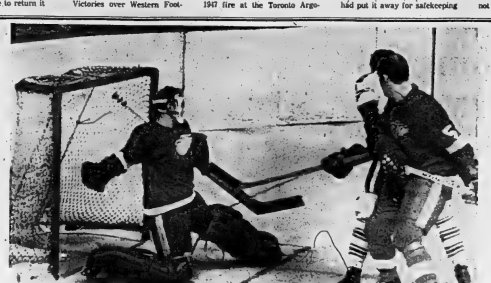
A ray of sunshine glimmered Sunday — the first day of winter — on the Canadian national hockey team.

Canada tripped Russia 5-1 in Victoria, avenging a 9-3 trouncing in Vancouver Saturday and squaring the exhibition series at 3-2.

Two players with divergent careers, goalie Wayne Stephenson and centre Billy Harris, molded the Canadian victory before a capacity crowd of 5,388.



Stephenson, 24, a goaltender with the Canadian Nationals for five years, kept the Russians at bay until Dyachenkov Stanhinov clicked with less than eight minutes remaining.

Harris, 34-year-old veteran of 13 years in the National Hockey League, scored Canada's second goal and assisted on three others.

Darby Adams, Brian Conacher, Michel Pourier and Chuck Lefley scored the other Canadian goals. Canada led 2-0 after the first period and 3-0 after the second.

The Russians play in Ottawa Tuesday against Ottawa Elk, who will be accompanied by junior players from the Ontario Hockey Association, and in London, Ont., against London Knights, on Christmas Day.

They meet the Nats again in Toronto Boxing Day and Montreal Canadiens' farm players in Montreal Dec. 29.

Detroit's Roger Crozier tries a spread-eagle defence but to no avail as the puck falls through for a goal. The score came eariy in the first period by the hand of Toronto's Murray Oliver. Also shown battling in front of the net is Toronto's George Armstrong and Detroit's Carl Brewer. Toronto won Sunday night's game 3-0. (CP Photo)

Canada's male athlete of the year for 1969, chosen by a cross-Canada poll of sports writers and broadcasters, is Jackie Jackson, the retired quarterback of Ottawa Rough Riders of the Canadian Football League. Jackson dominated the poll, conducted by The Canadian Press, winning 96 first-place votes, four for second and five for third. Based on a scale of 3-2-1 points for first, second and third, he wound up with 301 points. Second was Ferguson Jenkins of Chatham, Ont., right-handed pitcher for Chicago Cubs and last year's winner, who polled 121 points on three first-place votes, 42 for second and 28 for third. Phil Esposito of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., the Boston Bruins centre who broke the all-time National Hockey League scoring record last season, was a distant third with 62 points on six first-place votes, 18 for second and eight for third.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Flyers will name Keith Allen general manager of the National Hockey League club today, The Associated Press has learned. Allen will succeed Bud Poile, fired Friday by the Flyers' board chairman Ed Snider. Snider said there were basic differences between Poile and club owners over operation of the team and the minor league affiliates. The 46-year-old Allen, Saskatoon native, coached the Flyers in their first two seasons in the NHL's new West Division, winning the regular season championship the first year and finishing third last season. Both times the Flyers were eliminated in the playoffs by St. Louis.

BUENA PARK, Calif. (AP) — Billy Casper, 1968 Golfer of the Year, fired a sizzling two-under-par 70 Saturday at Los Coyotes Country Club to defeat women's pro Shirley Englehorn who finished with a 79. Miss Englehorn had asked for the match in an attempt to prove women golfers are as good as men. "I'm glad I won," Casper said. "It would have set golf back 50 years if she had won. Men and women should compete separately in professional golf." "I feel I lost because I haven't played competitive golf for five weeks," Miss Englehorn said after the match.

Esposito's Pair of Blanks Leads Goalies Into Limelight

By CHUCK SVOBODA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Tony Esposito of Chicago Black Hawks emerged with his second consecutive shutout and sixth of the season to lead goalies who stole most of the spotlight in weekend National Hockey League action.

Esposito, rested after a 4-0 win over Oakland Seals Friday night, stopped St. Louis Blues as the Black Hawks took another 4-0 victory at Chicago Sunday night.

Jacques Plante of the Blues earned his fourth season shutout when St. Louis downed Philadelphia Flyers 3-0 Saturday night.

Goalie Bernie Parent of the Flyers took a page from Plante's book and Sunday night blanked Pittsburgh Penguins in a 4-0 Philadelphia win for his second season shutout. Bruce Gamble of Toronto Maple Leafs earned his third of the season in a 3-0 victory over the Red Wings in Detroit.

In other Saturday games, the Red Wings edged Montreal Canadiens 3-2, New York Rangers downed Toronto 5-2, Boston Bruins beat Pittsburgh 4-0 and Los Angeles Kings gained a 3-3 tie with Minnesota North Stars.

Sunday, the Canadiens downed the Bruins 5-2 and New York beat Oakland 3-1.

Glenn Hall made his season debut in the St. Louis nets Sunday and allowed goals by Stan Mikita, Pit Martin and Chico Maki.

Maki's goal came at 7:13 of the second period and two minutes later St. Louis General manager-coach Scotty Bowman yanked Hall in favor of Ernie Wakely who allowed Chicago's fourth goal on a shot by winger Jim Pappin.

Gamble kicked out 35 shots to stop the Red Wings before a crowd of 14,665 at Detroit while the Leafs took only 29 shots at Roger Crozier in the opposite nets.

Murray Oliver scored in the first period, Jim McKenny in the second and rookie Jim Harrison in the third. It was Harrison's fourth goal of the season and first since he joined the Leafs almost two weeks ago in a trade with Boston Bruins for Wayne Carleton.

The win was only the second in the last seven games for the Leafs and both came on the road.

Parent made 28 saves against the Penguins before a crowd of 12,433 in Philadelphia. The win moved the Flyers into a tie with Pittsburgh, four points behind second place Minnesota in the West Division.

Jim Morrison, Reg Fleming, Bob Clarke and Andre Lacroix beat Pittsburgh's Les Binkley who also faced 28 shots on goal.

Goals by Juha Widing, Bob Nevin and Brad Park gave the Rangers a 3-0 lead before 17,250 New York fans but Oakland's Norm Ferguson spoiled Ed Giacomin's bid for a fourth shutout with a goal at 14:30 of the second period.

The win on home ice along with their romp over the Leafs Saturday gave the Rangers a four-point lead in the East Division. The Bruins hold second spot with a one-point edge on Montreal.

Bobby Orr picked up his ninth goal in the Bruins' loss at Boston which, combined with five assists in the Saturday match, gave the young defenceman a five-point lead in the individual scoring with 48 points.

Phil Esposito, Mickey Redmond, Henri Richard, Ralph Backstrom and Serge Savard provided the Montreal scoring Sunday before a crowd of 14,831.

Goalie Rogatien Vachon stopped only 23 Boston shots with Johnny Bucyk getting the other goal against him. The Canadiens pelted the Bruins' Gerry Cheevers with 33 drives in the Boston nets.

Mahovlich was playing in place of the injured Jean Beliveau who is out with an ankle injury. Left winger John Ferguson also is on the sidelines with a hand injury.

The Bruins called up Bill Lesuk from Hershey Bears in the American Hockey League to fill in for the injured Fred Stanfield.

Gary Sabourin, Bill McCreary and Ab McDonald scored to back up Plante's shutout before a crowd of 16,242 at St. Louis Saturday.

Centre Phil Goyette of the Blues picked up an assist on McDonald's goal and remains in second place in the scoring race behind Orr, McDonald is in fourth spot with 35 points.

Pete Stemkowski scored at 17:17 of the third period in Montreal to gain the Red Wings victory. Frank Mahovlich collected his 16th season goal in the first period and Gary Monahan scored for Detroit in the second.

Montreal's Jacques Lemaire picked up his 16th and 17th season goals at the expense of Detroit goalie Roy Edwards who stopped 32 shots to earn the victory.

Rucyk also earned five points on two goals and three assists in the contest at Pittsburgh to join team mate Orr among the top 10 scorers. The veteran Boston winger now has a total of 32 points on 16 goals and 16 assists.

At Least Vikings Strong in Middle

By TOM SALADINO
Associated Press Sports Writer

Minnesota Vikings and Chicago Bears ushered in and closed out the National Football League season on a similar note —with defense—but while the Vikings won all 12 games in between, the Bears' only consolation is the possibility of a No. 1 draft choice.

Minnesota ended its greatest regular season in history on a losing note, dropping a 10-3 decision to Atlanta Falcons Sunday, stopping the Vikings nearrecord winning streak at 12. However, Minnesota's consolation is a bit different from that of the Bears.

While the Vikings, champions of the Central Division, are host to the Coastal Division champion, Los Angeles Rams, Saturday for the Western Conference championship, the lowly Bears will be thinking of how to improve on their 1969 record.

Chicago lost to Detroit Lions 20-3 Sunday and ended at 1-13—their worst season ever—the same as Pittsburgh Steelers, who dropped a 27-24 decision to New Orleans Saints. The Steelers and Bears will flip a coin to see who picks first in the January football draft.

In other NFL games, Baltimore Colts upset the Rams 13-7, New York Giants whipped Cleveland Browns 27-14, Dallas swhoye host Washington Redskins 29-10, San Francisco 49ers nipped Philadelphia Eagles 24-13 and Green Bay Packers whacked St. Louis Cardinals 45-28.

Minnesota, trying to match the single season winning streak of 13 set by the 1934 Bears, moved to a 3-0 early lead over Atlanta on Fred Cox's 19-yard field goal. But with 45 seconds left in the half, a Gary Cuozzo fumble was picked up by the Falcons and Claude Humphrey, who went 34 yards for the game's only touchdown.

The Vikings, who lost on opening day to the Giants 24-22, finished at 12-2 while the Falcons were 6-8, their best finish ever in three years of existence.

The Bears, who were shutout in their opener 17-0 by Green Bay, could only get a field goal by Mac Percival in four tries to the Lions. Meanwhile, Detroit turned two interceptions into touchdowns and Errol Mann booted a pair of field goals as the Lions finished at 9-4-1. The Bears' Gale Sayers ended with 1,032 yards rushing, the best in the league.

The Rams, who lost for the third time in a row after 11 straight victories, scored on an eight-yard touchdown pass from Roman Gabriel to Jack Snow while the Colts got two field goals from Lou Michaels and a two-yard touchdown run from Tom Matte. Johnny Unitas of the Colts clicked on 19 passes out of 33 attempts for 289 yards as Baltimore closed with an 8-5-1 mark.

Joe Morrison scored two touchdowns, one on a one-yard pass from Fran Tarkenton and the other on [illegible] the Giants upset the Century Division champion[illegible] and meets Dallas Sunday in the Cotton Bowl for the Eastern Conference title.

Leroy Kelly, who scored one of the Cleveland touchdowns, suffered a slight ankle sprain but is expected to be ready for the Cowboys.

Raiders Romp to Final With Jet-beating Chiefs

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Six touchdown passes by Daryle Lamonica led the explosive Oakland Raiders to a 56-7 rout of Houston Oilers Sunday and into the American Football League's championship game against Kansas City Chiefs.

Kansas City won the other inter-divisional playoff game Saturday, a hard-fought 13-6 conquest of the defending champion New York Jets. The Raiders and Chiefs will meet in Oakland Jan. 4 for the right to represent the AFL in the Super Bowl at New Orleans one week later.

Oakland ripped off four touchdowns in the space of four minutes and 22 seconds of the first quarter and went on to hand the Oilers the worst defeat in their history.

Lamonica, who completed 13 of 17 passes for 276 yards, opened the scoring with a 12-yarder to Fred Biletnikoff. George Atkinson raced 57 yards with an interception and Lamonica passed 34 yards to Rod Sherman and 31 to Biletnikoff as the Raiders surged to a 28-0 lead in the first eight minutes.

A 68-yard bomb from Lamonica to Charlie Smith in the second quarter made it 35-0 and the AFL's all-star quarterback concluded his day's work by firing 22 yards to Sherman and three to Billy Cannon for third-quarter touchdowns before giving way to George Blanda.

Trailing 49-0, Houston finally scored on a eight-yard toss from Pete Beathard to Alvin Reed but Oakland's Marv Hubbard got that back with a four-yard run.

On a cold, raw day in Shea Stadium, the Chiefs battered Jets' quarterback Joe Namath, kept him from putting across a touchdown and left him feeling "like I was in a gang fight all by myself."

The Chiefs made two big plays in the fourth quarter—diagnosing a Jets' play to keep him from scoring a go-ahead touchdown and diagramming on the sidelines the play that led to the winning touchdown.

"We have ways of making you talk!"

Brandt Will Switch Courting to Poland Today

BONN (Reuters) — West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, planning the next part of his rapprochement to the East after cautiously courting East Germany, today switches toward Poland, hoping for a warm reception on a new front.

Informed sources in Warsaw reported that Polish Premier Jozef Cyrankiewicz probably will outline prospects of political talks with Bonn during a major speech to the legislature today.

This is expected to be followed later in the day by the forwarding of a diplomatic note to the Bonn government, possibly suggesting a date to start talks.

It was not immediately clear whether the Polish note, replying to a German proposal made last month, would be delivered here or in Warsaw.

The Polish problems facing Brandt's coalition government seem less hazardous on the surface than those raised in East Germany's offer—made public Sunday—to open negotiations on establishing full diplomatic relations with Bonn.

The main stumbling block in overtures to Warsaw probably will be Poland's demand for a solid guarantee of its Western border—the Oder-Neisse line.

But the West German government could sidestep this by offering territorial safeguards in a non-aggression pact. This would indicate that Bonn accept ed the Oder-Neisse border pending the sealing of its validity in international law as part of an all-German peace treaty.

Such factors, including current talks between the two countries involving hundreds of millions of marks in long term German credits, also could help boost the chances of a favorable outcome.

Success on the Polish front and in non-aggression negotiations with the Russians could allow Brandt to deal with East German Communist leader Walter Ulbricht's uncompromising message to Bonn last week.

Ulbricht proposed negotiations next month to establish full diplomatic relations with West Germany—coupled with a draft treaty for equalities under international law, exchange of envoys and agreement on inviolability of existing borders. He made particular references to the heavily-guarded East-West German border and the Oder-Neisse frontier.

The question being asked here is: Is Ulbricht asking for diplomatic relations in an all-or-nothing demand, or will he ultimately settle for something less?

Ulbricht Wants Two Germanys

BERLIN (AP) — East German government spokesman, called the draft treaty an expression of "maximum demands of East Berlin." In some quarters it was considered a blow to Brandt's efforts to improve relations with East Germany and other Soviet bloc countries in Eastern Europe.

But the possibility remained that the West German government would agree to talk with the Easterners if it can find a way of doing so without compromising its position in advance.

The draft treaty was proposed by the East German leader, Walter Ulbricht, in a covering letter to President Gustav Heinemann of West Germany suggesting negotiations on the basis of the draft treaty begin next month.

Ulbricht sent the letter Thursday. Replying Saturday, Heinemann did not mention the draft treaty but said he welcomed Ulbricht's offer of negotiations.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market advanced moderately in light mid-morning trading today although losses outnumbered gains 126 to 107.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 430,000 shares compared with 851,000 at the same time Friday.

The Ontario Securities Commission halted trading in Maple Leaf Mills today. The OSC said the ban would be effective until the close of Dec. 24. Because of holidays, trading in the stock can not take place until Dec. 29.

Maple Leaf Mills closed up 4% to 22¾ Friday. Molson Industries and Friday it plans to make an offer for all issued and outstanding shares of Maple Leaf Mills, conditional on Molson's receiving at least 50 per cent of the stock.

After the market closed Friday, Neonex said that through the open market plus a previously announced offer to acquire 38 per cent of Maple Leaf's stock from Bruce A. Norris, United States industrialist, it had acquired 51 per cent of Maple Leaf's stock.

Molson said its offer would stand despite the Neonex announcement.

Baseball Break Under Baskets

MONTREAL (CP) — Something just to keep in shape during the winter months has developed into a 14-year participation career for Lucy Martin, operations manager of Montreal Expos of baseball's National League.

Martin, 36, took up refereeing basketball games in his native Richmond, Va., 14 years ago and became one of the top college officials in the United States.

Since arriving in Montreal 16 months ago, he has found himself the No. 1 referee in his city.

"I enjoy it because I want to be active and be with kids," says Martin, "and besides it brings in some extra income and it keeps me in shape."

In addition to his role as director of operations with the ball club, this winter Martin is conducting a season-ticket drive for the Expos.

He started in the New York Yankee chain at Richmond as ticket manager for the International League entry in 1957. He worked his way up to the position of business manager for 1963 and 1964 before leaving for Newport News, Va., to run his own ball club in the class A Carolina League.

Martin was named baseball executive of the year in 1965 by The Sporting News.

In 1966 and 1967 he returned to Richmond, then a farm team of Atlanta Braves, under John McHale, now president of Montreal Expos. McHale brought Martin here to get Montreal's Jerry Park in shape in time for last April's debut of major league baseball in the city.

Martin started out refereeing high school games in a bothed of basketball competition in the Richmond area. Three years later he graduated to the college game.

As many as five nights a week Martin can be found officiating high school, university, community centre and other games that need an official.

Martin says it is a challenge to him to referee in a game where there are so many big men.

"It puts you on an equal basis with them."

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Lack of love and attention is a common complaint by husband or wife. However, I have heard patients tell me of the other extreme: too much love. This too, can be a distressing problem.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: What can a wife do with an overly "lovable" husband? I am sure if I would allow it he would be only too ready to participate in marital relations every night. However, I have neither the stamina nor the inclination to prove it. I am just a rather ordinary housewife. I do all my own housework and have the complete care of four children, ages 5 to 15. I also do part - time occasional office work to help the budget.

I am pushing 40, and if life begins at 40 I can hardly wait. My days are busy and at bedtime I am ready to sleep. My strong, healthy husband, after eight hours of pencil pushing, has hardly tapped his energy supply, whereas mine is down to zero. Moreover, my husband has no hobbies or interests in life other than his work, eating, and of course, sex. I have a variety of little hobbies from sewing to politics.

A hug or a kiss means only one thing to my husband — love and sex. My naturally warm personality is suffering since I can never just express a fond feeling.

At times we have "words" over this difference in desire, but no solution is ever reached. I can't believe this is an uncommon problem. Perhaps you have dealt with this type of situation and can offer some sage advice. — A hopeful reader.

* * *

Comment: As I said in the beginning, yours is a common and often distressing problem. I think you should both be willing to bring it to the attention of your doctor, and, if necessary, to a marriage counselor. Without mutual understanding, sex problems are the forerunners of broken marriages — and often of broken health.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: At the change of seasons I come down with a violent head cold. Change in temperature seems to affect me. So do drafts. I have been told I do not have a sinus condition.

During the cold, for a few days I am absolutely miserable with constant sneezing. All I can do is lie in bed and take aspirin and liquids. It usually tapers off in four or five days with maybe a slight cough that hangs on. The sneezing really exhausts me. Most people know don't sneeze so much when they have a cold. — R.

Comment: Only a hunch — but is your trouble allergic rhinitis rather than "a cold"? As I have mentioned here occasionally, recurrent colds may really be manifestations of allergy. Why not check with an allergist? Many frequent "colds" have been prevented and abolished by proper antiallergic treatment.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I've been told that frequent urination is always a sign of diabetes. Is this true? I've been reluctant to see a doctor. — Mr. R.

Comment: Frequent urination is only one of the major symptoms of diabetes mellitus. But it might be due to prostate trouble, kidney or heart disease, inflammation of the bladder, etc. Better see your doctor to learn the real reason.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: Are varicose veins (and the other conditions) would thumb their collective noses at Vitamin E — or at any other vitamin.

Cuba Will Assassinate Sugar Crop Saboteurs

MIAMI (AP) — Cuba will "assassinate without a thought of any kind" anyone who tries to sabotage efforts to harvest a record 10,000,000 ton sugar crop, Fidel Castro warned Sunday.

Speaking from a cane field where he and top Cuban Communist officials cut cane with five North Vietnamese and five Viet Cong soldiers, Castro hinted saboteurs may not even be given a trial.

"In this fight of the people to go ahead, to win the battle of under-development, we are not going to move with complaisance before the lackeys and the miserable ones who, in the service of imperialism, try to sabotage us.

"In this there are no middle terms, no options of any kind. To him who jokes about this, I say that it is a joke that he won't have the chance to repeat."

Cuba announced earlier this month that three infiltrators were killed in battle, four were cut down by a firing squad and three more were sentenced to 20 years in prison. Havana Radio said the men carried equipment to sabotage the sugar harvest and other targets.

Castro has staked the reputation of his revolution on a promise that Cuba this year will harvest 10,000,000 tons of sugar, the island nation's principal money crop.

Books Should Be Labeled

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

If there were a Pure Food and Drug Act for books, the jackets would be properly labeled so that each prospective buyer would know exactly what he is getting.

Nobody would be prohibited from reading any book he wanted to, but the contents and ingredients would be plainly listed on the package. Hundreds of books come across my desk every season, and here are a recent handful I would dare recommend to the unwary book shopper:

"Trespass" by Fletcher Knebel — a hokey novel, poorly written and ill-thought-out, for people who would like to think they are thinking when they are only messaging their own egos.

"Present at the Creation" by Dean Acheson — a pompous and self-important book of memoirs by a sol-disant statesman never interested in vindicating his part in public affairs than in understanding the deeper roots of our massive failure in self government.

"The Love Machine," by Jacqueline Susann — not a book at all, but a piece of plastic merchandise thoroughly permeated with the sickness it purports to diagnose.

"The Seven Minutes" by Irving Wallace — Although I was sent a copy with the compliments of the author, because I extract from one of my columns is used by the defence attorney in the trial scene, I wish the author were on the other side of the censorship controversy, because (as they say) with friends like that, who needs an enemy?

"The Kingdom and the Power" by Gay Talese — An honest and sober product, not adulterated, but suffering from the sin of inflation in telling us far more about the New York Times than any one would care to know, when it should be a 50-page pamphlet selling for $1.

"The Kennedy Legacy" by Theodore Sorensen — A phoney attempt to exploit the Kennedy charisma, by a political hanger-on and speech-writer who finally impales himself on the ax he is grinding.

"My Life With Martin Luther King, Jr." by Coretta Scott King — a pathetic piece of hagiolatry by the widow of the Negro leader, in which the dead man is sanctified before he is even brought to life; at a time when some stunningly incisive books on Malcolm X and Eldridge Cleaver are on the market, this succeeds in telling us nothing about the private character of the public man.

"The Three Daughters of Madame Liang" by Pearl Buck — another insufferable story by the worst writer ever to have won the Nobel Prize.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For December 23

Your birthday today: Prosperity and expansion are normal expectations for a birthday coinciding with the full moon as this one does. Prepare yourself to carry heavier responsibility in unfamiliar places and situations this coming year. For some the attentions are directed to business partnerships, for others a marriage is the major interest. Romance is favored to find a place in any of the many complex programs that can happen.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Normal activities succeed without undue fuss. Some important people are helpful in an unobtrusive fashion. Celebrate the evening with a small party or a good show.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Luck attends your doings on behalf of relatives today. Just be sure your schedule does not slide over any important detail.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): With too many things to choose from, stick to your shopping list and you will come up with something for everybody. Save some resources for contingencies.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): At the moment new projects should be held back for replanning. Resolve local and family disagreements. Personal interests far better than large group actions.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): More demands are made on your time and attention than is comfortable. The extra reward seems scarcely worth the effort. Find a way to do something for your home and for those who live with you.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): The affairs of old friends parents come to your attention, and perhaps you can be very helpful. It's a graceful day for social contacts, where no business interests are involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Your life is humming with too many things to do, all of them producing either material benefit or emotional satisfaction.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Personal plans should be on your mind as you arise early and get started ahead of the general rush. Short journeys yield exceptional opportunity for establishing a helpful contact.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Seek confidential counsel of financial backing, refinancing, or sale of expensive items you don't really need. Intuitive people are likely to take an interest in special features of the situation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Acknowledge friendships and social connections. There is a chance to improve your earnings beyond the current moment. Health care should not be neglected in the bustle of the season.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Follow a live and let live course. Impulsive demands, which result from your eagerness or insecurity in a poignant relationship, might spoil matters if strongly expressed. Dissipate that mood through hobbies or serious study.

PISCES (Feb. 19 —Mar. 20): There is no need to be hasty about extended ventures. Declare your feelings gently, but persistently, and wait for an answer.

The ever-lasting meaning of the Christmas season lives in a single word — peace. As we all celebrate with merriment of the season, let us pause also to recall its timeless message of peace and good will toward men. And let us thank you for your kind patronage all year long.

Trudeau's Charge Answered

Ontario and B.C. Deny Inflation Is Their Fault

Rise in Unemployment Will Not Change Policy

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Two of Canada's most prosperous provinces have bounced back to say the blame is Ottawa's, after Prime Minister Trudeau said Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia are the main centres of inflation.

He hinted that tougher federal measures to combat inflation may be in the offing.

The prime minister told a news conference Monday that Canada is heading into 1970 with inflation as the most pressing domestic problem and the federal government has no choice but to fight it fiercely.

He said the most important centre of inflation is Ontario "and I am not convinced the people of Ontario are doing enough."

Replied Ontario Treasurer Charles MacNaughton: "The main fiscal and monetary levers are lodged with the federal government."

Premier W. A. C. Bennett of B.C. said Canada's inflation problems are the fault of federal administrations, not of his Social Credit government.

Alberta comment was not immediately available.

Mr. MacNaughton said in a Toronto interview that Ontario is "not prepared to stand for criticism." He said that consideration of Ontario's population and continued growth made it obvious "that we would have inflation to a higher degree than any other place.

"But we fevered a balanced budget and were able to stay out of the money markets as a means to provide restraint."

He said basic tools such as monetary control through banks are needed in the battle and this is completely outside Ontario's or any other province's jurisdiction.

Ontario Revenue Minister John White criticized the federal government for increasing its expenditures this year by about 14% per cent, compared to Ontario increasing its by only 7%.

Mr. Bennett said: "The Ottawa governments, mostly Liberal

World at Edge Of Depression

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Joseph Smallwood says the world is at the edge of the depression that can only be avoided if a way is found to control the tight-money situation.

Premier Smallwood said in an interview here Monday that depression is a "dirty" word which frightens people. But, there is only one way to pull back and that is to control inflation.

If inflation is not controlled "we've had it."

Premier Smallwood said that debts that have been contracted in the last 10 years by units ranging from families right on up to government is really what is at the bottom of the tight-money situation. Inflation has reached a point where it has world governments "frightened stiff."

The premier said: "I know, it is the same in the United States and it is getting beyond control. If we don't find a way to control it, it is going to ruin the economy."

In the last 10 years North America has seen the most affluent time in the world's history. He said a great fallacy has grown up in this period, "That people can live as they want and live as they please without having to pay the consequences."

Pilotless Jet Hits Hangar

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (AP) — A disabled, pilotless U.S. Navy jet fighter "could not have hit at a worse place," the fire chief said as he surveyed the naval hangar where 11 men were killed and 14 injured.

The jet, abandoned by its pilot who parachuted to safety after reported oil pressure trouble, slammed into a hangar full of aircraft and mechanics Monday at Miramar Naval Air Station.

The pilot of the single-seat F-8J Crusader said he reported the malfunction, then ejected at 400 feet altitude about half a mile east of the runway.

The aircraft "could not have hit at a worse place," said Bill Knight, base fire chief. "Not only was there a congestion of personnel, but also there were numerous aircraft."

Montreal Mail Truck Torn Apart by Bomb

MONTREAL (CP) — A bomb Monday ripped apart a mail truck while its driver was making a pickup, peeling the body from the vehicle and lightly injuring the nearby postal worker.

Michel Villemaire, 28, suffered minor facial cuts and small burns. He was treated at hospital and released.

Villemaire was returning to the truck after collecting mail from a curbside mail box when the bomb exploded.

Sgt. Andre Boutin of Montreal police said Villemaire "certainly would have been killed if he had been in the truck when it went off."

The officer estimated that the bomb, apparently in a parcel Villemaire had picked up earlier in his rounds, "was probably equal to only one or two sticks of dynamite."

But, exploding somewhere at the rear of the van, it tore the metal body apart and scattered its load of mail. An undetermined amount of mail was lost.

Israel Says U.S. Plan Prejudices Peace

From AP-Reuters

Israel, in one of its strongest blasts at the United States, has rejected U.S. proposals for a Middle East peace agreement, calling them "appeasement of the Arabs" which "seriously prejudice prospects for peace."

On the battlefield, Israeli commandos struck into Egypt again Monday night to mortar a naval base on the Red Sea coast, the Israeli command said. It was the second raid on an Egyptian military installation in five days.

Israeli planes struck again today at Jordanian army and guerrilla positions across the River Jordan, Israeli military sources said.

The Palestine Armed Struggle Command announced heavy rocket attacks on two Israeli settlements north and south of the Sea of Galilee.

The command said both attacks took a heavy toll of property and lives.

Relations between Israel and the United States, home of the Jewish state's chief financial backers, were at their lowest point in years.

A communique issued after a special session Monday of Premier Golda Meir's cabinet said the American proposals for peace between Israel and Jordan and between Israel and Egypt contain nothing obliging the Arabs to end hostilities and would encourage Arab hostility.

The statement said Israel "views with concern the disquieting initiatives of the United States at the four-power talks" on the Middle East which the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France have been holding in New York and Washington.

The cabinet said Israel will not be the victim of power politics and will reject any attempt to impose a settlement on it.

Mrs. Meir, in an interview with the New York Times after the cabinet session, said the U.S. government was asking Israel "to start all over again, as though it were 1948."

Arab Lands Will Finance Guerrillas

RABAT, Morocco (Reuters) — The 14-nation Arab summit conference was expected to wind up here today with a pledge of funds to Arab guerrilla groups after agreeing in principle Monday on a plan to provide men and munitions for the struggle against Israel.

It was generally thought the meeting would end with a public meeting and a communique after taking a day longer than originally planned.

Among the speakers today will be guerrilla chieftain Yasser Arafat, who has taken no active part in the discussions so far.

The Palestinian Arab commandos, who say that revolutionary guerrilla war is the way to bring Israel to her knees, have demanded $72,000,000 from the Arab League states—half for military operations and half for the inhabitants of territory occupied by Israel in the 1967 June war.

Their demands are ambitious, but a spokesman for the Palestine Liberation Organization, Kamel Nascar, said they were confident of getting at least $20,000,000 and hoped for more.

The heads of state will detail their financial contributions to the command's movement when they resume discussion of points two and three on the agenda, on which there was a general debate Monday night.

These points call for support for the guerrilla movement and support for the people of the occupied territories, whose liberation is the aim of the conference.

Filled A Need

Over 8,000 Youngsters Visit Santa's Village

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Santa's Village, set up on the LaSalle Ambulance Parking lot, has filled a need in the community, its sponsor says.

"The attendance has proved that the people of Belleville and the district want this," Stuart Meeks, ambulance operator and originator of the idea, commented this morning. "It gives them a place to take their children at night for a bit of Christmas entertainment."

Although many adults, including groups of senior citizens, have visited the village, "we only count kids", says Mr. Meeks. Head count as of Monday night was 8,000 youngsters. Last night 300 children visited Santa, bringing along big brothers and sisters and parents to swell the attendance.

Each child receives a bag of candy, provided by Mr. Meeks and the Kinsmen Club.

Before school closed, teachers brought junior grade from country schools to tour the village in groups. Younger pupils from the Ontario School for the Deaf also paid Santa a visit.

"The kids have been good," says Mr. Meeks. "The only damage so far occurred when a woman used her nail file to open the candy cane above Santa's head to extract some candy."

Only disappointment for Mr. Meeks has been the collection to pay for the toys on display. They are on loan from city merchants, but if sufficient money had been donated to pay for them, Mr. Meeks intended to donate them to the children's wing of the hospital. Despite the crowds flocking to Santa's village, only $6 has been collected so far.

The Village provides a mail box for letters to Santa and getting the replies out before Christmas is becoming a problem.

"I would like to see something more elaborate next year," says Mr. Meeks. "With all year to work on it, it should be able to improve the Village."

He would like to have Santa in attendance during the afternoons and provide more "live" music.

"Next year we can plan for carolers and bands and similar attractions," says Mr. Meeks.

Mr. Meeks, who is bearing most of the expense of Santa's Village himself, admits it is costing him more than he expected.

"But it's been fun," he confides. "I've enjoyed it."

Santa will pay two more visits to his village before Christmas Day. He will be receiving visitors tonight from 7 to 9 and again Christmas Eve from 6 to 9.

Menu 'on the Hill' Rivals Dining Spots

No one willingly is in jail over Christmas but as far as Hastings county jail is concerned, prisoners are not going to lack for holiday dinner fare.

In fact the Christmas menu for those "on the hill" would do credit to many dining places.

Acting jail superintendent Frank Miller says the Christmas Day jail menu goes like this:

Breakfast — Orange juice, ham and eggs, toast and jam and coffee.

Dinner — Fruit juice cocktail, roast turkey with dressing and gravy, cranberry sauce, mashed potatoes, broccoli, carrots, Christmas pudding, hot fruit sauce, rolls and tea.

Supper — Cream of Turkey soup, cold ham, scalloped potatoes, peas, sliced tomatoes, pickles, ice cream and Christmas cake, shortbread, bread and crackers and tea.

For New Year's the Christmas menu will be repeated except that chicken will replace the turkey for dinner, while for the evening meal it will be a hot, beef sandwich instead of the cold ham.

In addition the Salvation Army through Envoy Bram Humphreys has made the usual Christmas arrangements.

On Christmas Sunday, the regular morning service featured the Christmas story, while instrumentalists, members of Local 357 Belleville Federation of Musicians, played a program of Christmas music.

On Christmas Day there will be Sally Anne sunshine bags of fruit and candy for the prisoners. An afternoon program of films supplied through the courtesy of Bell Telephone, will be shown.

Youngster Rolls Under Truck

A nine-year-old Belleville boy suffered injuries to his right leg and possible other injuries when he came into the path of a truck on North Front St. near Harvey's Restaurant this morning. Ragan Halpin, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Halpin, 106 Orchard Dr., struck the front of the truck driven by Richard I. Alexander, 18, of Belleville, and rolled under it before emerging at the rear. Police said no charges will be laid.

Big Ben Baffles City Clock Winders

City hall's "big ben" has been temporarily silenced.

And all for the want of a key!

The city hall clock ground to a stop on Saturday and rewinding of the mechanism is required before the timepiece again tells out the hours.

But city hall officials can't find the key to the clock tower.

It seems the key to the clock tower somehow is missing from its usual spot and it will be necessary for a carpenter to install a new lock before the clock can become operative.

Winter Zeroes In

Cold and Crisp and Even...

Winter is only two days old but already it's showing teeth.

And suddenly Christmas stockings for Quinte dwellers may be useful for more than presents.

Like providing extra warmth, for instance, as the district shivers in its first real cold spell of the winter that officially started Sunday.

The entire Quinte region woke this morning in the grip of below-zero weather as the mercury went skating down an icy scale of temperature readings.

And its recovery was painfully slow.

In Belleville, the overnight low was nine degrees below zero.

By 9 a.m. the duty forecaster at CFB Trenton reported the mercury still trembling around five below.

The same chill prospect was recorded throughout the district from Lake Ontario to the northern townships.

At Picton, the low was seven degrees below. Coldest spot in the area was Palmer Rapids, northeast of Bancroft, where the mercury dropped to 20 below.

At Tweed it was 17 below and at Bancroft 15 below, reported department of lands and forests ranger stations.

The weather likely will modify but it will be a cold crisp Christmas in the Quinte area.

A warming trend should bring temperatures around 15-20 degrees later today.

Tomorrow it won't be quite that warm and zero temperatures can be expected Christmas morning in the southern end of the area, colder in the northern reaches.

There could be one to three inches of snow later today.

Ward Chairman Of Hospital Board

TRENTON — A. J. C. Ward, has been appointed chairman of the board of trustees of Trenton Memorial Hospital.

Mr. Ward, vice-president and general manager of Frontenac of Canada Ltd., succeeds S. O. Graham who died Thursday from a heart attack suffered during a board meeting.

In addition, the board has elected a new vice-chairman to replace O. M. Newton, a long-time member of the board, who resigned his seat about two weeks ago.

Les Kurszewicz, managing director of Bata Shoe Company, is the new vice-chairman.

The board has decided to dedicate the hospital's new intensive care unit to the memory of Mr. Graham.

His was one of two men who conceived the idea of the hospital and had been chairman of the board since 1953.

However, the five-bed intensive care unit has not been equipped due to a lack of funds. The board hopes to receive contributions towards the additional $8,500, needed to purchase the equipment. Total value of equipment is $15,000. .

Ontario

governments, have always failed to recognize the necessity of having balance budgets. . . . We in British Columbia are now paying for the sins of omission and commission of past Liberal governments in Ottawa."

B.C. would support Ottawa in its efforts to fight inflation which could include wage, price and interest freezes "in the national interest."

But, he said:

"We don't intend to be part of a policy movement which will cause unemployment. There are people flocking to our province from all over Canada looking for work. We must supply these jobs."

Prime Minister Trudeau had said that if Canadians think the government will lose its nerve in the face of a possible rise in unemployment "they are mistaken. We have no choice but to fight inflation and to fight it first."

Should unemployment rise to, say, six per cent as a result of fighting inflation it would be unfortunate, he said, but the price would be "infinitely worse" for the destruction of the economy.

Mr. Trudeau, who called a federal-provincial conference to shuffle of several top-level public servants and the appointment of a new Saskatchewan lieutenant-governor, allowed economic questions to dominate proceedings with his identification of inflation as the gravest domestic problem facing Canada in 1970.

While the federal government could "only get tougher, we don't want to weaken" in the battle against inflation. The prime minister made it clear he expects the same resolve from the other areas of the country and economy.

Premiers Alberta and British Columbia were areas of the most severe inflationary pressures.

If the provinces don't take their responsibility, federal measures must be taken tougher.

The only question the federal government could ask itself is "whether we are using the right tools." But in the study of possible solutions to prevent fiscal and monetary policies, no thought was being given to freeing the Canadian dollar from its current pegged rate.

This would be considered only if Canada had her foreign markets and an exchange crisis resulted.

Canada had to deal with inflation in 1970 "and not too late in the year, if we are going to deal with it at all." While anti-inflationary policies caused hardships for a number of Canadians, it was hoped they would be helped through expanded regional development programs.

Students Deliver Baskets

Thanks to the spirit of good will on the part of students at Centennial Secondary School, 32 needy families are being assured of Christmas dinner—including turkey.

Students in each home form at the school donated food, clothing and money and the 32 hampers were packed on Friday. Funds donated money was used to purchase turkeys for each of the baskets and also by a committee of the student parliament, together with supervising teachers, delivered the hampers.

The names and addresses of the needy families were provided through the Christmas Exchange.

Tough Negotiating Ahead Over Police, Fire Salaries

New salary demands submitted by Belleville firemen and policemen would mean an additional four mills on the tax rate if all requests were granted.

This is the picture presented by Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott, following receipt of contract requests submitted by the two associations.

"How do you keep taxes down?" queried Mayor Scott.

Wage negotiations with the Belleville Professional Firefighters' Association are scheduled to get under way Jan. 14. Members' request is for a 35 per cent pay increase in a one year contract. Previous contracts with firemen have been for a two-year period.

The increase request is for a total of 35 per cent over present wages.

Under the existing contract, a four year fireman in Belleville receives $6,330. A probationer receives $5,850, and a first year fireman $6,170. A captain instructor receives $7,370.

The wage submission presented by the association follows a pattern set all across Ontario which has seen professional firefighters in major cities awarded increases averaging 17 per cent and ranging all the way from 7½ per cent to 23 per cent.

Mayor Scott said if the Belleville firemen's total request was granted it would amount to two additional mills on the tax rate.

The police request would also cost two mills, making a total of four mills additional if all demands were met.

Mayor Scott agreed that local firemen would have to receive pay increases comparable to those granted in other centres, but hoped the January negotiations would result "in a reasonable settlement, agreeable to all."

Here is the picture in other Ontario centres. Current salaries are those of first-class firemen on one-year contracts; the percentage indicates the increase over 1968 rates.

Hamilton, $8,503, 21.4 per cent; Kitchener, $8,130, 17 per cent; Waterloo, $8,130, 17 per cent; Brantford, $7,808, 23 per cent; Peterborough, $7,200, 9.4 per cent; Brockville, $7,450, 14 per cent.

Firemen in Ottawa have been without a contract since Dec. 31, 1968. Negotiations are continuing.

In Windsor, firemen won an increase of almost 20 per cent over two years. Under a recently-ratified contract, their salary this year was increased 18.75 per cent, retroactive to last Jan. 1, and will rise another 11.11 per cent in 1970. A first-class fireman makes $8,550 and will make $9,500 next year.

Sarnia firemen this week approved a contract that gives them a 26 per cent rise over two years. Under the new contract, a first-class firemanis now $8,025 this year, retroactive to Jan. 1, 1969, and will get $8,750 next year.

Christmas Is Universal

The Christmas message is for all men — a theme Mrs. Orma Slack decided to emphasize with this Nativity scene at Bridge Street United Church. The setting, constructed by Mrs. Slack is based on Huron Carol attributed to Jean Brebeuf who used native idioms in 17th-century wilderness Christmas.

Traditional Bethlehem Story Told by Using Native Themes

Christmas would not be Christmas without some basic reminders about the way of the world.

And even in a world of sophisticated communications some messages come across loud and clear in the simplest way.

Like at Bridge Street United Church Sunday School.

Proud production of the school on show this Yuletide is one of the most imaginative nativity scenes seen in years.

The scene tells the traditional Bethlehem story in a manner inspired by the Canadian martyr Jean Brebeuf.

It's setting and figures are based on the Huron Christmas carol — where Father Brebeuf, endeavoring to explain the coming of the Christ child to the natives of Canada's wilderness, used local themes and word associations.

For instance, the stable is replaced by an Indian lodge of bark. The Christ child is wrapped in rabbit skin instead of swaddling clothes. The gifts of the wise men are fox and beaver pelts. Deer and snow rabbits substitute for domestic stable animals.

The presentation is the imaginative product of church school teacher, Mrs. Orma Slack.

In its making, Mrs. Slack and her husband William trekked to the Oak Hills to find elm and cedar bark for the long house reproduction.

The animals were borrowed from a Belleville who manufactures lawn ornaments.

The infant was represented by a large doll — its white face slightly browned.

The scene has been used as a background to church school Christmas presentations — to the delight of youngsters, and the interest of adults.

Appreciative visitors have included children from the Tyendinaga Mohawk reserve, says Mrs. Slack.

But, the scene is no mere variation on the Christmas theme.

Rather, it has its serious message, says Mrs. Slack.

The Indian Christmas scene emphasizes the universality of the season's message.

"The whole idea," says Mrs. Slack, "was to point up the fact that Jesus was born for everyone — not just one class."

Presqu'ile Park Snowmobile Trail Ready for Use

BRIGHTON — Christmas has come early — in the form of a snow covered trail — for area snowmobile owners.

The department of lands and forests has laid out a 12-mile snowmobile trail at Presqu'ile Provincial Park, two miles south of here.

Starting inside the main entrance to the park, the one-way trail extends almost the full length of the park and ends at the starting point.

It is expected that the varied terrain offered by the snowmobile trail will be especially attractive to urban dwellers. There is no charge for use of the well-marked trail and an adequate parking area has been provided by the lands and forests department.

Lands and forest officials have placed no restrictions on hours for use of the trail and will not do so unless the park is abused. In this respect, the officials request that everyone stay on the trail and off the many small shrubs planted in the surrounding area.

NOT EXPORTED

held in Canada since 1885.

Canadian wool is not exported and is consumed mostly by local or nearby textile mills.

Rail Staff's Problem

Even amid family reunions and the pleasure afforded most by the Christmas season there is a climate of uncertainty for many at every level of society at this time of year. "Christmas blues" cover numerous problems ranging from solitariness to deprivation — there just is not much in the larder as it were, not much money.

In Belleville there is one situation which is rather unique, and that is Canadian National Railways' plan to transfer the work of accounting staff to Montreal. Eighteen persons are involved and the transfer would entail moving 13 of the employees to Montreal.

Now there are not many people in Ontario or elsewhere — given Quebec's uncertain political climate and the problems of language — who would willingly transfer to that province at this time. As it is, the Bellevillians would face unusual problems.

In a recent letter to this newspaper a union official said while there had been many transfers within the immediate area of Ontario, in his 43 years employed by the railway "no employees have been transferred to another province under the conditions these employees must live along with their wives and children, namely social, schooling etc.

The 13 employees, he said, "are being forced to go from a schedule office at Belleville to a non-scheduled office in Montreal which means they will lose their seniority and have no security at Montreal. These employees have no knowledge of French, now a necessity in Quebec, and in the office they will be working in, the use of French has increased over the past three years from 19 per cent to 65 per cent."

Transfers are also being planned to Montreal from Quebec City which means that, the Belleville people, without any knowledge of French, would be the first to suffer in any subsequent cutback of staff. They would then be virtually dispossessed, amid an alien atmosphere, and with no prospect of obtaining other work.

From the Belleville employees' viewpoint the situation is fraught with difficulties. Hastings MP Lee Grills went so far as to describe it as "inhuman" when he raised the matter in the Commons recently. We would not dispute Mr. Grills' interpretation; indeed it is one more example of the disruption of business and social life as a result of the insistence on bilingualism in Quebec.

Talks are continuing in the matter, with another meeting scheduled early in the new year. In the circumstances we would urge Canadian National to reconsider a move which has such undesirable implications for those faced with this transfer. Why can the work not be performed in Belleville?

Wrong Approach

Beatle John Lennon does himself a disservice when he refers (as he did in a recent interview in this country) to the United States as "the other place."

"You mean the other place?" he said in answer to a question. The sarcasm in his voice was evident, but Lennon should not forget he owes much of his wealth to the United States. In fact the main factor in his being awarded the MBE by the Queen (he sent it back recently as a protest against Britain's supply of arms to Nigeria) was his dollar contribution to Britain's coffers.

Now he has compounded this impertinence by sending the bill for his full-page "peace" advertisement in The New York Times to President Nixon, saying it costs less than the life of one man.

Lennon says he is also placing the advertisement in newspapers in other capitals. It reads: "War is Over — If You Want It." He did not say which capitals, or whether he is including for example Moscow, Peking or Hanoi.

Such calls to peace are useless if they do not include the Communist world which is playing a major part in keeping the hostilities in Vietnam going. The current build-up of North Vietnamese forces for a possible new offensive in the new year is a case in point.

The trouble is, Lennon likely has never been heard of in the Communist world — until now that is. He will get all the support he needs from that quarter if he persists with this campaign. What he will not obtain, we suspect, is permission to place the same advertisement in the Communist press — even if he wants that.

A Mustache Did It for NDP's Max Saltsman

MPs in Search of That Magic Elixir—Charisma

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Remember back in the not - too - long - ago less-complicated political day when about all a parliamentarian had to do in projecting a good photographic image was reflect a pleasant smile.

It was the age of the great wide-open grinning pumpkin face.

Now all that is changed.

Maybe it was Prime Minister Trudeau's Caesar-style hair-do with the thinning locks combed down over the noble brow.

Could have been Senator Keith Davey's groovy almost-to-the-chin sideburns.

Or perhaps former External Affairs Minister Paul Martin's suspected dye-job that turned greying hair to jet-black, and, some observers will tell you, resulted in his early fading from the Liberal leadership voting and subsequent promotion-in-reverse to the Senate.

Whatever on political earth prompted it, most parliamentarians are agreed it takes more than an amiable grin now to project a positive image.

Some translate image as charisma.

Others call it packaging.

What they all are doing is trying to establish a personal trademark.

Max Saltsman of Waterloo, one of the shining lights of the NDP — both in the personality and talent departments — prefers to call it "identity."

Politics is salesmanship.

Selling a political philosophy and its parliamentary party, say some cynics, has a marketplace relationship to selling soap.

It has to be packaged in such a way as to be immediately identifiable.

And this, it turns out, at least in politics, is not always easy.

For human faces and figures have a sameness discouraging to the political toiler who wants to stand out from the great grey herd.

Currently in the Commons, former Prime Minister Diefenbaker managed it with his curious rooster's comb style of hair and his long and lanky figure that unfolds from a chair or bench sectionally, almost like a skeleton robot.

Prime Minister Trudeau did it with that hair - do, sandals, trendy sports jackets and slacks corduroy suits, aacut ties and a whole new and colorful political wardrobe.

But what could Max Saltsman do, he asked himself one day when confronted in the mirror with what he felt was an image that did nothing to set him apart from the faceless mob?

He grew a mustache, and discovered it was a whole new world.

Everybody — just everybody in Waterloo — seemed to be looking at him. And so he had instant identity.

But it was not easy.

There were decisions to be made. What kind of mustache?

A thin line over the lip, in the worldly flair of a French maitre de?

A Sergeant Pepper job, identifying for the young set with the Beatles?

A handlebar model, like he once sported in the RAF?

He grew a cross between a Hitler type cut and a Salish-style trim which came out in the full-brush fashion.

And up flew the static.

Voters in the new north end of his riding, who had not known nor readily recognized him before, became immediately aware of their MP.

Voters in the old south section of his riding who had known the nude-lipped Max Saltsman, did not recognize the hairy stranger.

He had grown the mustache during a two or three week holiday when he was not on view either in his riding or in the Commons.

When it was established it was Max Saltsman masquerading behind the brush, everybody had opinions, few of them bland.

In flooded the mail: "Is it for real?" . . . "scrub brush" . . . "cookie-duster" . . . "Genghis Khan" . . . "take it off!"

His constituency executive in acute financial alarm called him on the carpet. What were they going to do next time around with those 500 mustached ex photos they had left over from the last election?

Let the kids paint mustaches on them like they did the last time, Max counselled him.

The NDP caucus summoned him. What did he think he was doing, destroying an established image this way? Who would know it was good old Maxie? Before the mustache, too few, be told them. But now, just about everybody who cared to look.

Of such things then are legends, charisma, personalities and identities established politically.

Like the wrapper on the soap, the can around the beer, the grille on the car.

Queen's Portrait Issue

Dollar Bill Change Made Without Any Prior Advice

Ottawa Journal

Finance Minister Benson and his Prime Minister must take Canadians for a pack of idiots.

They say they are taking the Queen's portrait off four of our bank notes because that will fend off counterfeiters and "improve the appearance" of the new bills. And to that they add that this dropping of the Sovereign is not a precedent for R. B. Bennett put Bluebell and Laurier on the $500 and $1,000 bills (though the Queen has been on all notes since 1954).

It will not mean the end of the world if the Queen's portrait is removed from some of our bills, but it is a cheeky and perhaps sneaky way the Government is going about it.

Parliament might have been asked its opinion before the decision was made. Finance Minister Benson should have made a statement to Parliament when the House opened, knowing the news had broken in the morning.

On September 23, 1968, in the Commons, the Prime Minister said about the monarchy: "We will continue to respect the institutions that we have until such time as the people of Canada wish to change them."

Removal of the Queen's portrait from the currency of the land does not mean a removal of the monarchy but doing it in this quick and covert way is not only disrespectful to the wishes of many Canadians but likely to provoke unhelpful dissension at a time when this country should be uniting against the economic, social and governmental problems which heavily beset it.

Banks' Operating Profit $469 Million

The Globe and Mail

Figures for the 1969 fiscal year ending on October 31 show that the seven leading Canadian banks enjoyed among them a $469—million operating profit. This represented a 23.5 per cent increase over the 1968 take. And the 1968 operating profit jumped 27.5 per cent over what the banks garnered in 1967. In this, they far outranked average corporation profits.

Dominion Bureau of Statistics figures for the 1968 calendar year show that the profits before taxes of 4,000 companies of all kinds rose only 17.1 per cent above 1967 levels. And this year, indications are that the general profit picture will be poorer. Somalings at the three-quarter mark show profits before taxes increasing by only 4.5 per cent. The large drop is partly attributable to strikes in key industries, sturdy sales and rising labor and material costs.

Wake Island, a United States Navy airfield in the Pacific Ocean, surrendered 28 years ago today—in 1941—after a gallant defence by a garrison of 377 marines and a few civilian workers. U.S. troops sank five Japanese warships and a submarine during the first landing attempts and underwent 15 days of heavy bombing, fighting back with four aircraft, all shot down. The U.S. commander ordered the surrender after six hours of combat with 1,103 Japanese invaders.

But even this combination isn't enough to explain the difference between the profit increase for banks and for corporations. How much of the extra lolly going to the banks, we wonder, can be traced to the removal of interest ceilings on January 1, 1968?

Wage Settlement Cools Tempers

Italy Steps Back from the Brink of Anarchy

AP News Analysis

By DAVID MASSARELLA

ROME (AP) — Italy appeared today to have weathered four months of labor rebellion topped off by a string of terrorist bombings.

The strike-filled autumn of labor unrest strained the economy. Often there were street demonstrations and violence. Bombings that caused 14 deaths and more than 100 wounded in Milan and Rome Dec. 12 stirred fears of revolution or coup d'etat.

Then a wage agreement Sunday between the biggest striking labor group, the 1,200.00 metal workers, and industrialists all but put an end to the "hot autumn." Relatively few labor disputes remain unresolved.

The bombings, in the words of the Milan daily Corriere della Sera, "could have exasperated the spiral of violence and beat to death already weakened republican and democratic institutions."

Instead, they aroused wide spread horror, and Corriere said:

"There is no doubt. The democratic system, as a whole, has withstood the test. There was no splitting of the country in two, as was awaited by the opposite extremes."

There has been no significant violence since the bombings, and Premier Mariano Rumor's Christian Democratic government is still in office.

Many have likened the situation in recent months to the atmosphere of desperation that preceded the rise of Mussolini's fascism in the 1920s. But the Italians now are better off financially, better educated and more worldly than they were then. There is no evidence that any of the present extremist cliques are backed by any significant organizations with power and money.

Although most think there is a possibility that rightists might try a takeover in reaction to leftist extremism, most knowledgeable Italians dismiss the idea.

Economically and politically, many difficulties lie ahead.

Strikes by transport workers, and by farm and other employees will continue for a while. A 48-hour walkout halted buses and trams today.

Production losses have cut down the industrial growth, and increased labor costs and inflation threatens to damage the economy further in 1970.

The bureaucracy is growing, with more public money going into it than into investment.

The impasse between the Christian Democrats, Socialists and Republicans over revival of the centre-left governing coalition threatens to go on indefinitely. The crucial issue—how of the big Communist party share in government power—is unresolved.

Diefenbaker to Trudeau

Political Turbulence Hallmark of Canada in the Sixties

OTTAWA (CP) — Politically, the 1960s in Canada were as turbulent as the 1940s militarily and the 1930s and 1950s economically.

The decade ended much as it began: with a strong man holding a firm grip on the levers of power in Ottawa.

Each in his own way was classed as a radical.

When the '60s opened, John Diefenbaker as Conservative prime minister was still savoring his record electoral victory of 1958 and pumping social legislation through a willing parliamentary mill.

He was a Prairie radical who captured the Conservative party and, after his loss of the prime ministership and of the party leadership, tried to turn it into a rump Prairie party.

In much the same way, Pierre Elliott Trudeau, a Quebec radical, captured the Liberal party in 1968 after only three years as an MP—and as a Liberal.

Mr. Diefenbaker was saddled with recession.

As the 1970s begun, Prime Minister Trudeau was saddled with inflation.

Whether he would have any more success fighting inflation than Mr. Diefenbaker did recession and unemployment was the key economic and—possibly—political question as Canadians cast anxious glances at the new decade.

Mr. Diefenbaker dominated the Commons in his day as Mr. Trudeau does now.

Indeed, it is still Mr. Diefenbaker, now 73, who more often than any other gives off the spark which ignites lively debate.

On Mr. Diefenbaker's birthday in 1958, Mr. Trudeau crossed the Commons floor to pin a blue flower on the former prime minister on behalf of all the "flower people."

In December, 1959, Mr. Diefenbaker crossed the floor to shake hands warmly with Mr. Trudeau after the prime minister confessed he had found an official letter which he had said earlier did not exist.

Mr. Defenbaker has told friends that Mr. Trudeau appeals to him because they both stand for "one Canada."

"He's my boy," Mr. Diefenbaker once said of Mr. Trudeau.

In between the flamboyances of the Diefenbaker and Trudeau regimes—often described here as the two ocean bands—was the relative quiet of the five-year government of Lester Bowles Pearson.

The operative word here is "relative" because the Pearson years were beset by one political crisis after another, from influence-peddling in high places to Commons defeat on a tax bill.

Moreover, Mr. Pearson was also beset by the internal struggle in his cabinet over his succession.

Ministers seeking the Liberal leadership spent a good deal of their time savaging one another instead of the Opposition, which makes it all the more astonishing, perhaps, that the Pearson government got through legislative landmarks such as a new flag and the Canada Pension Plan.

A Trudeau supporter recently said he hopes that the Trudeau government can put through legislation in the quantity and quality that Mr. Pearson did.

With the beginning of medical care insurance, a social security program for Canada would seem largely complete.

But as the decade changed, Mr. Trudeau and his cabinet were looking at two more possible social security measures: pay insurance in case of sickness and a guaranteed annual income.

The latter might replace all others in one giant economy package, British Columbia and Alberta have both asked for such a program as a means of eliminating equalization grants by Ottawa to the poorer provinces.

Robert Stanfield, who replaced Mr. Diefenbaker as Conservative leader in 1967, argues that all Mr. Trudeau's legislation so far is legalistic justice.

He said Mr. Trudeau while talking of a "just society" has done nothing about such enormous problems as poverty.

There was no big item on Parliament's menu at the end of the decade and Conservatives said things were so dull that Mr. Stanfield could make more political yards by making speeches across the country.

This, in fact, is what Mr. Stanfield is startling to do: a visit to some part of the country nearly every week.

The public opinion polls showed at year's end that the Liberals had picked up some of the support they had lost earlier in the year.

Conservatives said voters were becoming disenchanted with Mr. Trudeau but conceded frankly they could find no marked enthusiasm for them.

In any case, a federal general election is not expected until 1972, or, possibly, 1973.

By that time, the Liberals may have as part of their platform a program for pay insurance against sickness or a guaranteed annual income or both.

Whatever their platform, they are not likely to make the same mistake the Liberal St. Laurent government did in 1957 by raising old age pensions by $5 a month to $46.

"The six-buck boys," Mr. Diefenbaker taunted, and rode such Liberal gaffes right into the prime ministership.

However, Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Pearson then tried to outdo each other in spending for social welfare.

The old antagonists met for Lord Avon in general elections. Each won two, Mr. Pearson was never able to win a majority of Commons seats even with a 1965 try when he did not have to call an election.

Their constant feuding led to bitter, sometimes enraged, debate in Parliament. After the Conservatives unearthed the influence-peddling scandal in some cabinet offices in 1964, the Liberals dragged the 1960 Munsinger sex-and-security case out of the files to defend Mr. Diefenbaker.

Political careers were ruined—but not those of the two chief protagonists.

One of the nastiest political fights of the early 1960s concerned whether Canada should accept American nuclear weapons.

The issue demonstrates as well as anything how different is the mood of Canada at the beginning of the 1970s to what it was nearly a decade ago.

Mr. Diefenbaker's government bought $700,000,000 worth of weapons designed to carry nuclear warheads provided by the United States.

But after these purchases, Mr. Diefenbaker and his external affairs minister, Howard Green, switched this policy and decided against accepting the nuclear warheads.

The trouble was that the government would have been saddled with trying to explain why it had spent this $700,000,000, especially when unemployment was growing.

So it declined to say anything definite one way or the other.

Mr. Pearson had come out against nuclear weapons. But then he suddenly switched his policy in 1963 on the grounds that Canada must make good any commitments given its defence partners.

Consequently, when Mr. Pearson took office in 1963, Canada got the nuclear warheads. For this, Mr. Trudeau in his Montreal magazine Cite Libre described Mr. Pearson as the "hooded defiance of peace," a comment about the 1957 Nobel Peace Prize winner which some anti-Trudeau delegates circulated widely at the Liberal leadership convention in April, 1968.

In his second year as prime minister, Mr. Trudeau announced the elimination of Canada's nuclear role in Europe.

There was hardly a murmur of protest.

A prominent Conservative policy adviser told a friend: "When Trudeau made that announcement I could not honestly remember whether we had ever got the damn nuclear weapons or not. That shows you how big an issue it wasn't in the first place. Diefenbaker was right. Unfortunately, he never had the guts to say publicly what his decision was."

Today, all political parties are trying to grope their way toward new policies which take account of the social revolution, among the young particularly.

Every once in a while on Parliament Hill there is a discouraging feeling that the public considers Parliament irrelevant.

For the politician, nothing could be worse. He would rather be reviled as a Fascist, Communist or plain dunderhead than be told he is irrelevant.

But the heavy mail indicates not only that the average Canadian is concerned about nearly everything that is going on, but also that he wants to tell his MP what he thinks about it.

How the MPs, and especially the ones in the cabinet, translate these communications into policies for the country is what politics are about.

This will be the same for the 1970s as it was for the '60s and all the other decades.

Aerotrain Said Shuttle Answer

PARIS (CP) — Canada is showing interest in current tests of the French Aerotrain, an air-cushion vehicle that may be an answer to getting airport passengers into cities.

French newspapers have referred to it as another technological breakthrough for France, rated among the leaders in the transportation field.

Cited as examples of this forward look are the Concorde, Caravelle and Mystere 20 aircraft, France's electronic train system and the Paris subway which has been used as a model for subways in Montreal, Mexico and Santiago, Chile.

Transport Minister Don Jamieson of Canada, who recently visited the Aerotrain's test centre 10 miles north of Orleans, indicated the Ottawa government's interest in the air-cushion concept to move passengers from new jumbo jet airports being planned near Toronto and Montreal.

The French train—or is it a plane?—carries 80 passengers along on a cushion of air that keeps the 20 ton vehicle about one-quarter of an inch above the track.

One observer said the French Aerotrain is at least three years ahead of similar developments in other countries. In 10 years it could be the common shuttle service around some of the great cities of the world.

Sense of Timidity

Domestic Discontent Haunts U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — The ingredients of war, revolution and civil violence that convulsed the once-promising era of the '60s remain to dog the United States as it moves with an uncharacteristic sense of timidity into the new decade.

The mood of caution seems to emanate from the White House itself as it surveys the miasma of domestic discontent and the unprecedented range of troubles that beset allies and enemies around the world.

All pervasive, of course, is the Vietnam war that banished Lyndon Johnson to silent retirement and remains as the ultimate challenge to Richard Nixon, his career and his Republican party.

Elsewhere, the Middle East continues to seethe with what wise men consider the ingredients of disaster, China gains in nuclear sophistication, Latin America grows more restive and more articulate in its anti-Americanism.

On the homefront, the world's most powerful and wealthy nation is deeply troubled by a runaway inflation further inflamed by talk of a taxpayers' strike, broad disenchantment with long-cherished American values and ethics, and an unprecedented spirit of revolution on campus, in pulpit and most particularly in the ghettos.

Ironically, the '60s were a time of fantastic prosperity and also of belated discovery of poverty, even hunger, and social injustice just over the backyard fence.

Thus beset from all sides, Nixon has publicly staked his presidency and "silent majority" he is confident exists and is backing him.

Although he was a minority president—the first since 1912, with only 44 per cent of the voters favoring him in 1968—polls suggest he does indeed have a hefty majority of Americans backing him now. It is to this growing constituency he looks for support in the vital elections of 1970.

Up for grabs are 35 of the 50 governorships, 24 of which now are held by Republicans, and 34 of the 100 Senate seats. Republicans now hold only nine of those going on the line; they would need eight additional seats to give them a clear majority in the Senate.

Pessimists note with certain justification that the decade may best be remembered for its tragedies—John F. Kennedy, Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Robert F. Kennedy.

Johnson, elevated to the presidency with Kennedy's assassination in November, 1963, enjoyed at first the bipartisan support of a shaken nation. The candidacy of right wing Republican Senator Barry Goldwater of Arizona was a pushover for the tall Texan who won the presidency in his own right in 1964 by the greatest majority ever.

But, as the Vietnam war—and American reaction to it—tightened its grip, his influence began to wane.

On the wings of the so-called "new politics" Minnesota Senator Eugene McCarthy, backed by hosts of assertive youth, set out to upset Johnson in 1968. His almost unbelievable moral victory in the New Hampshire primary gave Senator Robert Kennedy of New York the ray of encouragement he needed and he, too, jumped into the race.

By the end of March Johnson was ready to give up. It was a bombshell:

"I shall not seek and I will not accept the nomination for another term as president."

It came in an almost matter-of-fact manner at the end of a television speech announcing that, under the pressure of public outcry, he would halt the bombing of most of North Vietnam.

Five days later, a sniper killed King and fierce outbreaks of looting and burning scarred more than 100 cities. On June 5, Robert Kennedy was gunned down in Los Angeles after winning another primary over McCarthy but still running behind Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey, who had entered after Johnson withdrew.

In Chicago, a city under siege as helmeted police and a youthful demonstrators clashed, the nomination went to Humphrey, as expected.

Meanwhile, Nixon won the Republican nomination easily after Michigan Governor George Romney dropped out and the bids of Governors Nelson Rockefeller of New York and Ronald Reagan of California fizzled.

The half-hearted Democratic attempt to draft Senator Edward Kennedy came to nothing, but the broad assumption the 1972 nomination was his if he wanted it.

But that was before the affair of Mary Jo Kopechne, the Washington secretary who died in the incident at Chappaquiddick Island, Mass.

With the natural advantage of an incumbent, Nixon is seen in long-range guessing, for what its worth given the uncertainty of the times, as having a good chance for a second term.

If indeed his support comes mainly from "middle America," and whatever southern following he can win away from segregationist George C. Wallace's third-party effort, his campaign against big-time crime will impress.

Elsewhere, he must bring a downward trend to inflation without causing a recession—as did the previous Republican administration of Dwight Eisenhower. And he must give life to his administration's theme: "bring us together."

Above all else, he must get out of Vietnam.

NEW RAINWEAR FASHIONS — New rainwear fashions announced in Montreal, feature fabric covered in a light thin clear plastic. Here three versions of the natural linen look are modelled. (CP Wirephoto)

Versatile Rainwear

MONTREAL (CP) — The wraps were lifted Monday off something Canadian women have wanted for a long time—a rainwear fabric that looks well and resists the heaviest downpours.

The strangest part is that it took so long for designers to think of it.

The idea, as conceived by Lydia Fashions of Montreal, is to take any type of material and cover it with a sheet of plastic.

As a result, a raincoat can maintain the dashing look of red glen-plaid or striking striped wool, but still keep off the rain.

The fashion presentation also showed off designs for spring 1970.

There were no startingly new styles but it was obvious that tentative 1969 trends—waistlines and wildly fluctuating hemlines —are intended to last another season.

There were two maxis in the show but it was carefully mentioned that, just as with minis, too many women who are physically unsuited to the style are wearing them.

"You have to be tall and slender with a beautiful walk, like our models have, to wear a maxi well," said Doris Clark, one of Montreal's top commentators.

Organizers had chosen a Canadian theme, with clothing grouped according to the areas that supposedly would find them most appealing.

From Ontario were several coats in iridescent antron and cotton, complete with gold-buckled belts and epaulettes.

Nearly all coats and pantsuit jackets modelled had the back shoulder detail of the traditional trench coats, were belted and double-breasted.

Eggshell pique rainpants suits with gold buttons and brightly-colored scarves tucked into the V-necks fell under the Western flag, as did shiny red and blue cire pantsuits which were 100-per-cent fortrel and 100-per-cent rainproof.

Also featured were poncho—in white jersey trimmed around the bottom and collars with navy and black vinyl, worn over contrasting jumpsuits.

REAL ESTATE

WHAT DOES A HOME MEAN TO YOU?

ED McKINNEY
J. E. McKinney Realty Ltd.

Typical home buyers are not just buying bricks and mortar and a lot; they are buying a HOME that suits them emotionally and financially and meets their practical needs.

It is the Realtor's job to match the property to the buyers' needs and resources. How well he does it decides how valuable a service he supplies his clients.

This means more than simply knowing the price, number of bedrooms, probable financing and whether the listing price is firm or open to offers. Unfortunately, this limited information is frequently an unprepared salesman's total store of information.

A competent Realtor should be able to furnish his clients with reliable information as to the age of the house, square feet of living area, exact room sizes, lot size, tax bill, utility bill for heating, nearest churches, schools and bus lines.

This information and notes as to the general tone of the neighborhood should go into the Realtor's files when the listing is taken.

He is then in a position to save prospective buyers wasted trips to unsuitable properties. In so doing, he will also give the vendor the fast results he seeks.

Schools At Reserve Hold Party

TYENDINAGA RESERVE—Children from the Quinte-Mohawk School, and from three other one-room schools where grades one, two and three are taught, assembled recently at the Council House for a Christmas Party. The school committee and teachers treated them to refreshments.

After having lunch in the Guild Hall, teachers and children assembled in the auditorium for a special Christmas program. The principal number was a short play presented by Mrs. Gladys Maracle's special education class. Two films followed. Then came the party itself, with carol singing led by Mrs. Borden Elliott, and the traditional exchange of gifts and distribution of Christmas treats.

Tots in the kindergarten class had their own private party.

Seniors Talk to Canadians

By DORIS CLARE

We hear a little, these days, about enterprising groups which undertake to link up the old with the young. Here is one I find particularly delightful.

Miss Anne Davidson of the Anglican Church was looking for a project for aging people. She asked herself the question: What one thing is there that an old person can do, even though handicapped physically in one way or another?

The answer: Talk! Who doesn't love to talk? And if an elderly person is shy, he is eager to have someone to talk to.

So then Anne took a look at the teen-age immigrants with which she was concerned. Learning the new language was a great struggle for them and school work could not progress until English was mastered.

Result: She linked up the oldsters with the teenagers. One helped the other. Each made new friends. School work flourished.

Plus value: Several of the seniors gave names of their New Canadian friends to community organizations when their families could be invited to special affairs and become acquainted.

Good for you, Anne!

* * *

Dear Doris: I am a godmother and when my little ones were little, they believed in Santa Claus, the tooth fairy, etc., as all little ones do. When they were ready to start school, I would tell them stories about St. Nicholas; thus getting them ready for the old legend.

They readily accepted this: that Santa Claus or St. Nicholas was really a legend. And as they got older they realized that at the school they did read about St. Nicholas. And I feel I never really lied to them. I hope this helps a "Troublesome Mother."

Dear Grandmother: Top marks to you as a wise, loving teacher!

* * *

Dear Doris: About your column on first aid, I read an article which recommended only one treatment for lesser burns: cold water. Ointments it said, should be avoided.

From personal experience I know results are amazing with cold water. Some small burns are completely eliminated. Pain and damage are drastically reduced. — Throwing Cold Water.

Dear T. C. W.: You started me on a new inquiry. I got conflicting medical instructions, but a strong vote in favor of the cold water idea, for anything small and not yet blistered.

Trouble with ointments is they may hold in germs; then in later medical treatment the problem is to get the ointment off. This isn't a problem with a water-soluble kaolin acid type of salve, and I can name a good one for you.

But cold water does wonders with small burns. You just keep using it until the burning sensation stops.

There are Canadian resources to help solve your problem. Write to Doris for direction, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Ann Landers

Reader Berates Ann For Stand on Abortion

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was shocked by your seeming approval of legal abortions. Have you taken leave of your senses? Don't you realize millions of people look to you for moral guidance? Our priest has, on occasion, used your column as a basis for his sermons. I am happy he was in Rome when that particular column appeared. He would have been very disappointed.

ANN LANDERS

These are trying times in which to keep one's values straight. People need something to cling to. You have always been a staunch supporter of old-fashioned morality. What happened? Please don't shake our faith by coming out for something that is against our religion. There are over 46 million Catholics in this country and we believe abortion is murder. We count on you. Don't let us down. — A MOTHER IN MASSACHUSETTS.

DEAR MOTHER: I would not recommend abortion for a devout Catholic — or for that matter, anyone whose religion teaches that abortion is murder. For women who believe this, the guilt resulting from an abortion could produce serious emotional problems.

As many Catholic theologists agree, religious law should not be the basis for civil law. There are millions of women who do not view abortion as murder and these women should not be subjected to backroom, kitchen-table butchery. Thousands of married women as well as single girls die every year because the law has driven them to strip hideouts and motel room surgery.

I hope you will read the next letter. It represents another point of view.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Since you are part of the problem maybe you can help solve it.

Every morning I stop at the newsstand and buy a paper so I can read your column during coffee break. The boss comes by regularly and "borrows" the paper. I can see him from my desk — he goes straight for your column. Sometimes he smiles. Sometimes he laughs, slaps his knee and yells, "That's a honey!"

Twice last week he cut out your column before he returned the paper. I was so mad I got indigestion.

Is there a tactful way to solve this problem? — D.U.B.

* * *

DEAR D.U.B.: Type the following message on a slip of paper and clip it to the front page. "To Whom It May Concern: Please return intact. The items you want to cut out are the ones I buy the paper to read. Thank you. The Owner."

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I have been married for ten years to a wonderful man. We have three children, a nice home and much to be grateful for.

Clyde has a large family. His relatives often call on Thursday to say they will be here Friday, at 5 o'clock, or even have piled in on us at once. Three weeks ago Clyde's sister and her husband arranged with friends to meet at our home for a weekend. We did not know the couple. They were lovely but their three children were a handful. That same weekend Clyde's cousins came from California for a two-week stay.

Clyde says relatives are not company. He loves to have people around and doesn't mind running a free hotel and restaurant. But I am the one who must do the work, and it is killing me. I am exhausted, dangerously underweight and hooked on tranquilizers. What do you suggest? — FULL TIME SLAVE.

DEAR SLAVE: So relatives aren't company? Who does Clyde consider company? Queen Elizabeth and Prince Phillip? Enlist your doctor's support. Ask him to inform your husband that you're overworked and that you need a vacation, not guests.

Merry Christmas

In these modern times, we at Malcolm Brothers would like to extend to you an old fashioned greeting. Thank you for your patronage and have a very Merry Christmas and a happy and healthy New Year.

Tasty Appetizer Dip A Breeze to Prepare

By MARY MOORE

You people are insatiable party-givers and party-goers. No sooner have I given you canapes and appetizers for your parties than I receive a flood of mail asking for more.

The dip I am giving you today is a breeze to prepare and so popular that everybody was reaching for it at once last night when we eagerly tasted it.

TUNA HOLIDAY DIP

One 6½-oz. can chunk light tuna, drained
1 cup fresh dairy sour cream
2½ tsps. (½ pkge.) dry salad dressing mix (Canadian or old fashioned French)
½ tsp. horseradish
1½ tsps. lemon juice
2 tsps. freeze-dried chives
1-16 tsp. salt
4 drops Angostura Bitters OR Tabasco sauce

In a medium-sized bowl, break up drained tuna. (Do not beat in beater.) Add and stir in with a fork the sour cream until it is blended and consistency is soft enough to pick up on potato chips or melba toast or Triscuits. Be careful not so soft that it will drip on your party clothes. Supply decent-sized serviettes — not those little scrappy ones that are good only as a gesture.

Pile into attractive serving dish and chill. Serve surrounded with dainty raw cauliflowerets, squares of green pepper, carrot curls, tiny scrubbed raw button mushrooms, and of course the inevitable crackers and chips for dipping.

This is very popular and can be made and stored covered in refrigerator two or three days in advance of your party, so hostesses please clip this now.

Dinner Menus

Watch your guests reach for this dip. It is different and so are the accompaniments. Mary Moore says busy hostesses — and who is not? — would welcome Tuna Holiday Dip because it is new and may be made quickly.

Second Bayside Brownies Hold Enrolment Ceremony and Party

The brownies will be awarded first and second year Service Star pins in January. Brownie Elizabeth Dunn will receive two extra badges — "Book Lovers" and "Needle Woman".

Games were played and carol singing was enjoyed. Ending the program was an exchange of gifts. Treats were given to each brownie from the Brownie Ladies' Auxiliary.

Refreshments were served to the many visitors under the direction of Grey Owl Selina Dunn. Brownies serving were Brenda Porter, Rhonda Robertson, Jackie Rose, Deli and Chypka and Lori Meyers.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "Terry, did I hear you couching? I hope you're not getting another cold. I wonder if it would help if you took Vitamin C. You just don't get enough rest. Look how thin you are."

Terry: "Oh, Mother, stop fussing. I'm not a little boy."

Mother: "Dr. Smith's office nurse called and said to remind you it's time for your annual check-up. If you can't make it tomorrow, she will work you in next week."

Son: "I'll give her a ring and tell her to make it Tuesday."

Teen-agers are often irritated by goobers who stew and fuss about their health. If your family is accustomed to having regular medical check-ups, it's simple to have the family doctor give the necessary health advice.

Christmas Chill Again Grips Divided Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — It is Christmas time in Berlin, and it is bitter cold. For the divided city's residents, there is a chill in their hearts.

It is the fourth Christmas that the East German Communists have denied passes enabling West Berliners to visit their friends and relatives across the wall in East Berlin.

After the East Germans erected their wall in August, 1961, they waited 3½ years before they granted the first passes at Christmas 1963. There were varying seasonal pass periods after that with the last one at Pentecost in 1966—3½ years ago.

In the interim, the East Berlin regime of Walter Ulbricht has used the wall to put unrelenting pressure on the isolated West Berliners to make them give in to Communist demands.

One demand is that the West Berlin city government deal with East Germany as a separate entity from West Germany. Mayor Klaus Schuetz and his city administration cannot accept this. So, the East Germans remain adamant and the people remain cut off even at Christmas.

At Christmas, 1965, almost 1,000,000 West Berliners poured through the wall to see friends and relatives and to visit their dead. There can be no doubt that as many or more would go this year.

For a resident of Berlin, it is not necessary to ask what people think. They come over for coffee or talk at the store and they tell you.

"The senate (city government) can get us everything but wall passes."

A few lucky West Berliners will be able to go. They are the ones who got so-called hardship passes for special family events that for them fall at Christmas. There are about 7,000 of these passes a month. It is a safety valve the East German regime maintains without formal agreement. Some 50,000 West German visitors also will be able to go to East Berlin since the East Germans consider them foreigners.

East Berliners, of course, except for retired persons, have not been able to come West since 1961.

THE LITTLE WOMAN

"Two years ago you thought it was the most beautiful car on the road. What's happened to change your mind?"

Lennon in Montreal With Bag of Laffs

MONTREAL (CP) — Beatle John Lennon has a brand new bag.

It's a small red velvet one, not to be confused with the great gunny sack in which his wife, Yoko Ono, has been known to hibernate briefly during stage appearances.

The little red "bag of laffs" with a pre-recorded gleeful cackle inside was about the only new offering Lennon had for Montrealers Monday when he and his wife popped into town for a day "just to say hello."

The two swept into a news conference wearing matching black capes which they removed to display matching black jumpsuits. Then Yoko added a broadbrimmed black hat and Lennon a battered army cap.

Throughout the session, the long-haired singer happily toyed with the little laugh bag.

The questions came mainly from reporters for college and high school newspapers.

"Ask me that after the July concert," Lennon said. "I'm trying to grease the other lads into doing it with me. Every time we decide whether to do something new together, an album or whatever, we're deciding about the whole thing."

Didn't he think the $72,000 he has spent on anti-war billboards could better have been used to help starving war victims, especially children?

"There are two things you can do about cancer—you can try to cure it or try to prevent it. We're trying to prevent war. Besides, I'm not sure we're going to pay for the billboards and everything."

Lennon has said he planned to send the bills for his ads and posters to U.S. President Richard Nixon.

Brink's Robbers Paroled

BOSTON (AP) — Three men who spent nearly 15 years in prison for their parts in the $1,200,000 Brink's counting-house robbery in 1950 were released on parole Monday in time to spend Christmas with their families.

Adolph Maffie, 58; James J. Faherty, 58, and, Michael V. Geagan, 61, were sentenced to life in 1958 for their part in the robbery.

The men's sentences were commuted last year by then Gov. John A. Volpe.

Eleven masked and armed men staged the robbery Jan. 17, 1950, at the garage then used by Brink's as a counting house.

Only seven of the 11 now survive. Joseph (Specs) O'Keefe, 58, previously had been the only one free. He was released after serving several years in jail for his part in the robbery after he testified that his partners had cheated him out of his share of the loot. The rest remain in prison.

Only $65,000 of the loot has been recovered.

Secretary Of NDP Resigning

OTTAWA (CP) — Feeling much older than when he took the job, Clifford Scotton will quit soon as federal secretary of the New Democratic Party to help with the labor movement.

The British-born Scotton, 42, quit as editor of the Canadian Labor Congress magazine, Canadian Labor, 3½ years ago to succeed Terence Grier as party secretary.

"I feel about 10 years older than when I started," he said Monday in his little second-floor office at party headquarters in an old downtown house. He takes more tranquilizers than he used to. His black hair is liberally flecked with grey.

He hopes to leave the party's senior administrative post Feb. 14 but the precise timing depends on the success of the party's search for a successor. "There's no way that he'll change his mind and stay," he said.

"I feel no qualms about getting out at this time," he said, confirming rumors that he planned to put Feb. 14 as his union as public relations director and legislative researcher. He is leaving it to the union to announce it officially.

Young MP To Appeal Jail Term

LONDONDERRY (Reuters) — Bernadette Devlin, fiery champion of Roman Catholic civil rights, was sentenced Monday to six months in jail for her role in riots that brought Northern Ireland to the brink of civil war.

Miss Devlin, 22, the youngest member of the British Parliament, was granted bail of £250 ($650) pending appeal. Members in the House of Commons does not protect an individual from serving court sentences. Her appeal will be heard here in February.

She was convicted on three counts of inciting to riot and one of behaving riotously.

Toronto's Bail Scheme Given Mixed Reception

TORONTO (CP) — The Metropolitan Toronto police commission's decision to allow station sergeants to free prisoners without bail in certain cases has found favor in some Ontario centres and disfavor in others.

Metro police, citing recent amendments to the Criminal Code, approved a plan last Thursday in which station sergeants might release on personal recognizance prisoners charged with indictable offences who might otherwise have to spend a night or more in jail.

At present, a person arrested at night for an indictable offence is held by police until a travelling justice of the peace arrives to make a decision on bail. But under the new system, the sergeant may decide whether the person can be trusted to appear in court on an assigned day.

For some time, the Criminal Code has included the Summary Convictions Act which applies to non-indictable offences and provincial statutes. Under this act, police sergeants have been empowered to forego bail.

In Hamilton, Deputy Chief Gerald Reed questioned Toronto's move.

"The most recent Criminal Code amendments don't give police men the authority to release a prisoner on his own recognizance," he said. "The only thing in the amendments relates to unconditional release or the intent to summons."

But Deputy Chief Reed said he agrees with the principle of the plan and hopes to review the matter with Crown Attorney Harvey McCulloch and Hamilton court officials.

Insp. Alec E. Forrester of the provincial police detachment in Porcupine said the plan might be favorable in remote areas where a justice of the peace could not be reached.

"However, there will be no change in our procedure because we will continue to bring our prisoners to a justice of the peace for protection of the officer and the prisoner in that some unbiased person should talk to the prisoner before he is released from custody," Insp. Forrester said.

In Kingston, Judge Alan Campbell, chairman of the city police commission, said there were no immediate plans there to discuss the matter but added "there is a lot to be said for it."

Peterborough officials are considering the matter, says Chief Jack Shrubb.

"We hope to institute bail bond forms before too long," he said. "This is rather a discretionary thing."

Ottawa also is considering the plan, but has made no formal move to implement it.

Trudeau Has No Plans To Get Rid of Monarchy

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said a news conference Monday the government has no plans for abolishing the monarchy in the 1970s.

But, he added, "the truth of the matter is that you can't see the future very far in this day and age."

Mr. Trudeau said he didn't think abolition of the monarchy "is in the cards now."

However, a new generation of voters in the 1970s might want a presidential form of government substituted for the monarchy.

"I wouldn't be at all surprised if there have to be changes in political institutions in the '70s . . . but what this would do to the monarchy, I wouldn't venture to predict."

The policy of the government "now and for the foreseeable future" was to retain, the monarchy, Mr. Trudeau said.

Inco Finds Production Rises Well

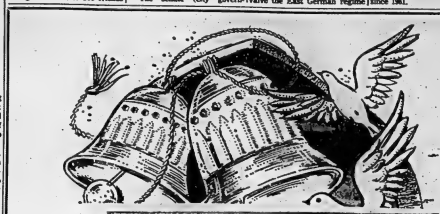
TORONTO (CP) — International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. Monday announced it expects to return to normal production levels earlier than originally had been forecast.

Inco, which was closed down by a strike from August to November, said in a statement that December production has been about 50 per cent of pre-strike levels and that normal production is expected to be reached in April.



Output at the Falconbridge mines should be restored to pre-strike levels by early February. The company has not revealed its 1969 production figures. The company produced 71,800,000 pounds in 1968 and expects to produce 110,000,000 annually by 1971.

Dear Santa Claus,

I would like to visit you at Winter Wonderland because I have never been there before. I would like to eat lunch with Lucy as long as she doesn't open her big mouth and yell at me. I am only 5 and in Kindergarten Santa, I have to cross a highway to get to the bus stop so that's why I would like the talking police car. Even more than that I would like to see you in your ice palace. See you on Christmas Eve Santa.

Darlene Prentice's Wish Comes True

Winner of the third and final trip to Christmas Wonderland picked from Santa's Intelligencer mail bag is Darlene Prentice, a seven-year-old student at Queen Victoria School.

Darlene and her parents Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Prentice of 25 Sixth Street in Belleville were the guests of The Intelligencer at Christmas Wonderland last weekend.

Frosty the Snow Man and Snoopy of Peanuts fame welcomed and greeted Darlene and her parents to Wonderland. Frosty was elected to guide Darlene on her special tour and paused only a few moments to dance, play and romp through the crowd of young admirers who flocked to his side.

Once again the visit to Santa and the Fairy Princess proved to be the most rewarding experience of the day. Darlene whispered in Santa's ear and received that once in a lifetime wish from the lovely Fairy Princess as she waved the magic wand over Darlene's golden hair.

When asked who was her favorite cartoon character Snoopy or Frosty, Darlene thought for a moment and then answered that she liked them both the same.

Christmas Wonderland, Toronto's largest, best and most exciting fairytale exhibition will be closing for another season today, allowing Santa time to return to the North Pole to commence his many visits on Christmas eve.

The winners of The Intelligencer's free trips to Christmas Wonderland were Connie Stapley, R.R. 5, Belleville; Shawney Berry, O.S.D., Belleville and Darlene Prentice of 25 Sixth St. in Belleville.

A "Special Delivery Letter" delivered by one of Santa's special elves requests that The Intelligencer wish one and all a very Merry Christmas and an extra Thank You for all those good boys and girls who took time to write Santa a letter.

Darlene's Letter

I have never been in Toronto nor have talked to Santa I would like to tell you what I would like for Christmas I hope I win the trip to Christmas Wonderland, I am seven years old. ## Lovable - - - But Oh, So Squirmy

Howard Gardiner, agent for the Humane Society, has his arms full — of cute cuddly Labrador puppies. Each puppy is creasing his paws, hoping he will have his very own home for Christmas. These young pups are a good example of the many fine pets at the shelter, just waiting to be adopted.

I Need A Home

As this sign says, here is another cat that needs a home. This is one of many "purr-fect" pets ready and waiting for a new home. The Ontario Humane Society provides shelter and care for animals until suitable homes can be found for them.

Pets Top This List For Yule

By LINDA GELDART
(Staff Reporter)

Just two more shopping days until Christmas — and those last minutes are fast ticking away.

Shoppers at a loss as to what to buy for those on their Christmas list will have to make some quick decisions — and soon.

But for those who wonder what to give that special little girl or boy, the problem is as good as solved.

Why not a pet?

A cuddly puppy or a cute kitten will make this coming Christmas day one to remember for a long time to come.

The only possible problem the buyer would encounter would be how to wrap that squirmy puppy or kitten that won't sit still.

The Ontario Humane Society may not be able to help you with the wrapping, but they can supply the pet.

At the present time, the society has 45 dogs, 15 cats, 23 sheep, four horses and two gerbles (desert rats).

Cats are priced at ($1, and dogs at $5) — a perfect Christmas gift.

"We find more homes for the animals here that at any other time of the year", said shelter supervisor, Mrs. Vivian Ethier.

When the shelter isn't helping individuals doing their Christmas shopping, it supervises animal control for the Belleville and Trenton areas, making certain that various bylaws are enforced.

"We are responsible for keeping dogs under control. If they are off their own property, they become our problem. Strays are kept for 72 hours then become available for adoption into suitable homes," said Mrs. Ethier.

Canada's Woman Athlete of Year Setting Sights on '72

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

Beverley Boys, 18-year-old diver from Pickering, Ont., is Canada's woman Athlete of the Year for 1969.

Ranked among the top four women in the world off the 10-metre tower, Miss Boys won over two West Coast athletes—Karen Magnussen in figure-skating and Debbie Brill, the back-bending high-jumper.

The poll was conducted by The Canadian Press among 130 sports writers and broadcasters across the country. Points were awarded on a 3-2-1 basis for first, second and third votes.

Miss Boys polled 56 first-place votes, 34 for second and seven for third, totalling 243 points. Miss Magnussen had 29 votes for first, 28 for second and 18 for third for 161 points. Miss Brill had 10 firsts, 14 seconds and 34 thirds for 92.

The blonde, crop-headed youngster from Pickering swept the English diving championships in Blackpool last September, taking both the springboard and tower titles.

Then, a month later, she suffered a punctured eardrum during a training session in Montreal—an injury which could have terminated her career.

"It happened on a simple dive," coach Don Webb said.

"It was a painful injury and she had to stay out of the water for two or three weeks. We couldn't take a chance on infection."

The injury healed and she won the national indoor championships in November.

Miss Boys is back in training for the British Commonwealth Games next July in Scotland, with her sights set on the 1971 Pan-American Games in Colombia and the Olympic Games in Germany in 1972.

Her next step is a Dec. 27 trip to Jamaica for a training session where Webb says, she will "learn the 3½-somersault."

"When and if she gets that one down, pat with her triple-twister with 1½ somersaults, it will give her one of the toughest programs of dives in the world."

Miss Magnussen was considered a top prospect for world skating honors this year when it was found she was suffering from a broken right leg and a stress fracture in her left leg. Recovered, she has returned to competition.

Miss Brill, termed by former Canadian National track coach John Hudson "one of the hopes for the future," goes over the high-jump bar backwards in a style reminiscent of Dick Fosbury of the United States.

The first time she saw Fosbury in action, Miss Brill exclaimed:

"Why, he jumps just like me."

The pollsters considered 22 female athletes from nearly every sport on the calendar, but none came close to the top three in the voting.

Plenty of Time For Bobby Orr

MONTREAL (CP) — With three weeks still left in the first half of the 1969-70 National Hockey League season, defenceman Bobby Orr of Boston Bruins needs only 12 assists to break the mark of 50 held by Pat Stapleton of Chicago Black Hawks.

Stapleton set the mark for defencemen last season.

Orr, who has either been ahead or tied for the scoring lead with Phil Goyette of St. Louis Blues most of the season, went five points in front last week as he scored one goal—his ninth—and picked up six assists.

Orr's splurge increased his season point total to 48, including and Frank St. Marseille of St. Louis are next with 33 points.

Bill Goldsworthy, Minnesota North Stars right winger, has 28 points. He leads the league in goals with 18—four more than he had all last season.

Tony Esposito of Chicago Black Hawks continues to lead the goaltenders with six shutouts and a 2.14 goals-against average. Esposito's six shutouts mark the most by a Chicago netminder since Glenn Hall, now with St. Louis, had seven in the 1963-64 season.

The Hawks have the best combined goals-against average at 2.27, but right behind at 2.28 is the New York combination of Ed Giacomin and Terry Sawchuk. Esposito's teammate Denis DeJordy has a 2.65 goals-against mark.

Defenceman Carol Vadnais of Oakland leads in individual penalties with 143 minutes, while the Bruins have amassed 549 minutes to lead the team totals.

Habs Suffer Another Loss

MONTREAL (CP) — Centre Henri Richard, Montreal Canadiens top point-getter this season, will be lost to the National Hockey League club for two or three weeks because of a strained bone in his left ankle.

Richard, 33 and his 15th season with the club, has 32 points on 11 goals and 21 assists in 31 games. He has been credited as the big factor in keeping Canadiens in contention during his rash of recent injuries that have hampered the defending Stanley Cup champions.

The Montrealers are in third place in the East Division with 40 points, one behind Boston Bruins and five behind New York Rangers.

Richard was injured when hit by a shot in the first period of Montreal's 5-2 defeat over the Bruins in Boston Sunday night. He contributed his 299th career goal as he played throughout the game despite the injury.

When he removed his skate the foot puffed up, and Richard left the Boston rink on crutches. X-rays taken here Monday revealed the injury.

Keith Allen tucks copy of contract in his pocket after signing as new general manager of the Philadelphia Flyers Monday afternoon in Philadelphia. Ed Snider, Flyers' board chairman who named Allen to the post, is at left.

Allen Takes Flyer Reins

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Keith Allen was named general manager of the National Hockey League's Philadelphia Flyers Monday, succeeding the recently fired Rud Poile.

Ed Snider, board chairman of the Flyers, said he signed Allen to a new contract which extends through a 1972-73 NHL season.

Snider said Allen received "a substantial salary increase," but mentioned no figures.

The 46-year-old Allen will oversee the Flyers' operation, including the farm teams. Poile was dismissed Friday for what Snider said were basic differences in policy between Poile and the club owners.

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Heavyweight boxer Cassius Clay has filed suit to obtain a permit to fight in Texas.

Clay, also known as Muhammed Ali, filed suit late Friday afternoon against Tommy V. Smith, the commissioner of the bureau of labor statistics, who regulates boxing and wrestling in Texas.

Clay's suit asks "the court to overturn Smith's order denying him a permit. The alternative, the suit asks, is to declare article 614 of the Texas penal code unconstitutional.

A section of that article states that the commissioner may deny a licence "if after an investigation applicant or applicants are found to be of questionable character . . ."

Clay's petition says that he has "maintained the highest standards of moral conduct and character" and that he is a "deeply religious person."

It states that he is "recognized" as the heavyweight champion of the world and has never been beaten.

Clay was stripped of his title by the World Boxing Association and the New York State Athletic Commission in 1967 following a charge of military draft evasion. He was subsequently convicted and an appeal now is before the United States courts.

Ashley Under NHL Gun

TORONTO (CP) — Scotty Morrison, chief of the National Hockey League referees, said Monday he would look into charges against one of his men, but he wants the league to have words with the men who made them.

Criticism of referee John Ashley was made Friday night by Jack Riley, general manager of Pittsburgh Penguins who said the official was biased in favor of Eastern Division teams.

He outlined his protest in a letter to NHL president Clarence Campbell and told sports writers how he feels.

"I haven't seen the letter," Morrison said Monday.

"I understand it went to Mr. Campbell. It should have come directly to me. Riley knows better than this."

Morrison said Riley was questioning the character, integrity and competence of his official and that he would ask the league to look into this aspect of the case.

Riley said Friday that "Ashley seems to feel there are just six teams in the league—the six in the Eastern Division—and that all the others don't belong."

"We've never defeated an East Division team when he was refereeing although we've played some very good games," Riley said.

Morrison was critical of Penguins coach Red Kelly who said his goalie, Al Smith, "was tired after he had that fight with Terry Harper or J. C. Tremblay wouldn't have scored that go-a-head goal."

Kelly was referring to Pittsburgh's 5-2 loss to Montreal Canadiens a week ago.

"He can't fight with 40 pounds of equipment on him, not without tiring," Kelly said.

Morrison was scornful of the comment.

"How is that Ashley's fault?" he asked. "The fight was in front of the Montreal goal and Smith had to skate the length of the ice to get into it."

Minneapolis Group Throws Costly Hat Into NHL Ring

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tom Scallen of the Medical Investment Corp. of Minneapolis (Medicor) signed the final document Monday which gave his corporation majority ownership of Vancouver Canucks and the financing required to pay the National Hockey League's $6,000,000 expansion price tag.

With the signature, Medicor fell heir in Vancouver's Western Hockey League franchise and Rochester's American Hockey League franchise and gained title to 81 professional hockey players.

The NHL requires a down payment of $1,750,000 on or before Feb. 15, 1970.

Mr. Scallen said Medicor has already turned over some of the money to the NHL.

On the hiring of staff, Mr. Scallen said obviously Joe Crozier, the Canucks current coach and general manager, is a candidate.

"The fact the team is in first place indicates he's a strong candidate. We will talk to Punch Imlach and several other qualified men.

"We want to come up with th best possible combination for all the jobs that are available. We have made no judgment on anyone."

Seals Could Get New Trainers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

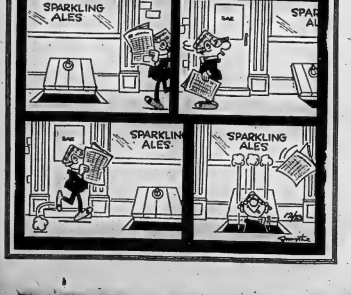
A merger, expected to be announced shortly in the United States, could result in new ownership for Oakland Seals of the National Hockey League.

Clarence Campbell, president of the NHL, said Monday "there should be a joint announcement concerning a merger, coming out of New York shortly."

The proposed merger is between Seals owners Trans-National Communications and Cincom Corp. of New York.

Trans-National assumed control of the Seals last spring in alliance with Northrup and Seymour Knox of Buffalo. However, the Knox brothers recently were awarded an NHL franchise for their city and now must divest themselves of their Oakland interests.

No deadline has been set. Campbell said, but added that one will be established when the situation becomes more stable.



The proposed merger calls for an exchange of four shares of TNC for four shares of Cincom, a company which owns 80 movie theatres, two film distributing companies and a graphic arts firm.

TNC owns the Seals, the Boston Celtics basketball team and radio network rights to New York Jets and Giants football games.

Marathon Unks' Debate Concludes--as Usual--Unresolved

By GEORGE H. CARVER

Muskmouth Reports:

Dear Ex-Boss: A Merry Christmas and may Odd St. Nick find no gaping holes in the bottom of the stocking.

The Unks held their pre-holiday reunion with Unk Bill McShake, the bard of Zwick's Island holding forth with his annual holiday bocey doggerel.

Seems the Unk visited Bennyy's watering place and left the downtown oasis loaded with material (doggerel, that is) and here's what he came up with:

* * *

(With apologies to MacNamara's Band)

Och, me name is Pat O'Meara, I'm a member of the band.
That frequents Benny's Hideaway, the foinest in the land.
They gather here from far and near, accordin' to reports,
To give and take and jibe and quake anent the realm of sports.

* * *

Now take the case of me, meself, despite the raucous squawks
Of those who disagree with me, me' fav'rites are the Hawks,
They started from the down and down, but now they're on the up,
And when Santa fills their stocking he'll include the Stanley Cup.

* * *

But Art the Pond'rous Peever with a loud and shrilly whoop
"Forget ye not, mesdames, messieurs, the land of hot pea soup,
Of Belleveau and Cournyeas, of Duffs, Richards, Vachon
They'll take it in their stride again — (gurdoner if I yawn)."

* * *

Then up spake brave Horatious, he's the Gawge of Lannon Town,
Hope shone in his defiant eyes, and through a facial frown,
God Bless our Punchless Maple Leafs — I'm open for a bet
That Hogtown's gallant puckvrous will make the playoffs yet."

* * *

O'Hill nudged O'Mooney who in turn nudged O'McGee,
They chorused "There is none so blind as those who will not see.
Hornblower's in the doldrums — and there's lots who share his griefs
And they'll all be in attendance at the funeral of the Leafs."

* * *

A stranger sitting near the door, looked at his watch as if to be a tardy visitor,
"I hail from deah old Bawdon and sighed
ston where the Bruins do abide,
"We've planned the big reception where we'll eat and quaff and sup
And drink the health of losers from the ancient Stanley Cup."

* * *

A well-dressed youth, who looked, forsooth, like Gordie am at its best,
Politely spoke and said:
"You joke, with all your zeal and zest,
As you sip and sit, you must admit, however hard he tries,
The hoary Stanley peever ware goes to the Brandway Blues."

* * *

Then Mack, the Jolly Taxman, stood his ground, and said "Lest to me,
House 'bout the new expansion clubs that stretch from sea to sea.
A guy can dream but it would seem, if predictions they do bust,
Twould be the greatest upset since Goliath bit the dust."

* * *

And so, far on into the night the arguments went on.
They quaffed said quipped and sighed and sipped until the crack o'dawn.
But forgot not they, the holiday and their wish rang through the hall,
"A MERRY CHRISTMAS, GLAD NEW YEAR, to sportsmen one and all."

Junior B Togetherness

Golden Hawk Backer Favors 'Combines' Scheme

By ELMER BONTER

TRENTON — It's that time of the year when the fans who expect their team to win every game badger management with the questions, "Are we going to be in the playoffs? What are our chances of landing the Junior B championship?

The sponsors of Peterborough, Oshawa and Kingston in the six - team Eastern Ontario League can usually answer in the affirmative to both queries - but Trenton, Belleville and Cobourg management will never enjoy an optimistic viewpoint until respective clubs representing smaller centres have comparative population areas to draw talent from.

Mike Mason, president of the ten - shareholder sports enterprise backing the Trenton Golden Hawks was definite on this point and other observations he voiced with concern about the future of Junior B hockey in the Quinte region.

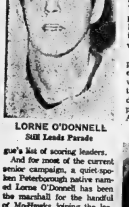
Mason, the hard - driving executive of a large transport operation in the area, believes junior club sponsors in the Trenton, Belleville centres in particular should stop kidding themselves. The possibility of either landing the title on their own under the circumstances would constitute the ninth wonder of the world, he maintains.

Join forces and then you'll notice the improvement he advocated in outlining his proposal to bring greater things in hockey to Quinte.

"I've recommended a merger between the Trenton and Belleville clubs to my partners as the logical means of going places rather than continue in limbo. Call the team Quinte Combines or whatever you like with the base of operation at Belleville if city supporters showed more interest in Junior B than Trenton people."

"Here in Trenton, however, the fans fill the Gardens for good minor hockey action year after year. I'd give odds a better than average junior B aggregation would pack the house for every home game.

"Our Hawks pulled in 750 customers early this season after a few wins. That was only half of the arena's capacity but it was a tremendous financial success in contrast to the handful who follow them through blind loyalty when their luck is down.



"I'm convinced Belleville's hockey crowd has been completely sold on Senior A brand of play while the Trenton fans direct most attention to minor teams. There needs to be a careful study of this aspect before the home of any combined team could be decided."

Mason says the longer he looks at the set up he prefers the better he likes it. When the Junior B team representing Quinte is able to call on reserves from a population of 50,000 or more, serious opposition can be provided for city based competitors, he contends.

Only Two Points Interest Mo-Hawks Against Aces

Something Belleville Mo-Hawks have had to get used to this year is seeing the names of some members of their roster in the OHA Senior A league's list of scoring leaders.

And for most of the current senior campaign, a quiet-spoken Peterborough native named Lorne O'Donnell has been the marshall for the handful of Mo-Hawks joining the league's scoring parades.

Going into tonight's 8.30 Memorial Arena game against Kingston Aces, O'Donnell continues to pace the club's point-getters with 13 goals and 10 assists in 22 games.

Rated by coach Davey Jones as possibly the Mo-Hawks' best two-way player, O'Donnell has not only been an effective penalty - killer and defensive sparkplug of the potent Godson - Ferguson - O'Donnell "Bread-and-Butter" line, but has also emerged as an offensive force to be reckoned with.

One of O'Donnell's specialties is power-play point - getting.

He picked up power - play goals in the Mo-Hawks 4 - 2 home win Friday night over Galt and in the 3-2 road win Sunday in Owen Sound.

Centre George Godson collected three points Friday night to keep close behind linemate O'Donnell at 22 points. Godson's 49 points paced the locals last season.

O'Donnell's scoring success should come as no surprise. The left-winger picked up 18 points, 10 of them goals, in the 17 games he played after signing with the Mo-Hawks last winter.

Tonight, however, the only points the Mo-Hawks are interested in are the two they would get from beating Kingston that would give them undisputed possession of third place in the eight-team Senior A grouping.

Not Many Scoring Presents For Quinte League Christmas

The Christmas rush must be around the scoring strength of Quinte Hockey League players.

Last night's Yuletide week action saw a mere three goals scored.

That was enough, however, to alter the standings in the four - team league.

A well - played 1-1 stalemate between Belleview Hotel and Central Taxi kept the two clubs in a first - place tie.

Terry Casselman gave the Cabbies first blood on Andy Prudden's goal. Doug Dunn gave Belvedere the point split in the last half of the game, with assists on the scoring goal going to Doug Moreau and Don Moore.

Whatever the Blake Kerr Imperial midgets have forfeited, they should hotfoot and sell to the other city all - star hockey teams.

After a dismal season's start, the Belleville midget all-stars have now been unbeaten in their last seven starts, the latest success being a 7-1 win over Picton last night.

Brian Cousins paced the Imperials with a pair of goals. Singles came from Robbie Foster, Phil Kirby, Rick Meagher, Cliff Jasitsch and Dave Horwood.

The Imperials hope to continue their winning ways in a pair of upcoming weekend tournaments.

Marysville Moves

Marysville got a Gas House Hockey League Christmas present last night when tiffy vacated the four - team league basement with a 3-2 win over Mulroney's.

Harold Wayne and Larry Pascoe scored for Marysville, with Ted Ford and Stan Woodcock replying for Mulroney's, who now replace Marysville in the Gas House cellar.

Ted Schwager's unassisted goal at the 14 - minute mark gave the Downtown Merchants a 1-0 win over the second - place Mustangs and kept the Merchants well out in front of the Gas House League pack.

Namath's Knees Out of Danger For This Season

NEW YORK — (AP) — Joe Namath, quarterback of the New York Jets football team, said yesterday there is an 80 per cent chance he will undergo another operation on his fragile knees.

Discussing future plans on his weekly television show to be aired later in the week, Namath said:

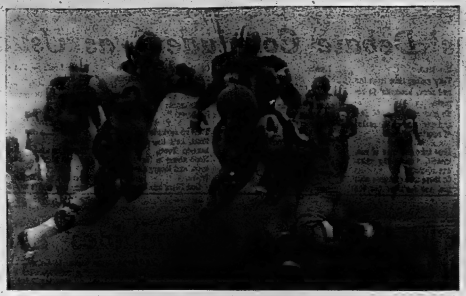
"I will play next year, maybe."

Then he raised the question of another knee operation. Pointing to the 1970 season, he said: "We will have to be better."

Namath, who had hinted earlier that the 1969 American Football League season would be his last, had a change of mind following the Jets' 12-7 loss to Kansas City Saturday.

"I hope it's not my last game" the despondent New York quarterback said after taking a brutal physical pounding from the Chiefs' defenders and failing to put a touchdown on the board for the dethroned Super Bowl champs.

Namath, whose surgery-scarred knees have endured five painful seasons in the AFL, will consult with Dr. James Nicholas, the club physician, on the advisability of still another operation.



"I don't like the idea of not having a chance to play if I want to," Namath said.

The shaggy-haired passer who has several business interests and a syndicated television show going for him outside football, said last fall he would call it quits if his knee problems worsened.

But he indicated he would like another crack at the AFL title when New York Mayor John Lindsay tried to console him after Saturday's setback.

"Don't be dejected," Lindsay said. "You'll get them next year."

"Yeah," Namath replied, "but there's a long time to wait. It's going to be a long winter for me."

Those Were the Haze

Strangest Grey Cup game of all time was played at Toronto in 1962 as heavy fog turned it into a two-day affair for the first time. Here Leo Lewis of Winnipeg Blue Bombers scrambles through haze for 16-yard gain as Hamilton's John Barrow (61) and Tim Reid (24) move in to tackle him. Winnipeg won 28-27.

Soccer Referees Raise Ante

TORONTO (CP) — Soccer referees in Ontario want more money for their services in 1970.

Ontario Soccer Referees Association members approved a motion Monday calling for a $1-game increase for minor matches. Minimum fee in 1969 was $7 a game. They also plan to ask for a pay increase to $30 from $25 for major games.

The association works games in all Ontario leagues and associations, except the National Soccer League, which affiliates directly with the Ontario Soccer Association.

Weather A Factor

Rams Prepared for Worst

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Rams fly to Minnesota today and from the looks of their baggage it appears they are off to meet the Abdominable Snowman instead of the Vikings.

The Rams and Minnesota collided Saturday in the Western Conference playoff of the National Football League, and the heroes from sunny California are prepared for the worst in weather.

Rams' equipment manager Dan Hewitt spent a busy day Monday getting all the gear ready for shipment.

"Yes, we had to go out and buy a lot of special things apart from the usual cold weather gear," Hewitt said. "It cost money but, with something like this game at stake, coach George Allen wants the best."

Items not generally on the club's budget are four different types of shoes. One is the kind worn by kids playing broomball on ice in Canada. Another has small suction cups on the soles, still another "ripple soles," all designed for frozen fields.

Then there are hand warmers, foot warmers and back-seat warmers.

There are different type of gloves for ball-handlers and the linemen, arm bands that regulate blood circulation and help keep hands warm, and plastic covering to wear inside or outside the sock.

Hewitt said no one would be silly enough not to wear his thermal underwear.

Canada Not Taking Any Chances

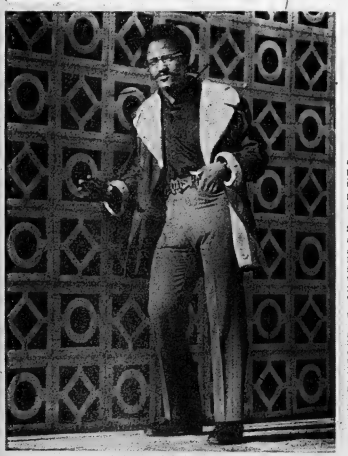
MONTREAL (CP) — Canada intends to enter skiing, bobsled, luge, hockey and figure skating events at the second annual Kennedy International Memorial Winter Games at Lake Placid, N.Y., Jan. 9—March 15.



Organizers announced the schedule for the games at a news conference here Monday. All events will be held on weekends.

The Kennedy games was founded a year ago as an interim "winter Olympics" to be held in non-Olympic years. Lake Placid was selected as the site for the first three-year series.

Official opening ceremonies will be held in Jan. 10, a day after the international cross-country ski competition which will feature entries from Norway and Sweden as well as Canada and the U.S.

International ski jumping will be held Jan. 11 with competitors from Canada, the U.S., Germany, Norway and Japan. The Japanese competitors will be Seiji Aochi and Akitsugu Konno, both of Sapporo.

The hockey championships will be held Feb. 13-15. Canada is defending champion. An all-star Eastern Ontario team from Cobourg last year won in a tournament with Sweden, Czechoslovakia and the U.S.

Bets Getting Better

MONTREAL (CP) — Despite a shortened schedule this year, bettors attending Montreal's two race tracks wagered more per capita than they did during a long 1968 program.

The 1969 schedule ended here Sunday after the standardbreds and thoroughbreds had been in action 243 days. The schedule had originally called for 266 racing days, but a strike by the trainers and drivers early in the year curtailed the harness dates.

Of the 243 days, 56 belonged to the thoroughbreds.

A total of $133,535,406 was wagered this year compared with $139,645,916 last season. The average daily wager was $549,526 this year or $58.03 per patron. In 1968 the average daily amount was $524,561 or $55.33 for each bettor.

Attendance this year totalled 2,300,997, a drop from the 1968 figure of 2,520,955. The daily average crowd this year was 9,465, while in 1968 it was 9,477.

Purses this year totalled $5,294,525 compared with $5,312,099 in 1968.

Thirty-nine days of harness racing were held at Richelieu raceway, with the remainder and the thoroughbred meet held at Blue Bonnets.

Harness racing resumes at Blue Bonnets Jan. 7.

Robinson Crusoe Dropped Because Of Racial Factor

WINDSOR, England (CP) — A theatre director who feels Britain is in a mood of "racial tension" has dropped Robinson Crusoe as the annual pantomime production because the characters of Man Friday and the cannibals might offend black members of the audience.

Following the case of the Scottish doctor who was brought before the government's race relations board for advertising for a Scottish cook to prepare his porridge—thereby presumably discriminating against Welsh, Italian or Irish cooks—the pantomime incident seems to strike a note of near-farce.

But Mary Council, co-director of the Theatre Royal, Windsor, which the Queen often visits when she is in residence at Windsor Castle, is serious about the decision to scrap Crusoe and substitute the innocuous Babes in the Wood.

"When I came up with the script, I realized it could not be done in the present mood of racial tension," she said. "One cannot get away from Man Friday being presented as a gormless idiot refugee from a cannibal tribe, because he provides all the comedy."

Mrs. Counsell, who runs the historic old theatre with her husband John, added that the comic cannibal scenes "could upset our colored customers."

I cannot see Crusoe being staged again for years—if ever. The last time we did it was nine years ago, but things were different then."

John Counsell, 54, said the pantomime, based on the famous desert island classic of Daniel Defoe, "could have caused—at best—feelings of unease among our audience."

Jean Mellors, Windsor's community relations officer, said she thought much would have depended on the way the pantomime was presented, but Crusoe was "probably better left alone for a while."

Marmora Plans Park Along Crowe River

MARMORA — Members of Marmora Village Council, and Messrs. James McChesney and James Cook, met recently with Mr. James Knox, President of Mitchell Associates, Ltd., and his assistant, Michael Finch, of Brampton, to discuss the development of a new approved park in Marmora. Site of the park will be on the east side of Crowe River, north of highway 7, extending to the northern village limits.

Table size aerial photos, drawings to scale, and three suggested plans were presented by Mr. Knox for development of the park over a period of years. Attention will be given to historical features of the area where practical.

The area from the dam south to the bridge at highway 7 will be filled and landscaped with playground and picnic facilities. Footbridges will be installed to join the small islands near the dam.

North of the dam to the Village limits will be developed for camping and boating with portage area developed to provide accessibility to canoists of upper and lower river. A footbridge under the present bridge on highway 7 will link the Village Park and the present Canadian Legion Park.

The planners suggested that an added feature could be the relocation of the old Catholic Church historical site on the west side of the river.

The closing of the road between Madoc Street and the present pumphouse with no vehicles allowed in this area, parking to be south of Madoc Street along the old CNR right of way, was another suggestion of the planners.

At the development of the park progresses, owners of boathouses and buildings on the property will be notified that they must be removed.

It was suggested that volunteer help might be used in the park development with man hours charged which would be compensated by an additional grant, which in turn, would further develop the park while keeping the mill rate at a minimum.

Members of Village Council were commended by Mr. Knox for their foresight in acquiring this property for this purpose, who added that a park of this nature will be a valuable asset in the development of the tourist industry as well as an attraction in the future industrial development of the community of Marmora.

Reeve William Shannon has announced that Clarke Rutland, MPP for Hastings, has arranged for a meeting of members of the Council, officials and chairman of the Ontario Water Resources Commission, Don Collins, of Marmora, on January 7, at which time sewage lagoon installation in the Village will be discussed.

The appointment of Bert Gray has been made to the Council, to replace Bill McCaw who has moved from the Village.

Manson Still Wants To Defend Himself

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Charles M. Manson insists he wants to defend himself from charges of murdering actress Sharon Tate and six others, saying he can do it better than any lawyer.

The long-haired, bearded cult leader, in purple shirt and gold trousers, spent 30 minutes Monday trying to convince Superior Court Judge William B. Keene he should be permitted to act as his own counsel.

The judge, apparently unconvinced, postponed his decision until Wednesday. Meanwhile, Keene said, he would appoint a lawyer to advise Manson.

Manson, 35, agreed, saying: "I don't want to fight with the judge. I believe he's sincere."

The cult leader and four followers are accused of the Tate killings Aug. 8, and the same five plus a girl codefendant charged with killing a Los Angeles market owner and his wife the following night.

"My life is at stake and maybe the lives of four or five other people," Manson told the court. "There is no lawyer in the world who will represent me. The news media have already executed and buried me."

Two of Manson's co-defendants also made brief appearances before the court. Leslie Van Houten, 19, who is charged with murder in only the knife slayings of Mr. and Mrs. Leno La Bianca the night after the Tate killings, pleaded not guilty. Her trial was set for Feb. 1.

Linda Kasabian, 20, charged in both sets of slayings, sat silent while her trial was postponed a delay until Jan. 6 in entering her plea. The lawyer said he needed more time to study the grand jury indictment.

Also under indictment in both the Tate and LaBianca killings are Susan Atkins, 19, whose trial has been set for Feb. 9; Charles Watson, 23, held as McKinney, Tex.; and Patricia Krenwinkel, 22, under arrest at Mobile, Ala.

ABC 'The Survivors' Failed to Last Long In Spite of Publicity

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Why didn't The Survivors survive?

"It went down the drain, baby!" says novelist Harold Robbins, author of The Carpetbaggers, The Adventurers, and others, who imported to have received between $500,000 and $1,000,000 for a 105-page concept for the loudly-trumpeted fall television series.

"They turned it into a talk show like Peyton Place," Robbins said. "Mine was an action story."

ABC-TV proudly launched the series Sept. 29 as part of a new but doomed challenged to the competitive Tuesday Movie-Monday night lineup including CBS' Gunsmoke and NBC's Laugh-In.

The soap-opera debut for both Lana Turner and George Hamilton and also starred Kevin McCarthy, Ralph Bellamy and Michael Vincent.

Universal Studios, where 15 of a projected 25 episodes were produced—the last will be seen Jan. 13—proclaimed it as "a story about people who are rich, colorful and exciting, the kind of people each of us would like to be . . . the jet set super-rich who seek sensation and whose words and actions made headlines wherever they go."

Producer Walter Doniger says: "The shows probably had more advance publicity than any show in the history of television. But nobody seemed interested in turning it on.

"No one seemed interested in the problems of people with all the money in the world. We tried to give them characters that the audience could identify with. But the magic was missing.

The characters were a smart-ass snappish crew that no one could identify with, except the crusty, domineering head of a family empire and father of Miss Turner and Hamilton. McCarthy was Miss Turner's husband, tough and grim, and Vincent her teen-aged son, loose and rebellious. Lana was seen as a cut-throat schemer, Hamilton a conniver.

Immediately opposite CBS's Mayberry RFD and Doris Day's dress, and NBC's Monday night movie the Survivors got only 22 per cent of the audience in the Nielsen rating of its first show. With the Survivors and star names, backers had hoped for at least 40 per cent. Succeeding episodes fared no better than the first.

Informed parties say the venture coast ABC about $2,000,000, which $1,000,000 could be recovered in sponsor's fees.

Meanwhile, ABC is pinning its hopes on a new series, Paris 7000, starring Hamilton. In the new format Hamilton will be a member of an Interpol agency in Paris, helping Americans in dire predicaments. The first show will be seen Jan. 22.

DRUG—USE DETECTION

SAANICH, B.C. (CP) — Drug symptom charts sent out with the water bills this fall have brought a "fantastic response," says Police Chief W. A. Pearson of this Victoria-area municipality. The charts were sent out by police to aid parents in detecting drug use among their children.

Mail Truck Blown Apart But Driver Escapes with Life

MONTREAL' (CP) — A bomb Monday ripped apart a mail truck while its driver was making a pickup, peeling the body from the vehicle and lightly injuring the nearby postal worker.

Michel Villemaire, 26, suffered minor facial cuts and small burns. He was treated at hospital and released.

Villemaire was returning to the truck after collecting mail from a curbside mail box when the bomb exploded.

Sgt. Andre Boutin of Montreal police said Villemaire "certainly would have been killed if he had been in the truck when it went off."

The officer estimated that the bomb, apparently in a parcel Villemaire had picked up earlier in his rounds, "was probably equal to only one or two sticks of dynamite."

But, exploding somewhere at the rear of the van, it tore the metal body apart and scattered its load of mail. An undetermined amount of mail was lost.

The explosion just before 6 p.m. was at the east-end intersection of Pie IX and Mont Royal.

The act bomb a the 'rea west of Dec. 8 at the home of Mario Barone, a leader of the Italian community in suburban St. Leonard. It was the third bombing at Mr. Barone's home in five years.

There have been five bombings in Montreal since September, including:

—The home of Mayor Jean Drapeau Sept. 29 when an explosion tore a gaping hole in the rear of the house;

—A second explosion Nov. 29 causing $100,000 damage to the west end Loyola College;

—A bombing at McGill University Nov. 30 which caused an estimated $2,000 damage, and —The second bombing this year at Mr. Barone's home Dec. 8, resulting in broken windows and some dislodged bricks.

No one was injured in any of these bombings, although both Mr. Drapeau and Mr. Barone's home were occupied when the attacks occurred. There were 500 night students in class when a bomb exploded at Loyola.

Mr. Morrison, who died Saturday at 78, worked mostly on the Prairie circuit and continued his interest in the sport after he quit training in 1955.

Born in Wardsville, Ont., he came to the Hand Hills area of Alberta in 1910. Three years later he moved to Airdrie and in 1940 came to Calgary.

He is survived by two brothers in Ontario and several nieces.

NBC Claims TV Superiority

NEW YORK (AP) — Network television programming may have improved a little, disappointing and disconcerting Monday night.

CBS pre-empted its most popular program, Gunsmoke, to rerun a children's hour original-ly broadcast in the daytime less than 10 days ago, and followed it later with a repeat of a Carol Burnett Show. NBC repeated a two year-old Laugh-In whose topical gags showed its age.

Tonight there will be a Red Skelton rerun on CBS, and NBC's Julia will have a night off so that the often-repeated 1954 film, White Christmas, can run its full 2½ hours. On Wednesday, NBC's repeated an CBS's Medical Center and ABC's Flying Nun wil be twice-told tales.

On Christmas night, ABC's Bewitched and NBC's Dragnet and Dean Martin Show all will be reruns. On Friday, NBC's a The Name of the Game will be a repeat.

The cause of this epidemic of reruns is, that the people who view the viewers are taking the week off. Monday through next Sunday is what the industry calls a "dark week"—one of the two during the year in which a the A. C. Nielsen research organization skips those rating services which are projections of audience sizes based on program choices by a sample.

The A. C. Nielsen, television's most important tape-measure, are used by networks, advertising agencies and sponsors in evaluating programs.

But even when Nielsen is taking a week off, the networks' year-round game of one-upman-ship is played as fiercely as ever. NBC called a news conference Monday so that its president for audience measurement, Paul Klein, could state the network's claim of winning what he called "the first season."

Klein asserted that NBC, between the September start and Dec. 14, before the networks started mid-season replacements and reshuffling schedules, had won a narrow victory — less than one per cent-over CBS in the average rating. A spokesman for CBS insisted there is no such thing as a first season and predicted that the network would win the full 26-week race as it claimed to have done last year.

Using Nielsen statistics and projections, Klein said that on any Winter's night the television audience consists of 35 per cent of the population of the continental United States — about 70,000,000 people, of whom 60,000,000 are tuned to one of the three major networks.

Medicor in NHL Business

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Ownership, a new manager, criticism of a referee and loss of a key player—these made up the mixture of news around the National Hockey League circuit Monday.

At Vancouver, Tom Scallen of the Medical Investment Group of Minneapolis (Medicor) signed the final document which gave his company majority ownership of Vancouver Canucks and the right to provide the financing required to pay the NHL $6,000,000 expansion price tag.

Thus Medicor fell heir to Vancouver's Western Hockey League franchise, Rochester's American Hockey League franchise and gained title to 51 per cent of professional hockey players.

At Philadelphia Keith Allen, 46, was named general manager of the NHL's Philadelphia Flyers, succeeding the recently-fired Bud Poile.

Ed Snider, Flyersboard chairman, said the Saskatoon native received "a substantial salary increase," but mentioned no figures, in a contract which extends through the 1972-63 season.

Allen had been a vice-president and assistant general manager.

Scotty Morrison, NHL chief referee, said at Toronto he will look into charges against one of his men by Jack Riley, general manager of Pittsburgh Penguins.

Riley said referee John Ashley was biased in favor of East-Division teams.

A key player was lost to Montreal Canadiens with the announcement that Henri Richard will be out for two or three weeks because of a cracked bone in his left ankle.

Richard, 33, suffered the injury when hit by a shot in the first period of Montreal's 5-2 win over Boston Bruins Saturday night.

There is one NHL game tonight—Minnesota at St. Louis.

Nigerian Offensive Launched

OWERRI, Biafra (AP) — Nigerian forces have launched a four-pronged attack on secessionist Biafra following the abortive Addis Ababa peace talks.

The thrust comes from the Nigerian 3rd Division based at Aba, which fell to the federal side a year ago.

Biafran officials said here three hard-hitting assaults on both sides and the Nigerian offensive was supported by heavy artillery, rockets, armored vehicles and the air force.

The Nigerians apparently are trying to link up their forces in Aba with those in Ikotekpene, 50 miles to the south side of Biafra's ran territory.

Biafran officials admit the Nigerians have made some gains but say a counter-attack checked the advance.

Biafran military sources claim they have also thwarted an attempted federal advance from Onitsha, which the Nigerians captured two years ago, and that the Nigerian apparently have abandoned their attempts to retake Owerri after repeated counter-attacks by the Biafrans.

Four Alternatives Outlined

Urban Problems Spread East To Cover Oshawa-Whitby Area

TORONTO (CP) — The Oshawa-Pickering-Whitby area east of Toronto will soon face rapid urbanization and such problems as traffic congestion, air pollution and poor land use, a provincial-municipal study commission said Monday.

The commission, which spent three months on the preliminary study project, said there was an urgent need for a 30-year development plan and regional government structure for the 445-square-mile area.

Proposals for a régional government will be completed in July and a recommended urban development plan prepared by 1972. Public hearings will be held in the spring of 1970.

Included in the study were the townships of Pickering, Whitby, East Whitby, Darlington and Clarke and the municipalities of Whitby, Bowmanville, Orono, Newcastle, Ajax, Pickering and Claremont.

The study concluded that there would be problems whether Metropolitan Toronto expands or not.

Toronto's problem was that if it were not allowed to expand, adjacent regions could adopt policies in their own interest that could prove detrimental to the whole area.

The Metropolitan Toronto housing problem could not be impossible to solve if neighboring areas were not prepared to play a large-scale supportive role, providing housing for Metro workers.

But Metro's own self interest, the study said, might not always coincide with what is best for the whole of southern Ontario, preventing the implementation of a more rational development pattern for the area.

Four alternatives for regional government were proposed:

—A small area which would include Whitby and Oshawa with the west half of Darlington Township and a large section of East Whitby Township. The study assumed Pickering Township would become part of Metro Toronto;

—A medium-size region which would include all of Pickering Township with the exception of the West Rouge area—which would be added to the Toronto borough of Scarborough—and Whitby, East Whitby, Oshawa, Bowmanville and Darlington Township; —A large region which would include all of Pickering except the Rouge River, Petticoat Creek and Frenchman's Bay watersheds. The area would include the townships of Uxbridge, Scott, Reach, Scugog, Brock, Cartwright and Mariposa with the town of Uxbridge, the villages of Cannington, Port Perry and Woodville and Oshawa, Whitby and Bowmanville.

—A region which would include the entire 445-square-mile area of Oshawa, Whitby and Pickering, all of Ontario County, the western row of townships from Victoria County and the township of Cartwright.

Also offered by the report are four patterns for future urban development. They are:

—The Lakeshore corridor, which would concentrate development in the south part of Pickering and around Bowmanville;

—Central City, formed by concentrating urban growth on Oshawa and Whitby;

—New City, an urban centre either in North Pickering Township or around Bowmanville;

—Cellular Centres, a concept under which a number of individual communities would be established, each with a population ranging from 50,000 to 150,000.

The report says future urban areas should be linked to Lake Ontario, the only proved source of a large water supply. Extension of water and sewage facilities to urban centres further inland would be 20 per cent more costly.

If Man Were Smaller He'd Require Less Room

NEW YORK (AP) — Perhaps man should be smaller, so he wouldn't take up so much space on earth.

Perhaps he could have chlorophyll under his skin, so he can perform photosynthesis, like plants do.

Or perhaps he could use an additional heart chamber.

These suggestions come from a group of leading scientists who were asked what change they would make in the human body that might be useful at this point in history.

The answers appear in an article titled Man Revised, in The Sciences, a publication of The New York Academy of Sciences, the magazine had asked the questions.

Here are some of the answers:

Dr. Charles H. Townes, Nobel Prize winner and physicist, University of California at Berkeley: Man should be smaller in size, and have a much longer life cycle.

"In the past, man's size needed to be reasonably large so that he could exert the physical force necessary to do work and fight enemies. The application of technology and the development of tools has completely changed this."

Dr. Dominic Recaldin, London University: "We should take a lesson from self-sufficiency from plants and learn the art of photosynthesis before our greedy teeth pick the planet clean."

Photosynthesis is the process by which plants can convert sunlight into chemical energy such as sugar and protein.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

By Peter J. Steincrohn, M.D., F.A.C.P.
Author of "The Doctor Looks At Life"

Once Useful Tool, 'Speed' Now Feared

There is a generation gap. Consider "speed." To the elderly person it signifies "going like 60." To the youngster it means reference to the amphetamine pill.

Eight to 10 billion of these pills are manufactured by ethical drug firms yearly — and many more are produced and distributed in black market. It has become a national problem. But like anything else (accidents or illness) it is overlooked until it hits home.

* * *

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: My 19-year-old son is a victim of "speed." It all began innocently enough. He took a few pills to stay awake while studying for exams in college. Next thing was joining a bunch of students who began taking it for kicks.

He used to say, "It isn't like taking heroin, mother. Why get all excited?" He was soon taking the amphetamine by hypodermic. And after awhile he became nervous, agitated and confused. He lost weight and sleep. One time he attempted suicide. Thank God that psychiatric care in an institution has straightened him out.

He is one of the lucky ones. My only purpose in writing is to alert parents of children who are for "no apparent reason" beginning to act peculiar. It may be drugs, "speed" or some other bad habit. — Mrs. D.

Comment: Not too many years ago amphetamine was an apparently harmless (and very helpful) addition to our therapeutic armamentarium. It helped truck drivers keep awake on long, tedious, night journeys. It helped an occasional student study for exams. It helped obese persons by curtailing their appetite. It was a convenient crutch to lean on after having a bad night and needing to stay awake for the next day's work.

However, in recent years it has become a national health problem. According to some physicians, except for using it in hyperkinetic children with poor social adjustment, and in patients who suffer from narcolepsy, it should be banned. They say it is a much larger drug problem than heroin.

* * *

Dr. Bess Sheppard of Miami Florida, a former juvenile judge and now supervisor of drug addiction clinics has said "I would be in favor of banning amphetamines completely. It's going to be difficult to treat the speed freak as it is the heroin addict. We're focusing too much attention on heroin addicts and forgetting that younger people are using other stuff." He said that abuse of the amphetamines has been occurring as early as the fifth and sixth grades.

Many physicians agree; but many disagree that its manufacture should be discontinued. Personally, I agree with Dr. Sheppard, whom I have never met but have long admired for his good sense and unselfish efforts in behalf of youngsters — whatever their difficulties.

But when I think of how prohibition of alcohol failed, I wonder about the evils of a black market that would be spawned in amphetamines. I don't know the answer; I am thankful there are physicians like Dr. Ben Sheppard who continue to fight until those of us who are apathetic wake up to the seriousness of the problem of "speed."

Strictly Personal

Starved Cannot Learn

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The lovely state of Maine has fewer than one million inhabitants. What do you suppose would happen to that state if we took all the 30 million poor people of the United States, crammed them into that state, and gave each person a daily food ration of a handful of rice?

This is precisely the condition in the Indian state of West Bengal, as pointed out by Dr. N. J. Berrill, the biologist, in his book, "The Person in the Womb."

These millions of young children are suffering from "protein starvation." It has been estimated that between 30 and 40 per cent of the children of India have suffered permanent brain damage by the time they reach school age, because of protein deficiency.

As the former food minister of India told the Committee on the World Food Crisis not long ago, "The problem that we are in, effect, producing subhuman beings at the rate of 25 million a year. By the time they reach school age, they are unable to concentrate sufficiently to absorb and retain knowledge . . . the millions of rupees spent on new school buildings and facilities have been wasted."

Meanwhile, as Dr. Berrill goes on to say, we are increasing the world's population by 180,000 persons per day. Eighty per cent of the world's people consist of the colored races, who are far poorer than we — and their rate of increase greatly outstrips the rest of us.

Moreover, while there are fewer than a billion people in the richer countries of the northern hemisphere, there are more than two billion in the poorer southern countries.

And the average wealth is 15 times as great in the rich areas as in the poor, with the gap widening steadily year by us.

Every child born in the U.S. uses eight times the amount of our natural resources as a child born in an underdeveloped country. Americans, with only six per cent of the world's population, already consume more than half of world's annual production of nonrenewable resources. And this discrepancy is getting larger, not smaller.

Yet the U.S. congressional committee on foreign affairs last month recommended slashing $465 million from the foreign aid bill that was already the lowest on record. This was all for "economic assistance," not for military aid, which was not cut. Americans give less than one-half of one percent of their gross national product to foreign aid — and most of this are loans at substantial interest rates. As we get richer, we get stingier, and dumber.

Jeane Dixon's Horoscope

For December 24

Your birthday today: Your coming year is, in many subtle ways, a transition period in your life. You must achieve a philosophic perspective on both your own affairs and the nature of your society. Vocationally, there is much potential advantage from sidelines, extra jobs, or hobbies which have a commercial "feasibility. Sentimental attachments will be delicate for a long time, and are not to be treated roughly.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Everything goes reasonably well with just a little relaxation on your part, although you must attend to many extra details.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Plan what you want to shop, and go directly to it. Travel and transit conditions are not up to normal, and shopping is upset by crowds doing last - minute buying.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Your only feasible approach for today must be conservative and simple.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Pursue your career vigorously, beginning early. Expect some complex discussion with mate or family later; prepare to do whatever is possible to keep things running smoothly.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Relinquish business pursuits for quite early and relax. If your services must continue, make the best of it and apply for the maximum rewards. No secret or confidential arrangement will hold long enough to be worth the effort.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Many details cannot be attended now. Do what your can in the limited time left without fretting over what you can't do.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Suspend business and policy planning. Concentrate instead on service and chores that continue all through the day. Last minute revisions get mixed up and are worse than original plans gone awry.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Keep out of long discussion sessions while busily making the social rounds. Some people listen acutely for careless references to matters that should remain confidential.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Finish what you have to do as early as you can and then relax. Confusion is possible between you and your mate. Expenses are the most likely issue. Take an optimistic approach expect better earnings soon.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Much can be done now, and nearly all of it will never need redoing. Attend to permanent improvements as well as seasonal activities. Rest at intervals during the afternoon or evening to avoid fatigue.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Everything turns out to be helpful where it counts today, despite a tendency to get mixed up in what is left of the season's work.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): There is not much point in pursuing personal projects which demand a great deal of anybody's time. Focus your main attention on what has to be done for the big event of the season.

Commons Finance Committee to Study White Paper on Taxes

OTTAWA (CP) — Stifling any inclination to rename themselves task forces or working groups, Commons committees will, soon plunge into a new round of special investigations.

One of the busiest will be the 30-member finance committee which will begin Jan. 13 a special study of the government's white paper on tax reform.

Committee Chairman Gaston Clermont, Liberal MP for Gatineau, announced Monday that a March 1, 1970, deadline has been set for receipt of briefs from interested persons and organizations.

The Conservatives have decided to fight some of the main features of the white paper and the government expects a protracted political scrap before its proposals can clear the committee, be drafted into legislative form and then make it through the Commons.

It will be well into summer before all these moves can be completed.

A special committee will be established within the next two months to study constitutional reform, a subject already bedevilling the federal and provincial governments.

The public accounts committee has just been convened because of a long and unsuccessful behind-the-scenes Liberal attempt to remove Alfred D. Hales, Conservative MP for Wellington, as chairman.

It has a big backlog of work in studying the reports of auditor general Henderson, the auditor-general of Canada, on government gaffes in overspending.

The agriculture committee will undertake two special investigations: Dairy production and consumption; and "distress" prices for feed grains.

A special joint committee of the Commons and Senate will look at prison and parole, in particular the reports of the prises and incomes commission.

The broadcasting committee will examine the latest annual report of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

The external affairs committee will continue its study of Canada-U.S. relations.

Montreal Will Drop Draw

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal's monthly $200,000 voluntary tax draw will be discontinued following a Supreme Court of Canada ruling Monday that the draw is an illegal lottery, a city official says.

Lucien Saulnier, chairman of the city's executive committee, said contributions on hand for December and subsequent months will be returned.

The Supreme Court upheld the Quebec Court of Appeals decision that there was little skill required in answering the "skill-testing" questions.

THE BETTER HALF By Bob Barnes

"Now don't be childish and peek at your gifts, of I'll pound my head on the wall and hold my breath until I turn blue."

Diplomats Trade Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — Marcel Cadieux, under-secretary of state for external affairs, will trade jobs with A. E. Ritchie, Canada's ambassador to the United States, Prime Minister Trudeau announced Monday.

The switch, effective Jan. 31, was one of a series of changes at senior public service levels announced by Mr. Trudeau at a news conference.

Mr. Cadieux, 52, has been in his present post since 1964. A career diplomat, he joined external affairs in 1941. He was born in Montreal.

His predecessor in Washington, Mr. Ritchie, 53, has held the post since 1966, part of a diplomatic career dating back to 1941. He is a native of Andover, N.B.

In another external affairs change, Paul Tremblay, 55, a native of Chicoutimi, Que., leaves his post as Canadian ambassador to Belgium to become associate undersecretary of state for external affairs at home.

John MacDonald, 48, deputy minister of Indian affairs and northern development, succeeds Lucien Lalonde as deputy minister of public works Jan. 15. Mr. Lalonde has handed in his resignation because of poor health.

Basil Robinson, 50, deputy undersecretary of state for external affairs, will take Mr. MacDonald's old post next March 1.

OTTERS LIVE

VICTORIA (CP) — One of 29 sea otter transplanted from Amchitka Island in Alaska's Aleutian chain last summer was sighted near Victoria, 220 miles south of its new home. Provincial fish and wildlife authorities earlier feared the 20 otters died because none had been sighted since their release.

Season's Greetings

Go placidly amid the noise and haste, and remember what peace there may be in silence. As far as possible without surrender be on good terms with all persons. Speak your truth quietly and clearly; and listen to others, even the dull and ignorant; they too have their story. Avoid loud and aggressive persons, they are vexations to the spirit. If you compare yourself with others, you may become vain and bitter; for always there will be greater and lesser persons than yourself. Enjoy your achievements as well as your plans. Keep interested in your own career, however humble; it is a real possession in the changing fortunes of time. Exercise caution in your business affairs; for the world is full of trickery. But let this not blind you to what virtue there is; many persons strive for high ideals; and everywhere life is full of heroism. Be yourself. Especially, do not feign affection. Neither be cynical about love; for in the face of all aridity and disenchantment it is perennial as the grass. Take kindly the counsel of the years, gracefully surrendering the things of youth. Nurture strength of spirit to shield you in sudden misfortune. But do not distress yourself with imaginings. Many fears are born of fatigue and loneliness. Beyond a wholesome discipline, be gentle with yourself. You are a child of the universe, no less than the trees and the stars; you have a right to be here. And whether or not it is clear to you, no doubt the universe is unfolding as it should. Therefore be at peace with God whatever you conceive Him to be, and whatever your labors and aspirations, in the noisy confusion of life keep peace with your soul. With all its sham, drudgery and broken dreams, it is still a beautiful world. Be careful. Strive to be happy.

Wealthy Jews Warned Of Arab Kidnap Plots

LONDON (CP) — Some Jewish millionaires in Britain were reported Monday to have been tipped off to a kidnap-for-ransom plot by Arab guerrillas.

The Evening News says two names on the list are those of Charles Clore, clothing and department store magnate, and Lord Sieff, president of the department store firm of Marks and Spencer and vice-president of the World Jewish Congress.

A Scotland Yard spokesman declined to comment.

Lord Sieff, 80, made a life baron in 1966, is honorary president of the Zionist Federation of Great Britain and Ireland.

British Jewry has given millions of pounds to Israel in the last few years. Israeli Defence Minister Moshe Dayan addressed a dinner here Dec. 11 and raised subscriptions of £2,000,000 ($5,200,000) to aid his country's development plans.

The Evening News says the Palestinian Arab guerrilla organization Al Fatah was planning to capture the millionaires, with their wives and children, and smuggle them out of Britain.

They then would have been ferried to Middle East hideouts and held for ransom in cash plus the release of other Arabs held in Israel and other countries, the report said.

Another Marks and Spencer executive, Winnipeg-born Dr. Alec Lerner, early this year gave up his job as $50,000-a-year assistant managing director to move to Israel. His first wife was a daughter of the late Lord Marks, former head of the firm. He now is married to an Israeli actress.

Airline Disputes Officially Settled

OTTAWA (CP) — Strokes of the pen Monday ended officially two labor disputes that last week threatened a countrywide air strike.

The pens were held by officers of the Canadian Air Traffic Control Association and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and by an official of the treasury board, which represents the government in collective bargaining.

They signed contracts wrung out over months of negotiations, conciliation boards in both disputes and strike threats. The association had 96.5 support from its 1,090 members in strike last Friday, and latterly last Sunday, but an agreement was worked out and accepted by about 60 per cent of the membership.

The IBEW represents 2,100 federal electronic technicians who maintain airport and other communications and navigation equipment. Some technicians staged a wildcat walkout three months ago, although a strike vote was never taken.

By Monday an IBEW spokesman said a majority of members had voted to accept the new contract and, though votes were still coming in, the tally was running about two to one for acceptance.

Burke's Lie Claim Disputed

OTTAWA (CP) — An external affairs spokesman took issue Monday with comments attributed to Stanley Burke saying the federal government has been guilty of "lying" about the Nigeria-Biafra civil war.

Mr. Burke, former CBC television announcer who is campaigning to organize relief supplies for Biafra, was quoted as telling a Toronto church audience Sunday the federal government also misrepresented the civil war situation at one point.

The spokesman noted that on a previous occasion, after Mr. Burke had accused the government of lying about Biafra, he subsequently claimed he had been misquoted.

From accounts of his latest remarks, it appeared possible he was misquoted again, the spokesman said.

In the fall of 1968, recounted the spokesman, Ottawa provided Hercules transports for relief flights into both Biafra and Nigerian-held areas.

Night flights into Biafra were terminated because the Nigerian government withdrew permission for them, on the ground that night arms flights into Biafran-held territory had increased.

Canada then appealed for Biafran permission to conduct daylight relief flights instead.

The Hercules could not be used for distributing foodstuffs in federal Nigeria because, due to its great weight, it would have broken up available runways.

Thanks for your most generous good will. To you and yours we wish a Merry Christmas.

Santa's Big Helpers

Tonight's the night and he's almost here. Making a swift survey of his Christmas night route, Santa Claus early this morning checked out last-minute details on addresses in the Belleville area. Just outside town he met two big helpers — OPP constables Bill Willis (left) and Robert Burkholder. Then it was back to his workshop for the most important check of all — Santa's Christmas stockpile.

Thatcher Backs Trudeau On Inflation Controls

By THE CANADIAN PRES

Two Canadian provinces reacted Tuesday to the possibility of federal controls over the economy if inflation worsens.

If voluntary restraints do not work, Canadians will be faced next year with a government-imposed freeze on wages, prices and profits, said Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan.

He said in a Regina interview that he concurs with Prime Minister Trudeau's remarks Monday that inflation will be Canada's most urgent domestic problem of 1970.

Hinting that tougher federal measures to combat inflation may be in the offing, Mr. Trudeau said at a news conference that Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia are the main centres of inflation.

Ontario's provincial treasurer, Charles MacNaughton, said Tuesday his province would be a willing partner in a national program of price and wage control should the federal government consider inflation serious enough to warrant emergency action.

However, he said he did not know whether inflation had reached that point and stressed that Ontario would like to be consulted on details before any national program is implemented.

Mr. MacNaughton said he believes the next fiscal conference in February will be concerned with anti-inflation measures, including price and wage controls.

He was speaking at a news conference at which he said Ontario had done all it could within its constitutional power to control inflation.

In Edmonton, Premier Harry Strom said Mr. Trudeau's comments that Alberta was not doing its share in the fight against inflation were "unfair and unwarranted."

He said Canada's problems are the result of policies and programs instituted by the federal government, not the result of his Social Credit government's programs.

Alberta, for many years, has had a buoyant economy "that not only has contributed to our own people but also to the welfare of all Canadians," Mr. Strom said.

He added that his government is prepared to discuss any new or additional proposals made by the federal government to combat inflation.

Mr. Strom, the Conservative national leader, Robert Stanfield, and labor leaders criticized Mr. Trudeau Tuesday for saying that if unemployment rose to, say, six per cent as a result of fighting inflation it would be unfortunate but the price of not taking action would be the destruction of the economy.

Breathalyzer Tests Cut Impaired Driving

Value of the breathalyzer test as a deterrent in drinking and driving has been proved during the first 23 days of December in Belleville.

Police Chief Douglas Crosbie said this morning the number of charges for impaired driving has dropped almost by half since the test became mandatory Dec. 1.

"During the first 23 days of December last year we laid nine charges," he said. "During the same period this year we have laid only five charges. If the breathalyzer has done nothing else, it has apparently shocked people out of mixing alcohol and gasoline."

Nasser Walks Out

Arab Parley Ends in Disunity

RABAT, Morocco (CP) — Arab heads of state dispersed today after their fifth summit conference ended in disunity, boycotts and failure to reach agreement on the key agenda point—a joint military plan against Israel.

In view of a series of acrimonious exchanges, conference sources said nine Arab countries demanding immediate action against Israel were expected to make their own plans for the struggle to liberate territories occupied by Israel since the war of June, 1967.

Syria, Iraq and South Yemen boycotted Tuesday night's final public session of the three-day conference of leaders of 14 Arab states and Palestine Arab guerrilla movement.

Yemeni President Abdul Rahman Al Iryani stayed away from the final session because of his country's dispute with Saudi Arabia.

Earlier in the day Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser stalked out of the meeting in protest over what he considered inadequate financing of the war effort against Israel.

"It seems to me the conference has produced nothing at all," Nasser told the Cairo newspaper Al Ahram. "I believe the conference has not shouldered its responsibilities."

The only accomplishment reported was agreement to contribute at least $19,000,000 to the Palestine Liberation Organization, the guerrilla movement. But conference sources said Yasser Arafat, the guerrilla chief, was promised this in private meetings on the fringe of the conference, not as part of the conference itself.

The public session ended without any mention of conference resolutions or a final communique—an unprecedented departure from summit protocol. Observers said that while the four previous Arab summits had failed to achieve any tangible results in uniting the Arabs against Israel, none had ended in such obvious disarray.

King Hassan II of Morocco, the conference host, told a news conference that disagreement over whether to pursue a political settlement with Israel was "one of the reasons why we did not want to issue a communique."

After the meeting broke up, Syria issued a statement attacking Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, which already subsidize Egypt and Jordan to the extent of $252,000,000 a year, for not contributing more to the struggle against Israel.

Noses May Be Red, But-- Canadians Assured White Christmas

Troops Guard Judean Town

BETHLEHEM (Reuters) — Hundreds of Israeli troops in battledress and carrying automatic weapons surrounded this windswept Judean town today to guard against possible Arab guerrilla attempts to disrupt celebrations marking the 1,969th anniversary of the birth of Christ.

The troops, supported by mobile units and green-berreted border police, guarded all entrances into Bethlehem while other soldiers and police took up positions on roof-tops overlooking Manger Square in front of the Church of the Nativity.

Troops also patrolled the road from Jerusalem along which the three kings are believed to have followed the star into Bethlehem nearly 2,000 years ago.

Fire departments and the Red Star of David (the Israeli Red Cross) in both Jerusalem and Bethlehem have been put on standby alert.

Entry into Bethlehem, which has been decorated with festive lights, is by permit only, and civil police have set up roadblocks to check documents of entering pilgrims.

Between 10,000 and 20,000 pilgrims are expected, about half of them from abroad.

Hoteliers in the Jerusalem area as well as merchants and souvenir shops have reported a decrease in visitors compared with previous years, apparently as a result of the Middle East tension.

Today's ceremonies will begin early this afternoon with the entry into Bethlehem of the Roman Catholic Patriarch of Jerusalem accompanied by outriders on horseback. The rites will be climaxed by a midnight mass in St. Catherine Church adjoining the Church of the Nativity.

Weather Is Chilly With Snowflurries

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

White may be the traditional color across most of Canada Christmas Eve but the nose of those who venture into the mostly arctic air will be red. However, British Columbia will be warm and showery.

Snowflurries are forecast for almost every part of Canada tonight, mixed with generally low temperatures. Conditions are expected to be milder Thursday, Christmas Day, with some snow still falling here and there.

Most areas have little planned outside the usual church services and midnight masses.

But Ottawa will feature a candle-light peace vigil in tents pitched on Parliament Hill. The anti-war stunt, planned by two Canadians who worked in Vietnam, will begin today and continue until Jan. 12.

Here is the outlook across Canada:

Newfoundland—It was green with a temperature of 45 in St. John's Tuesday but the weather office promised colder air with light snow for all areas today and Christmas.

New Brunswick—Temperatures of between five below zero to 15 below are prevalent in the southern part of the province. The forecast Christmas Day is sunny and remaining cold with snowflurries. In northern areas, mainly clear but cold, the sunny chill is supposed to hold for Christmas.

Nova Scotia-Prince Edward Island—Snow is forecast for the eastern seaboard, giving Halifax a white Christmas. Other parts of both provinces are expected to get snowflurries. Forecasters say Christmas will be clear and cold.

Quebec—Most of the province had plenty of snow with temperatures for Christmas Day expected to hover near the zero mark.

Queen Receives Many Requests To Broadcast

LONDON (CP) — The Queen in her annual Christmas message to the Commonwealth notes the "great number" of people who have written to her expressing regret and concern about her decision not to broadcast this year's message in the traditional fashion.

She also looks forward to seeing the "fascinating developments" of northern Canada in the royal tour scheduled for July, 1970.

Five Die In Fire

MONTREAL (CP) — Five children ranging in age from four to 16 died early today when fire swept their one-storey wood and brick home in nearby St. Hubert.

The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dow, were taken to hospital with a 10-month-old baby they were caring for. They suffered burns and shock. Four other children escaped.

Dead are Diane, 16, Gerald, 12, Joanne, 8, Laura 5, and Kathy 4.

Survivors include Kerry, 11, Debbie, 10, Wendy, 9, and Carol, 7.

Neighbors said the family had moved into the house three weeks ago.

Cause of the blaze, brought under control by firemen after an hour, was unknown.

Ah! Memories!

Christmas has endured many changes, but its essential spirit still carries on — a fact this scene seems to symboline. Years ago Mrs. Beulah Wiggins would have waited for Santa's gifts. Yesterday she was his dancing partner when he dropped in at Hastings Manor. Meantime, some of her neighbors at the residence for the elderly can recall some of the changes in Christmas attitudes and expectations. (For details, see Page 3.)

Restaurants Add to Building Figures

Belleville's North Front Street could soon be known as Restaurant Row.

Already two new restaurant take-out services and pizzario have been opened this year on the No. 14 highway route out of the city, and now another new restaurant is to be opened by General Foods on College Hill.

The building permit for the new restaurant to be constructed on the present site of the Fountain Park has been taken out at city hall. The amount of the permit is for $100,000. The old Scantlebury house to the north of the Fountain Park will be torn down to provide parking.

Other take-out restaurant services opened on North Front Street this year were Tim Horton's Donuts, Harvey's, and Tom's pizza shop at the College Hill plaza.

Building permits for a total of $1,367,000, have been issued at city hall so far this month, according to city building inspector Grant Sickle.

Major projects in the month's building list are the new Wilson sports goods factory off Sidney Street in the northwest part of the city, and low rental row housing units being erected on North Park Street by Ontario Housing Corporation.

Other permits issued this month include the Red Barn Restaurant take - out service on the former Smith Transport property on Dundas Street, East, for $13,200, and General Foods which will build a $100,000 restaurant on College Hill on North Front Street.

DARRAH — In loving memory of a dear brother, Kyerne who passed away Dec. 25, 1957.

In silence he suffered, in patience he bore,
Till God called him home to endless rest.

Boxes and Boxes of Toys

Firefighters Bob Andrus and Al Ryan get another box of toys ready for delivery. Working in conjunction with the Christmas Exchange, the Firefighters' Association has boxed and sorted hundreds of toys to be given out to the more than 1,100 needy children in the city.

Exchange Reaches Goal

The Christmas Exchange Fund has met its goal of $1,400 — through the wholehearted support of the citizens of Belleville.

The Exchange will now be able to insure that each of the more than 300 families registered for assistance will receive it — in the form of hampers or cheques.

Even the 1,100 children in these families will be assured a happy Christmas morning, thanks to the Firefighters Association, who boxed and sorted mountains of toys.

The exchange made a public appeal for funds about a month ago, with only $500 on hand to assist a mounting number of needy families.

Response since that time, according to exchange spokesmen, has been "tremendous" and the momentum of the enthusiasm generated has been steadily increasing.

Today, the Christmas Exchange closes its registration files, with "enough in the pot to share with everyone", said consultant Mrs. Selma Bochenek.

Donations not only from the public, but from schools and service clubs helped the exchange to meet its goal.

Donations and support from the Kiwanis Club, high school groups as well as the time and volunteer labor devoted to giving something a little extra to those in need are all part of the reason for the success of the fund.

Support from the young people in the community meant a great deal, remarked Mrs. Jane Haslett, exchange director.

Students of Moira and Quinte Secondary put on Christmas programs, and donated all the proceeds to the Exchange fund.

Even the elementary schools pitched in, with each of the students contributing a toy for children less fortunate than themselves.

"We are very pleased and thankful for all the support we have received," remarked Mrs. Kay Mandeville, exchange director of the exchange.

"The citizens of this city have helped us to supply everyone in need", she added.

Two Youths Snatch Woman's Purse

A purse snatching incident has marred the Christmas season for a Donald St. woman.

Mrs. Jeanette Outingdyke lost $17 in cash and personal papers when two youths made off with her purse as she was walking east along Donald St. last night.

She was about half-way between North Front St. and North Park St. when she heard two men running behind her. They approached Mrs. Outingdyke on both sides, knocked her to the ground and snatched her purse.

Police investigation of the incident is continuing.

Prince Edward Warden Commended for Interest

PICTON — Members of Prince Edward County council closed their final meeting of 1969 last night with tributes to retiring warden, George Foster. In recalling the past year, Picton reeve, Bernard Hepburn congratulated the warden on "a wonderful year of guidance in controlling the voice of the small parliament here." Looking to the future, Reeve Hepburn emphasized its challenge concerning regional government. "Are we going to be swallowed up in this mammoth reconstruction of government?" he asked. He suggested that under regional government township boundaries might be eliminated and one municipality formed. "If we don't meet the challenge of the coming year, we are letting the ratepayers down," he reminded. He mentioned Picton's loss of an assessor's office and its subsequent location in Trenton. Reference was also made to a rumour of amalgamation between the Prince Edward County Children's Aid Society and Hastings. "If we don't keep a careful watch," cautioned Mr. Hepburn, "we might as well fold up our tents and steal quietly away."

Congratulating George Foster on his work in the past year, Bloomfield reeve Allan Anderson admitted that he had considered at one time, aspiring to follow in his footsteps. He added that an investigation into the amount of time and work involved changed his mind. Mr. Anderson called the retiring warden "a credit to Prince Edward and a credit to his township of Sophiasburg."

Each member of council offered personal congratulations to Warden Foster and to retiring reeves Robert Boyce and George Cunningham. Mr. Boyce who is retiring owing

PE Reeve Says Bounty Too Low

PICTON — Keeping the wolf from the door is becoming an increasing problem for residents of South Marysburg and Athol townships. South Marysburg reeve Allan Ralley last night told council that at least one township farmer refuses to go in his barn without carrying a gun.

Mr. Ralley revealed that in Athol and South Marysburg an estimated 18 wolves are prowling and howling this winter. Because of the low bounty, few hunters are tracking the animals. His township, to date, has paid out $1,800 in bounty money although only $800 was budgeted for this purpose. "This is a mighty big problem."

Concerned that some of the wolves could become rabid and perhaps attack a child, Mr. Ralley felt a survey of the wolf problem in other municipalities might lead to a re-evaluation of the bounty. Three years ago, council raised the bounty to $75 but did so on its own authority. The official bounty figure is still $25. Reeve Ralley pointed out that in Lennox and Addington the current bounty is $50. Several of the councillors agreed that the bounty paid in Prince Edward County seems 'low.' Concluded Mr. Ralley, "Wolves are plentiful, you can't get them from your back door."

While no resolution concerning the bounty was drawn up at last night's meeting, Picton's Deputy Reeve Donald Thompson assured Reeve Ralley that if he prepared one it would likely gain council's support.

Interest, has represented to the pressures of business Wellington village in county council for the past six years. He was Prince Edward County's Centennial warden in 1967. New reeve of Wellington is Douglas Marvin.

George Cunningham, a county councillor for 6 years, will be replaced as reeve of Ameliasburg by former deputy reeve Russell Thompson. At the close of the meeting the retiring reeves presented Warden Foster with an inscribed pewter as a service momento from county council.

Thanking his council, Warden Foster briefly summarized some noteworthy achievements of 1969. He referred to improvements at Prince Edward County fairgrounds, and to decisive steps taken toward a new county home. Mr. Foster revealed that it had been his hope when he first took office to have a prepared brief forwarded to Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, asking his opinion of regional government for Prince Edward. When the proposal was put to a vote it was, to Mr. Foster's disappointment, defeated.

While Prince Edward County's warden is still unnamed, reeve of Hillier, Gordon Lloyd seems to be the leading contender for the office.

Christmas for Those at Manor Recalls Different Days

Memory is an evergreen Christmas gift.

Maybe it's the tradition of reunion that makes memories a recurring, inevitable bright spot of the holiday. Friends and families meet again, common experiences are revived.

Christmas always has been that way. In fact, it's one of the few things about the holiday that hasn't changed — if memory serves some Quinte senior citizens correctly.

Today they're residents of Hastings Manor, the Belleville-area home for the elderly. And tomorrow they celebrate Christmas — a holiday that has been transformed in their life spans.

Such has been the pace of change it's difficult at Christmas 1969 to believe that once there was a yuletide that wasn't overflowing with an abundance of goods; living rooms without lavishly - decorated Christmas trees; a Christmas without children laden with a surplus of toys and goodies.

Yet, such was Christmas back in an age recollected by few — the rural past of the Quinte district.

Edward Hogle is going on 87. His childhood is rooted in Sidney township.

"When I was a boy we got a few candies and oranges," he recalls. "That would be our Christmas present."

"There were no decorations then." "Christmas trees? Sometimes they had them. I don't recall having them at home."

Mrs. Nora Prest, 89, agrees. She recalls Christmases in Madoc village: "There was a time when I was a youngster when all we got was in our stockings — oranges, striped candies."

Later there were other gifts, chiefly books — but no extravagant spending. She shared Christmas with four other sisters.

"I didn't believe when I was a child that Santa Claus ever brought any more than 50 cents worth to any of us. The gifts to every one of us girls could have been handled inside two dollars."

A major event of the holiday was the Sunday school entertainment on Christmas Eve in the church hall.

"That was the first time I ever saw a Christmas tree — at the Sunday School entertainment — and I thought it was the most marvellous thing I ever saw in my life."

It was a hardy, rigorous time. The pioneers were still fresh in memory.

George Ketcheson, an active 82, says he can remember when the land was being broken near Eldorado in Madoc township.

He readily agrees with his fellow residents that Christmas has been transformed, its pace growing faster with the years.

"There wasn't the big rush then. It was all horses and sleighs at Christmas and you didn't travel any great distance."

"Of course, it was all farming then. You had so many chores to do before you went out — and so many to do when you came home."

Christmas still had active community roots.

For years, one of the highlights of his early Christmases was the tea - meeting — the rural neighborhood getting together for a community Christmas - night meal in the local church hall.

"You didn't always have turkey — people didn't raise them as much then. But you could have pork, or beef stewed up. It was a good meal either way."

"And they used .o combine the tea - meeting sometimes with a Christmas tree for youngsters. Then they'd have a play or something like that."

One thing they all agree on—Christmas was simpler then. Today, commercialism seems a dominant feature.

"They sang carols about Christmas in those days. Now it seems they sing mostly about Santa Claus," says Mr. Hogle.

"It was simpler," says Mrs. Prest. "But then, we were more satisfied with the simple things of life."

"You wouldn't see any great hubbub in the country," agreed Mrs. Bertha Weese. "Today, cars are in a hurry."

However, one basic fact of Christmas life still seems unchanged — the family presence.

GEO. KETCHESON

ED HOGLE

Christmas was a great time for the family, recall these senior citizens.

This Christmas Eve there is still that one contribution to Christmas — the members of hundreds of Quinte families trekking home for yuletide.

There'll be gifts and meals and good times to share—and memories.

Carol Singers Raise $50

Despite the below - zero temperatures yesterday, a group of Belleville young people raised approximately $50 carol singing which will be donated to area retarded children.

Approximately 30 youths, members of the Belleville Theatre Guild's youth drama organization wandered around the downtown section of the city last night, expressing Christmas spirit in well-known vocal strains.

Gail McDermott, who organized the event, told The Intelligencer that the large group of vocalists sang outside the stores in the downtown section.

"It took a lot of nerve with the kids down there and everything," she said, "And it was so cold."

The young people received their first contribution when they started harmonizing outside the Belleville City Police station.

From then on contributions of small change exemplified the spirit of Christmas giving.

Seat Belt Use Again Advocated

PICTON (Staff) — Seat belt safety is again being stressed in the weekly bulletin from the Ontario Provincial Police.

In support of that belief the report states: "It is an established fact that seat belts reduce the chance of death or serious injury to occupants of a car in the event of a collision."

Extensive research is supported by the fact that many people when wearing seat belts either survived in serious collisions or escaped serious injury.

DEATHS

GARROW, John Willis — of 51 Canniffon Road on Wednesday morning, Dec. 24, 1969 at the Belleville General Hospital, in his 71st year. Son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Garrow. Beloved husband of the late Ethel Rowley. Dear father of George, David Garrow, Belleville, Mrs. Harold (Helen Jean) Curwain, Belleville. ## The Nights Before Christmas

In Belleville this year the nights before Christmas were alive with seasonal spirit for the young — in great part due to Santa's Village organized by Bellevillian Stu Meeks. The crowd of moppets increased as Christmas neared, and last night was no exception. A steady stream of small fry and parents headed towards the big attraction despite bitter cold throughout the evening.

Cold Weather to Continue

Button up your overcoat — we're due for more cold weather!

That's the weatherman's forecast for Christmas day and also for the balance of the week.

Tonight — Christmas Eve— the temperature is expected to drop to a chilly 10 below zero — the coldest reading of the season for the immediate Quinte area. Friday will continue cold, while Saturday will see slightly milder temperatures with overcast and snow predicted for Sunday.

Last night's official temperature at Trenton air station was six below but further north at Killaloe in Renfrew county the mercury dropped to minus 29 degrees at eight this morning — the coldest reading in the province.

But cold weather for the Christmas season is not exactly new with last year's yuletide being possibly one of the coldest on record.

Christmas day, 1968 saw the mercury dip to 13 below, while on Boxing Day it went down to minus 16. The year 1935 saw the coldest Christmas Eve on record at 18 below.

But for those with short memories, last year's Christmas cold snap actually continued for a week or more. Night time temperatures dropped to zero or lower every night for two weeks with the New Year's temperature being 10 below zero.

Time for Canada to Act on Arctic Sovereignty

Kingston Whig-Standard

In September of 1880, Great Britain transferred her rights of Arctic sovereignty to Canada. Although it was 1903 before Canada took any steps to assert that sovereignty, the government had long been interested in the Arctic regions. Navigation routes were explored by the Marine Department in the years 1904-5-6, using such ships as the Neptune and HMS Alert, borrowed from the Admiralty. In 1904 the Neptune cruised up the west coast of Greenland to Cape Herschell on Ellesmere Island. Here the explorers took possession by hoisting the flag and proclaiming the sovereignty of King Edward VII in right of Canada. They also built a cairn and deposited a written proclamation.

From early days the whole "Arctic archipelago from the tip of Ellesmere Island (the last point of land, beyond which lies ice to the North Pole) to the Beothia and Melville Peninsulas on the mainland, there have been numerous explorations by British and Canadian explorers, many of them official parties. There is no doubt at all, judging from the history of these journeys into the far north, that Canada can and should make it clear in the world that the sovereignty of the whole area is indisputably hers.

An all-party committee of the Commons has just urged the Government to declare without further delay precisely this sovereignty. The committee made it clear that Canada should have moved much more swiftly to claim all these waters and islands. The recent American forays into the Canadian Arctic, and the unsolicited assumption by the United States that her ships are there by right, and that she intends to use the waters of the Northwest Passage to suit herself, should be incentive enough.

There is no need for international conferences on the subject. History shows clearly enough that the whole area has been formally brought under British and then Canadian sovereignty. All that remains is to make the fact clear and formal before the whole world.

* * *

Montreal Star

The Commons Committee on Indian Affairs and Northern Development has been blessed with some of the yeastier backbenchers in the House. Such Liberal members as Paul St. Pierre and Ian Watson, its chairman, have shown a readiness to speak their minds without too much concern for the tender sensibilities of the government.

Ever since the U.S. tanker Manhattan began its voyage through the northwest passage last fall, the members have made no secret of their concern over the threat the voyage posed to Canadian sovereignty in the Arctic waters and their impatience with the slowness of government action to deal with it. They dramatized their concern by flying to the Arctic last September to greet the Manhattan with the message: "Welcome to Canadian waters."

In light of that history, the committee's report on the Arctic waters, is quite in character. It is a blunt demand that the federal government should declare without delay that vessels passing through the Arctic are subject to the sovereign control and regulation of Canada.

While it would obviously be wrong for Mr. Trudeau to stop seeking international sanction for Canada's position in the Arctic, it is just as clear that the government cannot wait for a world-wide consensus to take action. Very soon it must establish firm standards of performance for ships which might want to use the northwest passage. It will have to take immediate decisions to provide the icebreakers, aircraft and bases which will be the instruments of Canadian control.

Christmas 1969

What do man's first steps on the moon mean but that in such an accomplishment he is closer to the secret of the universe, and hence nearer to the mystery of creation itself.

The precise origins of life may elude science, but in journeying to the lunar surface man has touched profound technical truths which in turn help his understanding of the cosmos if not himself. We live on a planet (the moon flight has made us more aware of the fact we are just that, a speck in the universe) in which man is still the disturbing element.

What for example does the lamentable drug cult of some of our contemporary youth mean but a loss of purpose, ambition, determination and self-respect. Like any aberration it involves only a minority, but a substantial one that is worrisome nonetheless.

In Metro Toronto for example there are an estimated 6,000 to 8,000 habitual users of amphetamines ("speed" and all the rest of them). Medical men, some breaking down themselves under the strain of watching kids destroy themselves, estimate no more than 2,000 of these will be alive in five years' time. In Renfrew of all places drug use is said to have increased five-fold; similar reports come from other small communities.

Between these two extremes then — of man the trained explorer and human being in outer space (and make no mistake, whatever our problems on earth, the Apollo ventures were great achievements) and of some elements of our youth in tragic decline, is a vast gulf.

"Alienation" is the fashionable word for people out of tune with themselves and their fellows, for the so-called "generation gap." It is not new, but it is more accentuated today by modern communications which tune in today's youngster instantly to new ideas and pressures. Youth itself is more aware, more socially conscious.

Yet where is all this leading? More than a million young Americans are said to have dropped out of what they term the "plastic society." Materialism, family friction, lack of love and concern of parents and as between parents and children, these are among the symptoms.

In seeking some other lifestyle, to use a modern term, thousands of youngsters have discovered their own concepts of love and concern are very fragile indeed. Yorkville, the Company of Young Canadians — or some of its members at least — and the hippie counterpart, the Be set (the pathetic youngsters who congregate in such unlikely spots as Kabul, Katmandu and resorts from Mexico to North Africa) have in their midst kids who in their search for something other than The Man in the Grey Flannel Suit image have not really found themselves.

In their travels there may be something heroic for in travel there is the kind of broadening of the mind that cannot be found with drugs or that admiration stops there.

An odd thing in this regard is the comparison with the United States Peace Corps. The first of such aid organizations, the Peace Corps apparently has been free of the exasperating radicalism and hippie overtones that have marked the performance for example of the Company of Young Canadians. Little is heard of the Peace Corps these days, presumably its representatives are still at work helping to raise the standard of living of underdeveloped nations.

Canadians, adults and youth alike, somehow must regain their manhood. Adults must have done with hypocrisy and the excess of materialism which has turned off so many of their offspring. The latter for their part must improve their corner of society; happily, many are doing so. Together these two opposites may find common cause and mutual respect — for as John Donne said, we are involved in mankind." Together they may put human beings along the path of true peace on earth and goodwill toward men.

CYC Needs To Make New Start.

Ottawa Journal

The irresponsible, divided and wrangling weekend meeting of the council of the Company of Young Canadians has shown to Canadians — young and old — that this body in its present form should be scrapped. The worthy idea and ideal for which the Company was set up will not be attained by this group. The longer it is kept alive by the Government, under trusteeship or not, the more damage will be done to the object of its creation. End it, before Parliament adjourns, and with a new year start anew in wisdom and good heart.

Consumer Credit Under Scrutiny

Grasby La Voix de l'Est:

Consumer credit plays such an important role in Canadian life that the federal government should follow up as quickly as possible the recommendations of the Consumer Council of Canada.

This organization is asking for better regulation and stricter control of credit, legislation generally coherent and the appointment of specialists capable of counselling the state and overseeing the application of the law. Consumer steps (would be) to correct all forms of abuse.

Consumer credit today has reached more than $8,324,000,000 compared with $835,000,000 20 years ago. . . .

Canada thus holds second rank in this field among the nations of the free world. And it is perhaps the country where regulation of credit is the least adequate.

It is true that Ottawa is preparing to introduce in the Commons a bill on this subject, but, in our view, it cannot place too much importance on the necessity of better protecting the consumer against all the abuses to which he is victim. Credit is necessary, but control is even more necessary.

Japanese Cars Compete With U.K. and Germany

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

Setting aside the imports from the United States, which look exactly like the cars made in Canada, the British have traditionally been the leading suppliers of imported automobiles for the Canadian market.

The Volkswagen in recent years has been sold in Canada in greater numbers than any one British make, but the total of sales of the diverse cars offered by the British industry has left German imports in second place.

Look who's coming up fast in the race, from away back in the field. Latest figures show that in the first 10 months of this year 34,685 new British cars were sold in Canada compared with 32,698 from Japan. Sales of the Volkswagens were 29,338 in the same period.

British Leyland, the biggest British manufacturer, has been plagued this year by wildcat strikes at the rate of one a week. Vauxhall, the British firm owned by General Motors, had its exports disrupted through April, May and June by dock strikes at Liverpool.

We doubt that the Japanese have any secret weapon in trade competition. They just keep on working.

This advantage may soon disappear, however; the usually docile Japanese worker is seeking higher wages.

A recent comparison of wage rates in principal cities of the world shows that the average wage for a construction worker in Tokyo is $41.50 a week, compared with $64.80 in London, England; $85 in Dusseldorf, West Germany; $170.65 in Montreal.

Educational Problems in B.C.

Vancouver Sun

British Columbia cannot afford any reduction in the quality of education offered its children. The quality, the prime factor of education, is what has been hit in two of the province's large school districts that were forced to slash their budgets last spring because of the provincial government's new financing formula.

A special commission of the B.C. Teachers' Federation has studied the results at Powell River and Kitimat where referendums to maintain services were forced upon the local boards and defeated by the taxpayers, with the result that the school budgets had to be slashed.

"The budget - cutting simply reduced the quality of services offered in what had been two of the prosperous districts of B.C.," said one of the investigating teachers. There was no evidence that the budget-cutting hit "fat components of the school system," said another.

Fewer teachers despite increased enrolment, fewer teacher aides, drastic cuts in teacher and student supplies and the elimination of special remedial classes have been the result of Victoria's method of "equalization" of educational opportunities across the province.

Here is hard evidence — if more were needed — that the provincial formula equalizes impoverishment. It penalizes the progressive school boards, the ones we should be encouraging, and can only have the result of forcing every school board in B.C. to provide bare bones schooling, at the level of the little red schoolhouse we have learned to abhor.

The Lennon 'Peace' Campaign

Peterborough Examiner

John and Yoko Lennon, the self-styled peace propagandists of the pop-rock set, have been in Toronto to launch their campaign of "peace persuasions". After their well-publicized 'bed in for peace' in Montreal earlier this year, they now plan to market their slogan "War is Over! If you want it."

In the best Madison Avenue advertising tradition, John and Yoko will proclaim the advantages of their product via bill boards, handbills, posters and all the mass news media. As they told his admirers last June, 'plug peace — it's merchandise. You've got to outsell the businessmen . . . Make people aware there is an alternative to war.'

It all sounds very charming. John and Yoko will undoubtedly offer multi renditions of their 'give peace a chance' song, wear and send an extravagant array of flowers and be interviewed over and over again.

Unfortunately peace or love or even hate, for that matter, are not 'products' which can be advertised, merchandised, equately dealt with by the same techniques which work so well in selling soap.

Propaganda and mass advertising destroy social institutions and replace them with economic institutions which are incapable of giving expression to the ideal of public or personal peace.

The Lennon campaign has nothing to do with peace; it has only to do with the pursuit of fads and deception. Their campaign contributes nothing to the peace which we ostensibly celebrate each December 25.

Focus on Snowmobiles

Ottawa Journal

Last winter Ontario recorded 27 fatalities involving snowmobiles; 15 of the deaths occurred on highways. The toll is expected to rise this season, with an estimated 100,000 of these motorized sleds operating in the province. Information from people who die like the noisy little machines have already begun, and it is nowhere more vocal than in the Ottawa and Seaway Valleys.

Although snowmobiles are prohibited from operating on highways, they can be run on local roads and streets unless forbidden by municipal bylaw. Homeowners in increasing numbers are complaining to municipal and provincial governments that not only is the noise of the machines nerve-shattering, but that hedges, small trees and fences have been damaged by snowmobilers.

Perth council has already passed a bylaw banning the machines from town roadways, sidewalks and parks. The Carleton Place Canadian reports that a similar bylaw will be introduced at town council soon. A like move is being considered in Arnprior. Other Valley papers including the Winchester Press, Glengarry News and Renfrew Mercury have in recent weeks carried reports of accidents involving the machines and a growing number of complaints from homeowners.

Stanfield Is Critical

PM Said 'Cold-blooded', Sharp 'Callous'

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield Tuesday blasted the government for its alleged lack of leadership in the Nigerian-Biafra conflict and for its "deliberate creation of unemployment" in the war on inflation.

Mr. Stanfield issued two separate, and highly critical, statements prior to calling a press conference in which he accused Prime Minister Trudeau of being "pretty cold-blooded" in talking of increased unemployment, and External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp in being "cold and callous" in talking about the destruction of a Canadien plane in Biafra.

The Conservative leader also covered other areas, ranging from the current Canadian visit to Beatle John Lennon to the state of national unity.

He said in a statement that it is "incredible" for a government concerned with a "just society" to rely on one of the oldest, crudest and cruelest economic policies—"the deliberate creation of unemployment to prevent increases in wages and prices."

And it was "feeble" of the prime minister to blame the Ontario government for not doing enough in the war on inflation.

"We can expect him in return to this theme of blaming Ontario during the winter, as unemployment across the country continues to increase."

It was meaningless of Mr. Trudeau to talk about voluntary restraint when he refused to say what the restraints should be.

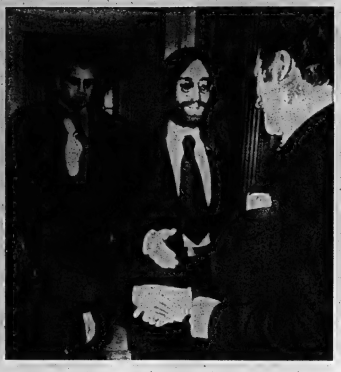
Mr. Stanfield called on the government to give "clear and unmistakeable" guidance.

"The government must stop fobbing this business off on the prices and incomes commission and tell the country where it stands. Threatening us all vaguely with sterner measures is simply irresponsible."

The governments should also "develop and announce an adequate set of compensating measures to encourage the employment of those thrown out of work unnecessarily by this government's clumsy and inhumane measures."

Total reliance on broad fiscal and monetary measures is bound to produce inhumane results, he said.

On the Nigeria-Biafra conflict, Mr. Stanfield said it is "painfully clear" that the government is not giving leadership.



"Mr. Sharp's cold and callous response to the destruction of a Canadair plane the other day is but another indication of the government's dedication to detachment." Mr. Stanfield said he was told the Canadian government did not protest the destruction of the Canadian plane.

He said Mr. Sharp's comment almost suggests that the Canadian government feels that no flights are better than night flights of relief supplies into Biafra.

On other questions, Mr. Stanfield says he believes the sense of unity in the country has deteriorated over the last year. But while he is concerned, he is not alarmed.

"We have to get away from this policy of confrontation and must think in terms of reconciliation."

About conversations earlier in the day between John Lennon and the prime minister, Mr. Stanfield said he thought it was "excellent" that Mr. Trudeau should try to understand various points of view. While the Conservative leader didn't think Mr. Lennon "has all the answers at his fingertips in regard to world peace," he said he would be glad to meet with the Beatle.

Huge Firms Under Study By U.S. Trust-busters

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government trust-busters have initiated a study to determine what, if anything, should be done about the entrenched economic power of industrial giants.

Confirming this in an interview, Assistant Attorney-General Richard W. McLaren emphasized that officials are proceeding cautiously.

"After all, this is a very difficult and delicate situation," McLaren said. "If you're going to break up companies, you've got to consider the effect on the labor force, the national defence and other factors.

"It's just not something you rush into."

An anti-trust force named by former president Johnson recommended an attack on "oligopolies"—market situations dominated by a few large entrenched firms—last year.

But McLaren, chief of the justice department's anti-trust division, saw more of a threat in merger - minded conglomerate corporations that were rapidly swallowing up other companies.

He filed lawsuits challenging several huge combines, and the merger pace slowed. But he acknowledged other influences, including the stock market situation and threatened congressional action, affected the movement.

Reviewing the government complaints against conglomerates, McLaren said none was challenged simply because it was a conglomerate-type merger. "We only attacked those we felt were anti-competitive under existing law," he said.

The anti-trust chief suggested this policy of attacking big company mergers and acquisitions of leading firms in a particular market "will result in deconcentration" of economic power.

For instance, he said, the rapidly growing conglomerates might be the answer to the oligopoly problem and forestall any necessity of government action.

"I can see some of these rough, tough companies getting into some of the older industries and really giving them competition," he said.

Reviewing anti-trust activity during the last year, McLaren listed two major accomplishments: "We stopped the worst of the big anti-competitive merger trend, and we also forced the business community to take a hard look at the whole business of reciprocity."

Reciprocity is the practice whereby a company favors its customers with purchases, and one of McLaren's biggest lawsuits challenged the U.S. Steel Corp. on that ground.

U.S. Steel quickly settled the dispute, but McLaren said the anti-trust division has made "only a start in the reciprocity area."

"I still think it's important," he added.

Two Who Were in Vietnam To Tent on Parliament Hill

OTTAWA (CP) — Two Canadians who have worked in South Vietnam will begin a candlelight vigil Christmas Eve in tents pitched near Parliament Hill.

The vigil is planned to continue at least until Parliament resumes after its Christmas recess Jan. 12. Its life support system will be provided by three different political groups in Ottawa and it will get under way following a Christmas Eve march through downtown Ottawa led by an ecumenical, anti-war panel of clergymen.

The action is being taken by the two leaders of Enough, described by them at a news conference Tuesday as "a group of Canadians of all political opinions who have simply had enough."

The two are Claire Culhane, 51, of Montreal, a former administrative assistant at the Canadian tuberculosis hospital at Quang Ngai, South Vietnam, and Michael Rubbo, 30, also of Montreal, a National Film Board director who spent two months earlier this year making a film in Saigon.

Their appeal is for as many telegrams as possible to Prime Minister Trudeau stating simply: "Enough."

Mr. Rubbo explained the feeling that Canada has provided the U.S. with enough diplomatic support for its action in Vietnam, has contributed enough by way of arms and now should declare its opposition to the war.

Wishart Concerned About Closed Court

TORONTO (CP) — Attorney-General Arthur Wishart said Tuesday night he will investigate a case involving an Oakville millionaire who was tried in a closed family court last week.

Crown Attorney Douglas Latimer of Halton County said Tuesday the decision to hold the hearing in family court in Milton, Ont., was taken after consultation with Judge Kenneth Langdon and defence counsel Ernest Hennessey. There was no publicity and the judge's ruling was learned only Tuesday.

George Clinton Jones Duke, 63, president of Duke Lawn Equipment Ltd., pleaded guilty to a charge of threatening Elizabeth Citron of Waterdown, Ont. He was ordered to post a $2,000 bond, keep the peace for one year and to stay way from Mrs. Citron.

Mr. Wishart, in a telephone interview from his Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., home, said:

"Our courts are public and unless there is a good reason, all cases should be heard in open court.
